MEN CURED FREE.

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness, such as impotency, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions, premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The Doctor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt giving the various ingredients to be used so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the receipt free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L.W. Knapp, M.D. 1011 Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer, and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

Manufactured under the patents of Bell, Tainter, Edison and Macdonald. Our establishment is headquarters of the world for Talking Machines and Talking Machine Supplies. Write for catalogue.

VARCOE'S SLAYER DEAD

James McIntyre Died in Toronto Saturday Last.

REFUSED TO BE PROBED.

Wound Made by the Policeman's Bullet Induces Peritonitis.

He Died Without Disclosing His Identity—A Quanty of Stolen Property Found in His Possession—A Family Black Sheep.

Toronto, Nov. 11.—McIntosh, the murderer of J E Varcoe, is himself dead, having succumbed at the General Hospital this morning at four o'clock. The wound made by the policeman's bullet induced paritonitis. There is a general feeling that this turn of affairs has simply taken the job out of the hangman's hands, as there has seldom been a more cruel murder or a clearer case than the present.

Up to the present no news relating to the burglar's identity has been received. When the doctors wished to operate on him yesterday he resisted violently.

The affair has resulted in a ridiculously undignified squabble over the inquest which is being held by Corner Arthur Jukes Johnson at the General Hospital this afternoon. Dr Greig, who attended the dead man at the time of the shooting and who was expected to take the inquest, has been elbowed out and has not even been asked to participate in the post-mortem examination. The General Hossital authorities appear to be mixed up in the mess, and this morning actually refused to say whether McIntosh was dead or not.

A despatch from Ottawa says: "The gold badge of the Ottawa Rough Riders which was found in possession of one of the murderers evidently belongs to Mr Fred Carling, as he had such a badge stolen on the night that the safe was blown. On that night Mr Fred C Chittick saw two men standing near the brewery a few minutes before the robbery took place. Mr Chittick got a good view of one of the men, and he thinks he can identify him. Messrs Carling and Chittick are going to Toronto to-night with the Rough Riders, and Chief Powell will have them go to police headquarters to see if they can identify either of the prisoners."

Inspector Stark has received from J F Carling of Ottawa, son of Hon John Carling, a letter corroborating the despatch concerning the Rough Riders badge and a lady's gold watch and chain. These formed part of the contents of the safe in the Carling Brewing Company's branch office, blown to pieces about two weeks ago.

Chief of Police Baillie of Kingston, has also sent a despatch to the Detective Department here asking if an envelope addressed to the Bajus Brewing Company, Kingston, and a silver dollar with a monogram on one side had been found on either of the prisoners. A reply was sent that such articles had been found in McIntosh's pocket.

This makes it almost a certainty that these men were concerned in the numerous safe-blowing cases in Ottawa, Kingston, Montreal and other eastern points. Inspector Stark is much gratified that the burglars were brought up so sharply here, as it has an undoubted influence in keeping others of this class away from Toronto.

McIntosh died without disclosing his identity. When near his end he showed signs of a willingness to divulge his right name and address, but a sudden change came over his mind, and and he exclaimed:

"No, it's information you're after!" He inquired after a certain priest who lives Montreal. His last words were:

"It's a brute," referring to the bullet wound in himself.

FIGHTING FOR OPEN DOOR.

Object Behind Samoan Treaty—Great Epoch Making Expected to Close the Century.

New York, Nov. 11.—Special—The Post's London correspondent, cabling to-day, says:—Those who have opportunities of learning the minds of the British Ministers have been quietly and sagely smiling this week over what seems to them the petty, huckstering spirit in which the Samoan deal has been treated in British continental and section of the American press.

A diplomat of wide experience, whose innate radicalism has in the past brought him into open conflict with statesmen of Salisbury's political faith was asked if he thought England came badly out of the Samoan deal?

"Well," he replied, "I have not thought much of that, and it really matters very little. When we made ourselves impregnable in Fiji, Samoa lost direct concern for us. We stayed on there, partly out of sentimental reasons, for which, if you like, you may say that Robert Louis Stevenson's splendid sympathy was in a measure responsible, but chiefly because we felt that by staying there we could give effective help to our greatest friend, the United States, when inevitable reaction came of the tripartite bungle. We have now Secured That End.

so out we go, and on terms which on the whole are fair to England, and what in the present Imperialistic state of mind of the people of the Empire is far more important, on terms commendable to our Australasian partners. But the Samoan deal, is after all, a mere bagatelle. What really matters is the stupendous fact which lies behind it, and of which it is the first outward and visible sign."

"Are you thinking of South Africa and Delagoa Bay?"

"Not at all," he replied. "We settled the South African question, as far as European diplomacy is concerned, long before the Samoan question became acute and as for Delagoa Bay! that bargain with Germany and Portugal was struck and committed to paper last summer. The world will know the terms of that bargain when it suits Anglo-German diplomacy and not a moment before. Salisbury and Von Buelow are not the type of statesmen who want to throw a fresh apple of discord into the apple of Europe at a moment like this. For all practical purposes Delagoa Bay is England's and will remain so. No, it is not in South Africa you must seek an explanation of the Samoan deal, but in the far east, and in those two wonderful words, 'Open door.'"

DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE LAMENTS.

London, Nov. 11.—At a banquet in the city of London, yesterday the Duke of Cambridge, speaking on the war, said: "We ought never to have allowed ourselves to be in the position in which the outbreak of war found us. I could cry over the valuable lifes which might have been spared had we been better prepared."

It is said General Buller never expected to commence the campaign before Christmas, and it now looks as though this will be the case. Certainly no artillery can reach Durban before November 14, and, without additional guns, an advance from Estcourt would be impossible.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50 he returned to his native town just to see how the old place looked. He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked in and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank!" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate since you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heerd so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be pretty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

BRITAIN APPRECIATES IT.

Canada's Offer of a Second Regiment—The Full Reply.

Ottawa, Nov. 11.—In declining to accept a second Canadian contingent, Hon. Jo. Chamberlain cabled to Lord Minto as follows:—

"Your Ministers' generous offer to send without delay a second contingent for service in South Africa has received the attentive consideration of the Secretary of State for War and his military advisers, but they regret that under existing circumstances they are unable to accept it. The offer, will, however, be borne in mind and Her Majesty's Government will have no hesitation in availing themselves of it should events make it desirable to do so. Her Majesty's Government attach great importance to this fresh proof of Canadian sympathy and good-will, and desire to express their grateful appreciation of it."

This cablegram from Mr. Chamberlain to Lord Minto also chills the warlike spirit of Lieut Col. Domville. "Please inform Lieut.-Col. Domville that Her Majesty's Government appreciates his kind offer to raise a cavalry regiment for service in South Africa, but do not propose to avail themselves of it."

"The Brightest Jewel."

London, Nov. 11.—Lord Aberdeen, speaking at Scarborough, referred to Canada as the "brightest jewel in the British crown, destined to take a still higher part in the Imperial Government," and prophesied an increase in the brotherhood, not only between Canada and Great Britain, but between Canada and the United States.

Attempt Upon a Bank.

Ottawa, Nov. 10.—About one o'clock this morning an attempt was made to rob the Ottawa Bank on Wellington street. The burglar in prying open a window broke a pane of glass, and in this way some of the clerks who were in the building were able to give the alarm. The policemen were soon on the spot, but no trace of the burglar could be found.

PRESTON R. MANSFIELD, Treasurer Abbott M'f'g Co., Dedham, Mass.
HON. GEO. D. ALDEN, Boston, Mass.
E. A. SMITH, Capitalist, Lowell, Mass.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.
Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

A new comedy called "Wheels Within Wheels" is expected to go the rounds.

Robert Drouet will play John Storm in "The Christian" with Miss Allen next season.

"Annie Rooney" is undergoing a revival in Paris to the temporary eclipsing of Dreyfus.

Richard Mansfield is reputed to have taken out a life insurance policy for $100,000 recently.

David Belasco has completed an original play which will be produced early in the season with a specially selected company.

An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth" will be the feature of Frederick Warde's repertory next season.

It is unofficially announced that Rudyard Kipling is to write the fairy play to be produced at the London Lyceum next season.

Some German statistician has discovered that stage dancing is conducive to longevity. Taglioni lived to be 80 and Fanny Elssler to be 74.

Rose Coghlan has been re-engaged for her original role of "Mlle. Fifi" for next season, the piece to open its tour in August in Chicago.

Emma Calve's much talked of monument represents her as Ophelia, and the sculptor has promised to exhibit it at the Paris exposition.

Minnie Seligman will appear in the vaudeville houses in a one act play called "Therese," which has been done in Europe by Sarah Bernhardt.

In a play called "Wine, Women and Song," recently produced at the Princess theater, London, two demimondanes, armed with butchers' knives, fight to the death in a beautiful setting profusely decorated with flowers.

George Bernard Shaw submitted his new play, "Cæsar and Cleopatra," to Richard Mansfield, but as Shaw had required a 56-year-old baldheaded Cæsar to make love to a 16-year-old Cleopatra the manuscript was returned.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

Shopgirl's Hard Lot.

Persons complain that shopgirls do not jump actively to wait upon them when they enter a store. Why not? The other day I saw a girl approach a respectably dressed woman of middle age—that's 25—and heard her ask, over the counter, "What would you like ma'am?"

To this polite attention I was shocked to hear the woman reply: "You shut up! Don't you talk to me! I can ask for what I want, and I don't want any impudence from clerks!"

A few rebuffs from such creatures are quite enough to cool the ardor of any shopgirl.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get mixed up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my derndest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

POLITICAL QUIPS.

The presidential bees have gathered very little honey thus far in the campaign.—Los Angeles Express.

It is coming to pass in this country that it is almost libelous for a newspaper to call a man a politician. It is the imputation that he is guilty of things criminal.—Binghamton Herald.

If Princeton wants a professor of politics in its professor of politics, she will not fuss around with Grover Cleveland, but go straight to Dick Croker or Matt Quay.—

THE BIBLE OF THE BODY.

Next in importance to a Bible in the house is a thoroughly reliable and easily understood doctor book. With such a book for ready reference, parents can often cure the ordinary family ailments without the expense of consulting a local physician.

The most complete, the simplest and best illustrated book of the kind is the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, written by that famous and successful Buffalo, N. Y., physician, Dr. R. V. Pierce, who has been many years and is to day treating and curing the afflicted in all parts of the earth. This book has been termed the "Bible of the Body," because it is to the body or physical man what the Bible is to the soul or spiritual man, shedding light and revealing truth. It tells people in every day language how diseases are developed, what the symptoms are and how they can be cured. Its pictures show the appearance of all organs, muscles, and nerves of men and women. It treats upon every phase and complication of disease. The information in this book has been gathered by Dr. Pierce in his world-wide practice, and is founded upon actual experience—not upon theory. More than 1,200,000 American homes contain copies of this book. Formerly it sold for $1.50 a copy. Now it is free. Send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., to pay the cost of customs and mailing only, and he will send you a copy of this 1008-page doctor book, bound in paper-covers. If you prefer a cloth bound copy, send 50 stamps.

Mrs R. P. Monfort, of Lebanon, Warren Co., Ohio, writes: "I drop you a line to let you know I have received the Medical Adviser. I think it a great prize to get so fine a book for so small a sum. A crisp new five dollar bill could not tempt me to part with it, so you see I am wonderfully pleased over it. My husband said to me, 'That book is worth five dollars to you.'"

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 60 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Moore, Treas., after securing the Jim. Hill claim, adjoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. H. Stowell reports on this cropping $16 to gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Tom Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorized me to place a small amount of this stock at 3 cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Hill are less than 800 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.00 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3 cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

JAMES WEBSTER'S DEATH.

Thrown From a Load of Hay and Instantly Killed.

James Webster, an Otonabee farmer, living on lot 23, concession 9, of that township, met death suddenly yesterday morning. Mr Webster was on his way to town with a load of hay, and when coming down Dillon's hill, a short distance from his home, it is supposed that something in connection with the harness gave way, causing the horses to start down the hill on a run.

It is thought that Mr Webster in his attempt to hold the unmanageable animals, was pulled down upon the whiffletrees, between the load of hay and the horses' feet.

The load of hay then upset, throwing Mr Webster's brother, John, heavily to the ground. The rack also went off the wagon with the hay.

The horses continued to run and kick, whilst the unfortunate man was hanging on the whiffletrees, and as a result he received injuries of so fatal a nature that he expired before medical aid arrived. His head in particular was horribly cut and bruised.

A distance of over a hundred yards was covered in this manner before Mr Webster fell from the whiffletrees. The horses ran for two miles, being caught at Graham Weir's gate.

Mr Webster was a highly respected farmer of Otonabee and was just in the prime of life. He was twice married, and besides a wife leaves a large family of daughters to mourn his untimely demise.

The brothers of the deceased are William, of Norwood; Thomas, of South Dummer; and John, of Otonabee. The sisters are Mrs James Petrie, Otonabee; Mrs Samuel Cook, of the Northwest; Mrs Thomas Hendren, of Lakefield; Mrs James Cummings, of Regina; Mrs S McFee, of Iowa, and Mrs Wm Gratton, of Otonabee.

The funeral will take place from the family residence at 1.30 to-morrow afternoon and proceed to the Little Lake Cemetery.

A Dead Bargain.

A five volume set of the great work, "The Canadian Album; Men of Canada," bound in Seal Grain Leather, and containing 500 pages in each volume, sizes 8½ by 10¾. We invite inspection. The set will be sold for fifteen dollars, but is worth twice what we ask for it. Times Bookstore.

Worthy of Imitation.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—How is it, Mr Editor, that the Water Company do not employ a high-priced engineer to manage its affairs? I understand that Mr Henderson, the superintendent, is not an engineer, but is simply a good, level-headed, practical man, who understands his work and sees that it is properly done.

Now, would it not be infinitely better to have such a man in charge of our streets—a man, for instance like Mr Ed Wade—who is thoroughly practical. If it was necessary, we could employ an engineer to prepare a set of plans when any work requiring them was to be done.

I think, Mr Editor, the people should elect a council in January that will put a stop to the present deplorable condition of affairs.

Thanking you for your valuable space, I am, &c.

Rates to be Increased.

Canadian life insurance companies have decided to increase their rates on new business after January next owing to the action of the Government in calling for a large reserve, and to make up for the lower rate of interest obtainable on investments. Mr E W Cox, of the Canada Life, speaking of the matter, stated that the insurance companies were compelled to take this step. He thought it would mean an increase of from 3 to 5 per cent on all new policies.

The funeral took place to the Roman Catholic cemetery yesterday of Bridget Bolton, wife of Mr Michael Bolton, of No. 28 Park street. The deceased was 65 years of age and has been a resident of Peterborough for forty years, during which time she won and held the highest respect and esteem of all with whom she came in contact. Her last illness was of but a few weeks duration.

Our local George street contemporary states that an owl flew into the machine shop of the Canadian General Electric Works yesterday and took a position on one of the rafters, where it sits contentedly. In Trouble.

Dr. John A. Dowie, of Chicago, who delivered a series of lectures in Peterborough some time ago on divine healing, and who caused a lot of excitement through his vicious attacks on the George Matthews Pork Packing establishment, has been mobbed a number of times recently in Chicago. On the last occasion the divine healer, in company with some of his adherents, was besieged in a hal until 3 o'clock in the morning. Dowie has become exceedingly offensive to a large element of people in Chicago.

The Claim is a False One.

Crude Materials Can Never Produce Perfect Work.

The claim is made by the manufacturers of crudely prepared packages dyes and dyes composed of soap grease mixed with a small amount of coloring matter that these dyes will color cotton and wool goods with the same dye. Such a claim is false and deceptive.

Animal and vegetable fibres, such as wool and cotton, must each have a special coloring agent. In order to meet this difficulty the manufacturers of Diamond Dyes have prepared special dyes for all wool goods and special dyes for all cotton and wool or mixed materials. Each of these Diamond Dyes gives handsome and artistic colors suitable for the various seasons.

Diamond Eyes are the only dyes in the world that fully meet the demands of home dyeing. They color all kinds of materials and give colors and shades equal to those produced by European professional dyers, and in the majority of cases the Diamond Dyes are faster and more lasting. Chemical experts who have made repeated tests are of opinion that one package of Diamond Dyes is equal in coloring power three of any other make.

Avoid imitation package dyes and soap grease mixtures; they ruin good materials and are dangerous to handle.

A Menace to Health.

The catch basin at the corner of Water and McDonnel streets is a menace to health. The smell that issues from it, especially at night, is enough to pollute the neighborhood. It was so bad on Sunday night that people on George street noticed the odor. It is said that the sewer contains a quantity of stagnant water, which is the cause of the stench. The sewer, it is claimed, slopes the wrong way for a considerable distance, and hence the water cannot escape. Something must be done or serious consequence will result.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a Court will be held pursuant to The Ontario Voters Lists Act, by His Honour the Judge of the County Court of Peterborough at the Judges Chambers, in the Town of Peterborough on the 20th day of November, 1899

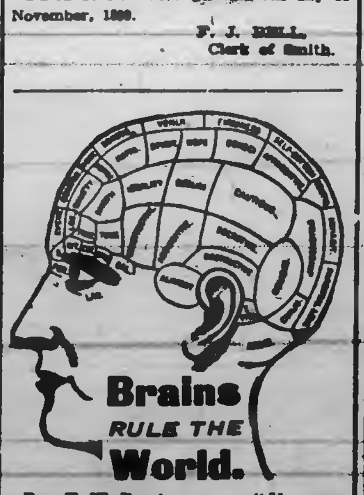
at 11 o'clock a.m. to hear and determine the several complaints of errors and omissions in the Voters' List of the Municipality of Smith for 1899.

All persons having business at the Court are required to attend at the said time and place.

Dated at Peterborough this 8th day of November, 1899.

F. J. BELL,
Clerk of Smith.



Rev. H. W. Beecher says:—"If a man wishes to know practically what he is made up of, if a man wants a knowledge of human nature for definite, practical purposes, there is no system which will aid him in acquiring that knowledge like the system of phrenology."

We have the honor to announce the coming of Prof. A. H. Welch, F. A. I. P., Phrenologist and Physiologist, to the Snowden House, November 15th, for private consultation. Popular entertainments in the hall, public examinations, etc. See small bills.

Prof. Welch merits two diplomas as Graduate and Fellow of the American Institute of Phrenology, New York; also testimonials galore from prominent citizens, the press and pulpit from many parts of the United States and Canada. Over twenty years experience in character reading from the shape of the head, face, hand, temperament, quality and physiognomy among all classes.

The Stratford Herald says:—"Prof. A. Welch is the most conscientious and painstaking phrenologist that ever visited here."

Dear Sir:

I have your favor of the 13th inst., and it is with pleasure I avail myself of the opportunity of referring to Mr. R. R. Cresswell, one of your graduates, who is now in our employ, as a young man possessed of marked ability. He is especially careful and accurate in all of his office work, thus manifesting very careful and systematic drilling and being fitted for such duties far above the average clerk. The above qualifications, no doubt, are the result of the practical and systematic training he received at your institution.

Yours very truly,

The Whereabouts of Aguinaldo's Army a Mystery.

AMERICANS ARE WELCOMED

Insurgents Have Drained All the Resources of the Province.

The Army Has Impressed a Large Share of the Crops, and the People Are Miserably Poor—Insurgents Are Active Near Manila.

Manila, Nov. 14.—The whereabouts of Anginaldo and nis army and Cabinet is a perfect engima. General Otis has learned that AAguinaldo recently issued a proclamation transferring the capital to Bonabong, giving as a reason for the step the unsanitary condition of aralac.

It is supposed that the leaders of the insurrection who are already at Bonabong are retreating to that place, though they left Tarlac, whether they are travelling with the army, how many of the soldiers they were able to hold together, and whether the leaders of the troops have got beyond General Lawton's line are all unknown. It is hoped, however, that General Wheaton has effected a junction with General Young, forming a cordon from San Fabian to Canisdro. General Lawton has 4,000 men and Gen. Wheaton 2,700, a small force to control so many miles, but it commands the mair. roads by which the insurgents must move to the ortheast. Witht he Americans advancing at the present rate they could drive the insurgents from Bongabong in a fortnight, and it is impossible for the rebels to establish another capital in Luzon which cannot be captured within a month.

Americans Welcomed.

A majority of the natives welcome the army enthusiastically.

The insurgents have drained the resources oft he province. The army has impressed a large share of the corps and the people are miserably poor. Everywhere are elaborate trenches built by the non-combatants, working day and night. The Americans found large stores of rice at Tarlac, Tubig and elsewhere, and several thousand new Filipino uniforms were captured at Tubig. Thirty insurgents surrendered to General MacArthur, receiving $30 for each gun.

Maor Marsh's battalion of the 33rd Regiment, which includes many old roughriders from the southwest, attacked and defeated 400 Filipinos three miles from San Fabian, on the Dagupan road, on Friday. Fourteen Filipinos were killed and two Americans wounded.

Active Near Manila

The insurgents have resumed their activity in the Cavite Province, threatening an attack on Imus. Yesterday they attacked Calamba, in the usual fashion. A nightly fusilade between the marines and the hundred insurgents, who have again entrenched themselves on the isthmus between Cavite and Navelta is plainly to be heard in Manila. On Saturday the Filipinos attempted to entrap the marines by landing a force from Cascoes behind them. The searchlights of the Petrel discovered the preparations to embark and a few shots from the Monadnock's and Petrel's guns spoiled the game.

ESCAPED SPANISH PRISONER.

Washington, Nov. 14.—The following was received at the Navy Department from Admiral Watson to-day—

"Manila, Nov. 14.—Escaped Spanish prisoners at San Fabian report seeing Gilmore in Tarlac Nov. 6 with five men, all well. He crossed mountain from Baler in May with 13 men. Location of other eight unknown."

THE ITALIAN PARLIAMENT.

King Humbert Says the Foreign Relations of His Country are all Good.

Rome, Nov. 14.—[illegible] was opened this morning by King Humbert in the hall of the Senate, Palazzo Madama. His Majesty was accompanied by the Queen and all the royal family, except the Duke of Abruzzi; the Cabinet members and the principal court officials and dignitaries. In the speech from the throne, His Majesty expressed the hope that the Deputies would actively resume their labours and dispose of the measures not dealt with last session. Above all, he added, it was necessary that the budget be speedily discussed [illegible]

Referring to [illegible] affairs, King [illegible] with the powers were excellent, and that nothing menaced the country in any direction. He also alluded to Italy's participation in the Hague peace conference, and added: "The forthcoming celebration of the Holy year will afford us the opportunity of showing we understand how to respect the obligations we have assumed in coming to Rome."

WILLIAMS PUTS UP A DEFENCE.

Says That Curtis Fired All Three Shots, Borrowing His Revolver

Toronto, Nov. 14.—Williams, the survivor of the two burglars who murdered J. E. Varcoe last week, has acknowledged he has known Curtis off and on for a year. As far as he knows, Williams says, the dead burglar's name is Curtis.

Williams is in receipt of plenty of money for his defence, but refuses to divulge the whereabouts of his relatives.

He says he never spent a day behind the bars. He says Curtis planned the Varcoe robbery.

Inspector Stark to-day received a photograph of Joseph Martin, the man the Montreal detectives believed was the dead desperado, and it was easily seen that Martin is not the man.

The police to-day discovered the man "Harry" who assisted Policeman Dickson in the capture of the two men. He lives at the head of Seaton street and will give evidence at the inquest to-night. He says that the burglars both ran down stairs into the store after the shooting, and, seeing Dickson and himself, fled upstairs again and out of the window.

It is probable that the line of defence for Williams will be that McIntosh fired the first shot at Varcoe, then damaged his weapon by battering the struggling man on the head with it, and borrowed Williams' revolver to finish the job, and that Williams was adverse to the shooting.

Mr. T. C. Robinette, the prisoner's counsel, is confident that Williams will escape the scaffold.

It was reported to-day that Curtis was the son of a former drill instructor at Stanley Barracks, and that a brother at one time kept an hotel or restaurant on King street.

One Was Smothered

London, Ont., Nov. 14.—Neighbors entered the home of Samuel L. Milliken yesterday morning an found him, with his wife and two sons, unconscious from the fumes of coal gas. Andrew the younger boy, was dead when the doctors arrived, and it was several hours before the rest of the family were brought back to life. Mrs. Milliken, however, was very low last night, and it is feared may not recover. The escape of gas was caused by a defective conection between a pipe and the coal stove.

Killed by Shock

Hamilton, Nov. 14.—Thomas Fee, a well known cab driver here, was accidentally killed yesterday evening at the Grand Trunk station. He was on the train collectin a fare from a patron, and jumped after it had started. The train had got up a good speed, and Fee fell under the wheels, his right leg being cut off at the thigh and his right hand badly crushed. It is supposedth at the shock killed him instantly, no person having seen the accident.

LADYSMITH IS INEFFECTIVELY BOMBARDED.

French Papers Talking Wildly About the Episode in Delagoa Bay. Attempts of the Boers on Kimberley Become Grotesque. A Resident Says Ladysmith is Safe.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Three troopships, containing fully 3,000 men, have now arrived at Durban, and these added to the garrison of Estcourt, numbering 3,000 men, form an army which will effectually prevent any further movement of the Boers into suthern Natal. The Armenian, wth three batteries of artillery, and the Gascon with the 2nd battalion of the Coldstream Guards will probably arrive to-morrow, raising the number of troops which can be used to protect White's line of communication with his base to close upon 8,000. By Saturday next the whole of Lord Methuen's division of 10,000 men will have reached Durban, and the British will have a second army of 13,000 troops in Natal, and the Boers will have lost the game they have played so spiritedly but with such lack of science. This is a foregone conclusion, barring of course unprecedented and unforeseen reverses.

The longe bombardment of Ladysmith still continues, but with no effect. General White who has performed his task well and in exactly the same manner that the most scientific and careful expert would have recommended, will soon have the pleasure of turning the tables. The developments of the next few days are likely to beinterestingg from a military point of view, for they will mark the high climax of the campaign in Natal.

LONG RANGE BOMBARDMENT.

Pietermaritzburg, Friday, Nov. 10.—Morning.—It is officially stated that the long range bombardment of Ladysmith with heavy gguns continues daily, but without serious damage.

INJURED A COOKING POT.

Hopetown, Friday afternoon, Nov. 10.—An undated despatch received from Kimberley says; "The Boers ceased shelling Nov. 7 about 7 p.m., having fired at intervals all day long, some 70 shells, a majority of them falling in debris heaps and open spaces. The average range was 8,100 yards. One cooking pot was injured. There was a brisk market for fragments, choice specimens fetching £2. The Boers, apparently were shelling at the extreme range of their guns. Yesterday's attempt was regarded as ludicrous. The weather is splendid. The bombardment was continued briskly all the morning, Nov. 8. One shell narrowly missed the Dutch church. There were no casualties. The shells are of a inferior quality and seemingly fired by amateurs. One, almost intact, was picked up. It weighs 8 1-4 pounds. The Boers have been firingg from three positions. So far the Boer activity causes little alarm.

SHELLING THE WATERWORKS.

Kimberley, Nov. 7.—Morningg.—Via Hopetown, Friday, Nov. 10.—The Boers are now throwing shells at the reservoir and water works. The weather is fine.

ANOTHER TROOPSHIP ARRIVED.

London, Nov. 14.—It was officially announced this afternoon that the troopship Britannic has arrived at Cape Town and that the troopships Lismore Castle and Yorkshire have arrived at Durban. The Britannic conveys 1010 men, the Lismore Castle 894, and the Yorkshire 1010.

FRENCH PAPERS INDIGNANT.

Paris, Nov. 14.—The Paris morning papers protest against the stopping of the French steamer Cordoba by the British third-class cruiser Magicienne off Lorenzo Marquez. The Petit Bleu says; "This arbitrary act of England requires an apology to the French Government and indemnity to the owners of the Cordoba and to the authorities."

The Soleil and the Echo de Paris protest in similar terms.

The Matin demands that an investigation be made, as there is no effective blockade, otherwise the authorities would have been notified.

The Gaulois does not consider the incident serious.

NOTHING HEARD IN LONDON.

London, Nov. 14.—Nothingg is known either at the War Office or the Colonial Office here regarding the alleged official statement cabled from Cape Town, saying that Secretary Reitz, in behalf of the Transvaal Government, has demanded that General White immediately release Nathan Marks, a supposed spy, who is confined at Ladysmith, adding that President Kruge threatens, if Marks is executed, to retaliate by shootingg six British officers in the hands of the Boers. It is further asserted from Cape Town that Marks entered Ladysmith, after the investment of that place with the supposed object of obtaining information for the Boers, and one version of the story is that the Transvaal authorities have threatened to execute six British officers if the supposed spy is not released, to which General Buller is said to have replied that the British were entitled to retain the man until he should render a satisfactory account of himself. Both stories, it is asserted, bear the imprint of improbability, as there is no reason to think that the Boers would be guilty of such a complete change from their previous correct attitude and manner of conducting the hostilities. Nevertheless, the sensational afternoon newspapers are already demandingg that President Kruger and all the members of the Executive Council be ruthlessly hanged, as the only fitting reprisal in the event of State Secretary Reitz's threat being carried out.

A Pressing Matter.

That General White's relief is considered a matter of pressing importance is again evidenced by the satisfaction with which the officials heard of the arrival of the transport Armenian at Cape Town yesterday, a couple of days before her time. The non-arrival of her precious freight of field guns and ammunition threatened serious delay in General Methuen's arrangements for the relief of General White. It is true that the first division still lacks cavalry, but in all probality the first arrivals of that arm at Cape Town will be sent to Durban, irrespective of which division they were originally assigned to. There is no doubt that the bombardment of Ladysmith has increased in intensity during the last few days and though all messages from there speak of a confidence of the defenders, a load of anxiety will be removed from the country when unrestrained communication with the beleagured town is established.

The Chaplain's Story.

The allegations of Father Mathew's have made a painful impression, and there is a desposition to discredit them as being merely the excited view of a non-combatant ignorant of real military requirements. Nevertheless his story has added immensely to the anxiety of those who had realations in the battle of Nicholson's Nek, as they now have the dread of dishonouring exposure.

Butler Not in It.

Considerable feeling has been aroused by the announcement that Sir William Butler, former commander at the Cape, will not command the troops on the occasion of the Queen's visit to Bristol to-morrow. As General Butler commanded the western district, his absence from this ceremony is remarkable, and is attributed to fears of a hostile demonstration, owing to his unpopular attitude with reference to the Transvaal.

It is reported that the officials at Cape Town are now stopping all foreign official telegrams, whether in code or otherwise, except messages to the Governor of Portuguese East Africa and Portugal.

ALDERSHOT OF NATAL.

London, Nov. 14.—A resident of Ladysmith writes as follows regarding that town to the Daily Mail;

It would be ridiculous in the extreme to pretend that Ladysmith is impregnable. It is nothing of the sort. To the west of the town there is a fine level plain, in which is the camp. The open veldt rolls away for miles until it meets the foothills stretching afar rom the Drakensburg Mountains. The Klip River with its affluents, the Blauuwbank River, and Dewdrop Spruit or stream intersect the plateau ad nthe Kilp and Sand rivers join on the road leading across Van Reenen's Pass to Harrismith. There is very little water in any of these rivers save after a thunderstorm. During the summer months these are pretty frequent and for at least a few weeks in January may be expected with almost clockwork regularity between four and ive o'clock everfy afternoon. They usually only last for an hour or less, and though the downpour is veritably tropical for the time, the hot sun soon dries up the moisture, and the soil is parched and thirsty again by the next day.

The Hills.

On the east of Ladysmith there are several hills, which are of some importance. The Isimbulwana, for instance, is dignified by the name of a mountain, but this is gross flattery; Lombard's Kop is an eminence within four miles of the town and six of the camp. Scattered about the veldt on this side of the town are many koppies covered with stones and capable of making excellent cover for the Boers, who however, could be, and evidently have been dislodged by our heavy naval guns.

It is entirely incorrect to describe Ladysmith as lying in a tea cup. A fairer comparison would be to say that it lies towards one side of a gigantic soup-plate with a big piece of the edge chpped off on one side. Through this chip comes the raiway line from Durban.

The Surburbs.

There are a number of hamlets of a dozen to twenty houses scattered about within a score or so of miles from Ladysmith. Leatherns, for instance, is 15 miles away; Freers, Acton Homes, where General White's first engagement took place, is 24 miles; and Little Tugela Waterfall is about 30. Round about are many more or less isolated farms; English farms, where they realy do farm, not Dutch farms, where they do everything except farm; and on one of these, Farquhar's farm, the battle of Monday took its acutest phase.

Can Be Held.

Speaking as a resident and one who knows the country, there need be no fear that we shall lose Ladysmith. The earthworks surrounding the heavy guns are amply sufficient to protect the town. Every hill, sluit, and distinctive point of attack for miles are carefully measured for shooting purposes. The site of the camp itself was chosen by a board of officers specially appointed for the purpose, and the military position of the place has been studied and developed during the past two years by the most expert local military advice.

The natural advantages and defences of the town have been enhanced and strenghed by carefully planned redoubts at any possible vulnerable points. The danger of the place being rushed is absolutely nil, because the immediate surroundings are open and bare to nakedness, so that there is no possibility of surprise. Anyone approaching can be seen for a great distance, and no near cover is available.

In short, Ladysmith is the Aldershot of NaGtal

CHARTERED THE MAJESTIC.

London, Nov. 14.—The Admiralty has chartered the White Star Line steamer Majestic to convey troops to South Africa immediately after she returns from her present trip to New York. The Majestic sailed from Liverpool Nov. 8 and Queenstown Nov. 9, and is due to arrive in New York to-morrow.

It was also officially announced that the troopship Oriental, which left London Oct. 20, had sailed from Cape Town for Durban, and that the Donald Currie line steamer Carisbrook Castle, which sailed from London Oct. 27 with the cavalry brigade staff and reinforcements on board, had arrived at Cape Town.

Sardinian's Fast Run.

Montreal, Nov. 14.—The fast time that is being made by the Sardinian to South Africa is a surprise. The distance from Quebec to Cape Town is computed to be about 7,615 miles. The Sardinian has now run 3,447 miles of her long journey. There remains 3,568 miles to cover, or 21 miles more than half the whole distance. The Sardinian was out just thirteen days at 5 o'clock yesterday. This would make a daily speed of 265 miles, or thirteen knots. The ship will complete the journey in another thirteen or fourteen days, reaching Cape Town on the 24th on 25th inst.

Blown to Pieces

Tiffin, O., Nov. 13.—A nitro-glycerine magazine was blown up here this morning with terrific force. The shock was heard in towns within a radius of 40 miles, and people within a mile of the place were knocked flat. The driver of a wagon and his two horses were at the door of the magazine at the time and received the full force of the explosion. They could not be found afterwards.

COMPROMISE DENIED.

Congregational Committee Deny that they Have Dropped Rev. Mr. De Soyres.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—A report was circulated to the effect that the Congregational Committee of St. James' Cathedral had discussed the appointment of a rector and had come to the decision that, if satisfactory to the bishop, Rev Mr Cody of St Paul's be given the position. The committee have made no compromise in the matter whatever, and have not had a conference with the bishop since the latter's ultimatum was published.

Bishop Sweatman will be in Toronto on Thursday and the committee will arrange a conference, when they will again put forward the name of Rev De Soyres, and anticipate a favorable consideration of the nominee notwithstanding the recent statemtnt by the bishop that he would not appoint Mr De Soyres.

Two Murder Cases:

Brandon, Man., Nov. 14.—Brandon Assizes open to-day. There are two murder cases, and both the accused are women. Hilda Blake will answer to the charge of shooting Mrs John Lane, and Agnes Clendinning is charged with the murder of her own infant, by leaving it out over night on the open prairie first having undressed it.

ANOTHER SEAT VACANT

Member for East Elgin Unseated by the Courts.

HON. MR. GARROW MAY GO.

An Association's Agency in Campaign Not Ended in Nomination.

And The Same Point Which Unseats Mr Brower in East Elgin May be the Means of Unseating Hon. J. T. Garrow in West Huron.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—The Court of Appeal handed out judgment in the East Elgin Provincial election appeal this morning. Mr. C. A. Brower, the Conservative member, was unseated. The same point which unseats Mr. Brower, is up in the West Huron case, and may result in the unseating of Hon. J. T. Garrow.

The trial judges, it will be remembered, found there were corrupt acts on the part of two men, Taylor and Luton, but they held that agency was not established, and confirmed Mr. Brower in his seat. A. B. Aylesworth, for the Liberals, appealed against this decision and the Court of Appeal has voided the election for the following reasons—

Chief Justice Burton said the Conservative Association of East Elgin had followed the usual practice in selecting a candidate. He pointed out that the trial judges held that the activity of the Association ceased right there. A majority of the Judges of the Court of Appeal, however, werse of a different opinion and were convinced that agency had been established, at least as far as Taylor was concerned. It was not clearly established in the case of Lutton. The election would, therefore, be voided with costs.

Mr. Maclennan was the only dissentient from this judgment.

"Since Mr. Brower is unseated the other bye-elections will be delayed a little," said a prominent Liberal this morning. "They will all be brought on together, and very soon, too."

Hard and Fast Aground.

Manila, Nov 14.—The United States cruiser Charleston ran aground near Vigan on a hidden reef. She has 35 fathoms of water on both sides. She worked her machinery for two days and nights in trying to get afloat; but a typhoon arising, the crew were compelled to take to their boats and seek refuge on a small island five miles away. The natives are friendly. Lieut. McDonald and a number of sailors put off in a small boat and reached the Callao, which brought them to Manila. The gunboat Helena has been despatched to bring away the crew. Lieut. McDonald describes the Charleston when be last saw her as hard and fast aground, with her bottom badly stove and well out of the water.

Magistrate Dead

London, Ont., Nov. 14.—E. Jones Parke, Q. C., Police Magistrate, died suddenly in his private office at 2.30 yesterday afternoon. He had not been feeling well during the early part of the day and had a conversation with his partner, Mr. Purdom, and also his son, in regard to his health in general, leaving them to consult his physician, Dr. Woodruff, who informed him that he had heart trouble, from which old people often suffered. He then returned to his office and conversed upon several matters of business. An hour later he was dead.

LATCHFORD ELECTED.

The Minister of Public Works Elected in Renfrew.

Hon Mr Latchford was probably elected in South Renfrew yesterday. The riding is a very large one, and it was impossible to get anything like complete returns. The latest returns give him a majority of 230 over the Conservative candidate.

How Mr. Smiff Views Us.

The Bob. Ind. says under the head of Peterborough: It seems as if the reign of "Common Sense" will never begin. What do you suppose is being made out of all the pavement investigations that have been going on lately? Nothing. They have simply shown that the police could manage the affairs of the town better than the Council does. Several of us have read your editorials this week with great relish. Mr Stratton is to have a banquet. He may be a good business man but it may be doubted whether he will be an inborn statesman. However he will deserve the banquet. It was noticed in last issue that one Vanderbilt brother offered another a few cold millions and that they were accepted in the same spirit in which they were offered. Bully for them! Would not you do the same Mr Smiff? If that is virtue I know several whom you can count in every day in the week. Pork is plentiful in the market. There are always plenty of hogs. There's a great deal of talk lately about how to mount a deer's head. It is easy. Get on top. We had a big ball last week, the visiting Irish team of footballers officiated. It was held in the rink and was a huge success. There will be another ball in the rink before long—a snowball. You laugh. That,s the intention.

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 8, 1899

RECRUITING THE MILITIA.

The Ottawa Citizen thinks that the present is a favorable time to utilize the latent military enthusiasm in Canada by recruiting up the militia corps. In future the militia of Canada will hold a more important position in public estimation than in the past. The Dominion by its action in this war has established the fact that the people of Canada recognize, and are desirious to assume responsibility to furnish their quota of soldiers towards the defence of the empire in future wars. It follows that this country must see that she has the forces available to fulfil this obligation. When Britain signifies her willingness to accept troops she will not accept untrained levies, but men who have been drilled, can use a rifle or handle artillery, and are commanded by trained officers. When the first contingent was being enlisted hundreds of fine young fellows were anxious to go who would have been accepted had they belonged to militia corps and been trained, but, owing to the absence of that qualification they were rejected.

Hitherto the young men of Canada had no inducement to join the militia in the way of prospects seeing active service. In future it will be different. A British war will be our war and young men who have an ambition to serve their country and the empire, will, when they don the uniform of the Canadian militia, know that they put themselves in the way of preferment for selection for service with any force sent out of the Dominion in fulfilment of the new obligation which Canada has assumed.

It would be well that the rule should be laid down that in making up any future contingents only trained militiamen will be accepted. This would have a benefit in recruiting the militia and an incentive to officers and men to zealously prepare themselves, knowing that the reward of good work and high efficiency will be selection for imperial service when the opportunity occurs.

Where the Pot of Gold Is Buried.

How many women are fretting and struggling along on a very little money when a good sized yard or adjoining patch of ground is going to waste! Yet that very piece of ground may contain all sorts of possibilities—clothes, furniture, books, medicines, luxuries and even necessities otherwise impossible.

Clear, plow, fertilize and plant. This done, the great beginning is made, and perseverance and attention will secure the rest. Onions, tomatoes, cabbages, celery, a small poultry farm, a violet or rose farm—any one of these may add several hundred dollars to one's purse every year. Small fruits, hops, tuberoses and grapes are also very profitable. With some intelligence a blooming garden can always be made a paying one. Make it a principle to have no more waste in the garden than in the kitchen.

If there is only a very small place and just enough raised for one's own family, try, after the table is supplied, to prepare what vegetables and fruits are left over for sale for winter use. There is always a demand for good homemade canning and preserving. Do not let a valuable scrap of ground be idle.—Annetta Halliday-Antona in Woman's Home Companion.

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet, ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

Generally when a hen desires to sit at this time it is best to allow her to do so. The hatching and raising of a brood will put her in better condition for laying.—

A SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

How It Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery in Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two. They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the graphophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a graphophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. TAFFEY BY THE TIMES.

Friendship of Britain and the United State Calls Forth an Editorial.

London, Nov. 13.—The Times referring editorially this morning to the speech of United States Ambassador Choate, at the annual banquet of the Walter Scott Club in Edinburgh, Friday evening, said:

"The American people are generous enough to like us better for being proud and glad of their sympathy than for having given them our own. So now the English people, amid the chorus of depreciation and abuse from the continental press, find in the hearty approbation of a great free nation, encouragement and strength of a kind which even ironclads cannot supply."

Proceeding to discuss the bearings of the Samoan agreement, the Times remarks: "Both the English and American people will remember that in the very nature of things Germany can never be the friend of either in quite the same sense as they are, and ought increasingly to become friends of one another."

TO SAVE THE HOMESTEAD.

New York Comes to the Relief of the Parnell Family.

New York, Nov. 13.—Tammany Hall, has guaranteed $10,000 to pay the mortgage on the Parnell homestead in Wicklow, Ireland. Recently $5,000 was raised at a mass meeting here. A brother and invalid sister of Charles Stewart Parnell are living at the homestead. They are to have the use of the property as long as they live. When they die the place is to be converted into a Parnell memorial and museum. If the subscriptions show a surplus above the amount needed to pay of the mortgage that surplus is to be expended in erecting a statute of Parnell opposite the general post office in Dublin.

VINEGAR, THEN LEAD.

They Settled the Trouble at the Carbonville Postoffice.

"I think my most exciting official experience," said Captain J. E. Stone, formerly United States postal inspector, "was at the town of Carbonville, Colo., in 1879. It was a star route post, and there was much complaint about the nonreceipt of mail, so I went over to investigate.

"The postmaster was a man named Wilson, who kept a general store, and the postoffice consisted of a soap box on the end of his counter. When mail arrived, it was dumped in, and every fellow helped himself, an arrangement that worked well enough until a chap known as Black Hills Pete came to town. Pete disturbed the entire system. When he didn't get a letter himself, he would tear up several others on the principle that misery loves company, and, being a notorious desperado, nobody dared interfere. I got the facts, and as the mail came in that evening I took a seat in the corner and awaited developments, first ordering the box removed.

"A little after dark the miners from camp began to assemble, and presently in came Black Hills Pete. He was a big brute of a fellow, and I saw at once there was going to be trouble. 'Where's that letter box?' he demanded of Wilson. 'I've ordered him not to use it any more,' I said, getting up. 'Who the blank blank are you?' roared Peter. 'I'm the inspector,' I replied. 'Well, you get me that box quick,' he retorted, and, seeing him reach toward his pocket, I made a grab for my gun; but, as bad luck would have it, the confounded thing caught in the holster.

"In a twinkling he had me covered, but before he could turn loose a quavering voice called out: 'Pete! Oh, Pete!' The desperado glared around, and there stood Wilson holding a large tin squirt gun used for drawing liquors. The sight was so ludicrous that the bully burst into a guffaw, and as he did so Wilson let drive the piston and hurled about a quart of the strongest kind of vinegar squarely into his face. The stuff blinded him, and before he could recover himself the storekeeper had two bullets in his shoulder.

"That's the true story of the strangest fight that ever occurred in the west. Pete recovered, but before he could be arrested was spirited away by friends to New Mexico. His right name was Luther Coleman, and there is a warrant now standing against him for destroying United States mail matter. After the episode I have narrated there was no further trouble at the Carbonville postoffice."—New Orleans

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charlestown; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Ellison's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye;
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored clime.—Andrew Carnegie in North

NOT SETTLED YET.

The Anti-Ritualist Controversy—Some Recalcitrant Clergymen.

New York, Nov. 13.—The correspondent of the New York Sun, cabling from London, says:—Although the Archbishop's decision at the Lambeth Conference against the use of incense and portable lights is generally obeyed in London, three of the forty-six offenders are still recalcitrants. The Bishop of London has informed them that they must forthwith abandon their practices, or he would suspend them for two years. The recalcitrants refuse to reveal their intentions, one remarking that Bishop do not always carry out their threats. There are signs elsewhere that perhaps there will be sufficient ritualistic opposition to force Mr Balfour to fulfil his promise at the next session, to deal with the question legislatively if the disciplinary efforts of the Bishops are not effective.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $18,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

All Roads Lead to the Dressmaker.

Mr. Hornbill—Do you know, darling, I could pick you out of a crowd of women just by your style!

Mrs. Hornbill—I don't wonder, and me with this same old dress for the last two years!

Proof of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heerd so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

Result of a Prize Fight.

New York, Nov. 13.—Harry Appel, the prize-fighter lies at the point of death at the Norwegian hospital suffering from a concussion of the brain as the result of his fight with Jack Fox at the Pelican Athletic Club, Brooklyn Saturday night. The injury was not the result of a blow but of an accidental trip which sent him heavily to the floor.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Insurgents are Suffering from Disease, Lack of Food and Medicines.

Manila, Nov. 13.—General Young is supposed to have reached San Nicolas, about thirty miles east of Dagupan, but his wagons are far behind.

Colonel Hayes has captured Aguinaldo's secretary, and Major Colgman is in Carranglan, with an escort of 179 Bolomen, on his way to the Province of Neuva Vizaya.

The son of General Llaneras and his family are prisoners. The General barely escaped.

The correspondent of the Associated Press with General Young telegraphs from San Jose that Aguinaldo did not escape to the northeast. He and his army, the correspondent adds, are surrounded. His last orders to the Filipino commander at San Jose were to hold San Jose and Carranglan at all costs.

The recent encounters were too one-sided to be called fights. The insurgents are mortally afraid of the Americans, however strong their position. They make but a brief and feeble resistance and run when the terrible American yell reaches their ears, whereupon the Americans pursue them and slay many.

The moral effect of the news that 60,000 troops are on their way here has been unquestionably great.

The insurgents are suffering more from disease than the Americans, owing to poor food, lack of medicines, and filthy hospitals, with the result that there is great mortality among them.

General Lawton has intercepted a telegram from an insurgent captain to a Filipino General reading: "How can you blame me for retreating when only 12 of my company were able to fight?"

ANOTHER MONTREAL BLAZE.

The Damage Was Heavy and Firemen Had a Narrow Escape.

Montreal, Nov. 13.—A four storey biscuit and candy factory on Notre Dame street, owned by Viau Brothers, and Trotter's storage warehouse, a large stone building in the rear, were totally destroyed by fire yesterday. The fire started at eight o'clock in the morning and the damage is estimated at $300,000. Viau Brothers, whose loss is $200,000, have insurance for half that amount. They employed over 200 hands. Chief Benoit and several firemen were caught in the alleyway, and had to fight their way out through the flames. Fireman Pelletier was badly burned about the face and body and had to be taken to the hospital.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

A new comedy called "Wheels Within Wheels" is expected to go the rounds.

Robert Drouet will play John Storm in "The Christian" with Miss Allen next season.

"Annie Rooney" is undergoing a revival in Paris to the temporary eclipsing of Dreyfus.

Richard Mansfield is reputed to have taken out a life insurance policy for $100,000 recently.

David Belasco has completed an original play which will be produced early in the season with a specially selected company.

An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth" will be the feature of Frederick Warde's repertory next season.

It is unofficially announced that Rudyard Kipling is to write the fairy play to be produced at the London Lyceum next season.

Some German statistician has discovered that stage dancing is conducive to longevity. Taglioni lived to be 80 and Fanny Ellsler to be 74.

Rose Coghlan has been re-engaged for her original role of "Mlle. Fifi" for next season, the piece to open its tour in August in Chicago.

Emma Calve's much talked of monument represents her as Ophelia, and the sculptor has promised to exhibit it at the Paris exposition.

Minnie Seligman will appear in the vaudeville houses in a one act play called "Therese," which has been done in Europe by Sarah Bernhardt.

In a play called "Wine, Women and Song," recently produced at the Princess theater, London, two demimondaines, armed with butchers' knives, fight to the death in a beautiful setting profusely decorated with flowers.

George Bernard Shaw submitted his new play, "Cæsar and Cleopatra," to Richard Mansfield, but as Shaw had required a 56-year-old baldheaded Cæsar to make love to a 16-year-old Cleopatra the manuscript was returned.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

Future of Tutuila.

New York, Nov. 13.—The plan for the future of Tutuila, the Samoan island that falls to the United States under the agreement reached with Great Britain and Germany, are being considered by the Administration. The Herald says the future government of the island will depend altogether upon Congress, owing to the fact that when a naval station has been established it will be under the command of an officer of high rank, and it has been suggested that a naval government might be instituted similar to that which has been put in operation at Goen by Captain Leary. The Navy Department officials desire to make Pago Pago impregnable, defended by many high power guns and equipped with machinery and men to dock and repair the largest class of warships.

PRESTON R. MANSFIELD, Treasurer Abbott M'f'g Co., Dedham, Mass.
HON. GEO. D. ALDEN, Boston, Mass.
E. A. SMITH, Capitalist, Lowell, Mass.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

Surrender of Parades.

Washington, Nov. 13.—Both the State and Navy departments have received reports concerning the surrender of Parades at Puerto Cabello, Venezuela, yesterday. The State Department despatch is from Minister Loomis at Caracas and is as follows:—"After eight hours' fighting Castro's army took Puerto Cabello this morning. Killed and wounded aggregate 300; surgeons and hospital corps from foreign cruisers attending wounded. Local facilities inadequate. Castro holds every port and place of consequence in Venezuela."

Found Dead in Bed.

North Bay, Ont., Nov. 13.—Mr J. Wilkinson, formerly a resident of Gravenhurst, and who has been working here for the C P R for the past few months, was found dead in his bed at the North Bay Hotel, where he had been boarding. He was a married man, his wife living in Hutsville at the present time. An inquest will be held to-day.

Foul Play Suspected.

London, Nov. 13.—The body of a man believed to be James Rowe, a well known character to the local police, was found in a shallow creek on Adelaide street about six o'clock last night. Foul play is suspected, and an inquest will be held.

Fatal Freight Wreck.

Pittsburg, Nov. 13.—A double-headed Pittsburg & Lake Erie freight train of fifty-five loaded coal cars crashed into the caboose of another train at McKee's Rocks last night and piled the wreckage up high. Three men were in the caboose. One of them was taken out dead, another had one foot crushed and both legs broken, and a third was so badly injured that he may die. By some it is thought that another man, unknown, probably a tramp who was stealing a ride, was also killed and that his body will be found when the wreckage is cleared away. The accident is blamed by the trainmen on the negligence of the flagman of the train that was struck.

Differences More Acute.

London, Nov. 13.—A special despatch from Shanghai says the differences between Russia and Japan have been accentuated by Japan's refusal to grant Russia a foothold on the sea front of Massampo harbor, Korea.

Five Indians Killed.

Flagstaff, Arizona, Nov. 13.—Deputy Sheriff Hogan and three white men tried to arrest a Navajo Indian accused of horse stealing Saturday near Walnut station. The Indian and five of his friends resisted. Five of the Indians were killed and the sixth wounded. Hogan was shot three times but lives. One of he posse was killed and another wounded.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican-Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

They Keep Moving.

The religion of a Bedouin tribe seems to be to "move onward." Having once begun the nomadic life, it becomes almost necessary for them to keep it up. In the first place, they don't want to settle down, and they wouldn't have any place to stop if they wanted to. Sometimes it becomes expedient that they make great haste in these long journeys. Wandering around over the plains are other tribes whose only occupation is "moving on." There is frequently enmity between two of these Arabian families, and should one pursue the other it behooves the pursued to hasten onward with all the speed their animals are capable of. Or it may be that the springs of water are so widely separated that hard travel is necessary to make the distance from one to the other in a day.

When either of these contingencies arises, they cook and eat while on the march. They don't eat much. Two or three dinners such as American boys and girls are used to every day and something extra for Sundays and company are supposed not to agree with Bedouin children's stomachs. When on the road, bread is their chief food. This is baked while riding. One woman will mix the coarse flour which is carried in a sack on the back of her camel, another will roll and shape the dough, which is brought to her in small quantities, and a third will make a fire in an earthen vessel and attend to the baking. Women or boys on foot run along from one cook to the other and carry the material, and when the feast is ready they distribute it among the various members of the tribe.

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate, Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to put enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr. Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative, and no one disputed his claim, as it seemed to be the only way of asserting his

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

EUREKA!

As you travel through southeastern Kansas, about one hundred and twenty-five miles south of Topeka and eighty-five miles east of Wichita, the brakeman sticks his head in the doorway and yells: "Yreeky!" and a couple of minutes later the train pulls into Eureka, the prosperous county seat of Greenwood County.

One of the happy inhabitants of Eureka is Mrs. Sarah E. Taylor, and the reasons for her present happiness are set forth in the following letter addressed to Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the "Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute," of Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. Taylor says:

"I had been a sufferer for fifteen years and in August 1896 was taken with severe cramping pain in my stomach. A hard lump about the size of a goose egg formed in my right side. It became so sore I could scarcely walk about the house, and I had no appetite. I consulted two of the best doctors in town and they said medicine would do me no good. I gave up all hope of ever getting well again. One day I thought I would write to you telling you of my condition. You told me I had enlargement of one of the lobes of my liver and the gall bladder, and advised me to take your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' I had not taken more than half a bottle of each when I began to feel better, and my appetite came back, and for a little over a year since, I began to do my work."

"I consulted two of the best doctors in town."

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a medicine that cures on rational, scientific principles. It is the discovery of a regularly graduated, practicing physician of high standing. It tones up the stomach, stimulates the liver and regulates the bowels. It brings all the digestive organs into healthy activity. It neutralizes and eradicates all poisonous, effete matter in the blood and fills it with the rich, vital, red corpuscles of health and vigor.

The "Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains no alcohol in any form.

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 25 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians probably through the Phoenicians.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Memaine Treas., after securing the Jim. Hill claim adjoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. H. Sowell reports on this cropping $16.80 in gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Texas Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorized me to place a small amount of this stock at 3½cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Hill are less than 600 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.00 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3½ cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

AN OLD TIMER.

What Capt. Sam Lombard Knows of the Otonabee.

A number of men were discussing drowned lands' matters in connection with the Otonabee river the other day in the back parlor of the Snowden House, when an old steamboat veteran in the person of Capt Sam Lombard happened in.

"Do you remember the old steamer Otonabee?" asked one of them present, after Capt Sam had taken a seat and filled his pipe.

"'Member the Otonabee? Well I guess I do," replied the Captain. "Let me see; I helped to build that boat as well as the old Isaac Butts. In fact I navigated the first steamer that ever plowed the Otonabee.

One of the boys thought the Captain was "doping," and by way of tripping him up on his dates, asked: "Cap. how long have you been running on the river?"

"Who, me? Why, I started on the Otonabee when it was nuthin' but a creek."

A Dead Bargain.

A five volume set of the great work, "The Canadian Album; Men of Canada," bound in Seal Grain Leather, and containing 500 pages in each volume, sizes 8½ by 10¼. The set will make a beautiful Xmas present. It deals with religion, patriotism, business, law, medicine, education and agriculture, containing portraits of some of Canada's chief business men, &c. We invite inspection. The set will be sold for fifteen dollars, but is worth twice what we ask for it. Times Bookstore.

New Bridge.

A letter has been received by the town solicitor from John Bell, solicitor of the G T R, concerning the difficulty between the town and the G T R re the bridge on Smith street over the creek, and was read at the committee meeting of the council. A number of years ago the Grand Trunk diverted the course of the creek, removed the bridge which spanned it and erected another which was complained of as not being as good and which has since outlived its usefulness. A new bridge is needed and at its last meeting the Council directed the Town Solicitor to take legal proceedings against the G T R. In his letter Mr Bell suggests that a compromise can likely be arranged between the town and the railway Company.

Wedding Stationery.

We have just received direct from New York a large stock of Crane's wedding stationery. Invitations printed to order in the latest styles. Also, wedding cake boxes of latest designs. The Times job rooms make a specialty of printing at home cards—the very best and nobbiest patterns.

St. Joseph's Hospital Fair.

The annual fancy fair in aid of the funds of the St. Joseph's Hospital will be held this year as usual, during the week preceding Christmas when a large quantity of useful and fancy articles, children's clothing, etc., will be offered for sale. It will afford an opportunity for the ladies to purchase articles suitable for Christmas presents, as well as articles needed in every day life. This fair in past years has been very successful, and the committee in charge this year will see to it that it will lose none of its former attractiveness. It is for a most worthy object, and appeals to our hearts and pockets alike.

Party Ends in a Panic.

A party last night in the south end came to an abrupt end when the host discovered that some one had stolen $11 he had concealed in his bed. One of the young women present was accused of stealing the money, and drawing a revolver he threatened to shoot her unless the cash was returned. The woman jumped through a half opened window. A panic among the guests occurred, who speadily departed. So far as the Times could learn the money was not recovered.

MATRIMONIAL EVENTS.

SAVIGNY—DONALDSON.

A very happy event occurred at the residence of Mr. John Donaldson, on Wednesday evening last, when his eldest daughter, Miss Mary Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Mr James Savigny, grocer of this town. The bride was charmingly attired in white organdie, and was attended by her sister, Miss Violet, who was gowned in a like manner. The groom was supported by his cousin, Mr. Fred Stewart, of Otonabee.

Rev. Mr. Kennawin of Omemee, officiated in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives of the contracting parties.

At the conclusion of the carmony a very enjoyable time was spent in social intercourse. Guests were present from Toronto and other places. Amongst the many places from which costly wedding presents were received by the newly-married couple were Vancouver and other western points. The groom's gift to the bride was a lovely gold watch, and to the bridesmaid an elegant bracelet.

Mr. and Mrs. Savigny will take residence at No. 10 Cambridge street. The Times joins in hearty congratulations.

SIMPSON—SMITH.

On Wednesday evening last, a pretty wedding was celebrated at the residence of Mr. L. Smith, Barnardo Ave. when his daughter, Miss Jennie, was united in marriage to Mr. Geo. Simpson, of Smith. The Rev. S. J. Shorey performed the ceremony. The bride was handsomely attired in white surah silk and carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Ada Banks of Toronto, assisted the bride and was becomingly dressed in white and carried a bouquet of pink roses, while Mr. James Young ably supported the groom. As the bridal party entered the room the wedding march was played by Mr. Wm. Staples. Guests to the number of thirty sat down to a wedding dejeuner. A large number of handsome and useful gifts attested the esteem in which the young couple were held. Mr. and Mrs. Simpson take up their residence in Smith, bearing the hearty good wishes of a very large number of friends.

Mr. Frank Burnett, proprietor of the vessel, has about concluded a most successful season. The Rainbow will finish the present season with carrying wood, lumber, etc.

SURE TO ASK.

The Kind of Coffee When Postum is Well Made.

"Three great coffee drinkers were my old school friend and her two daughters.

"They are always complaining and taking medicine. I determined to give them Postum Food Coffee instead of coffee when they visited me, so without saying anything to them about it, I made a big pot of Postum the first morning, using four heaping teaspoons to the pint of water and let it boil twenty minutes, stirring down occasionally.

"Before the meal was half over, each one passed up the cup to be refilled, remarking how fine the coffee was. The mother asked for a third cup, and inquired as to the brand of coffee I used. I didn't answer her question just then, for I had heard her say a while before that she didn't like Postum Food Coffee unless it was more than half old-fashioned coffee.

"After breakfast I told her that the coffee she liked so well at breakfast was pure Postum Food Coffee, and the reason she liked it was because it was properly made, that is, it was boiled long enough to bring out the flavor. I have been brought up from a nervous, wretched invalid, to a fine condition of physical health by leaving off coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

"I am doing all I can to help the world out of coffee slavery, to Postum freedom, and have earned the gratitude of many, many friends." Myra J. Tuller, [illegible] Troost Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

ARCHIDIACONAL CONFERENCE.

Sixth Annual Conference Now in Progress Here.

The Sixth Annual Archidiaconal Conference of the Archdeaconry of Peterborough, opened here yesterday morning. At 9 a.m. Holy Communion was celebrated, Rev. J. C. Davidson and Rev. Mr. Cooper officiating, and at 10 o'clock morning prayer and devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. George Warren of Lakefield.

At 10.45 the business session opened in the Sons of England Hall, the Venerable Archdeacon Allan of Millbrook presiding.

There were also present Rev. Provost Welsh of Trinity University; Rev. Mr. Webb, Colborne; Rev. Mr. Marsh Lindsay, Rev. Canon Farncombe, Newcastle; Rev. John Creighton, Blackstock; Rev. W. C. Creighton, Bobcaygeon; Rev. R. Seaborne, Bowmanville; Rev. Wm. Farncombe, Fenelon Falls; Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, Omemee; Rev. A. B. Chafee, Cobocönk; Rev. Mr. Sward, Kinmount; Rev. W. E. Cooper, of Campbellford; Rev. G. Warren, Lakefield; Rev. W. Cressick, Young's Point; Rev. J. Scott, Warkworth; Rev. A. G. Westmacott, Brighton; Rev. R. Weaver, Hasting's Rev. J. H. Broughall, Whitby; Rev. H. C. Dickson, Toronto and Revs. J. C. Davidson, H. Symonds, and W. L. Armitage, Peterborough.

The following laymen are also in attendance; Messrs. W. Archbold, lay reader, Warsaw; Messrs. G. Bennister, Haliburton; J. H. Knight, Lindsay; Wm. Grace, Lindsay; C. J. Blomfield, Lakefield; R. M. Dennistoun, H. Rush, E. A. Peck, and A. P. Rousette, Peterboroughh.

The Rector of Peterborough, the Rev. J. C. Davidson, offered on behalf of the Laity and Clergy of Peterborough a very warm welcome to the Conference. He had never seen people throw open their houses and extend their efforts with so much gladfulness, evidencing their pleasure in welcoming the fellow members of their communion to their town, where everyone was invited to make himself at home.

The Archdeacon replied, gratefully acknowledging the hospitality offered, and referring to the steady progress of the parish of Peterborough, which he said was a sincere gratification to them all to witness.

The Secretary, Rev. H. Symonds, read the minutes of the last meeting of the Archdeaconry, which were on motion adopted, and the thanks of the meeting was tendered to the secretary for the able manner in which he had performed his duties.

The Venerable Archdeacon Allen then proceeded to deliver his annual address. In so doing he took occasion to extend a hearty welcome to Rev. Provost Welch, of Trinity College, who was present. The Rectory endowment question was briefly touched upon by the Archdeacon, as were also the questions of the Widows' and Orphans' Fund. The speaker regretted that the Widows' and Orphans' Fund of the Church was not what it should be, and he trusted that something would be done in the near future to put this branch of their work on a better footing. The matter of the introduction of ministers into their new charges was ably dealt with and a more congenial way of initiating young ministers into their new parishes was advocated. The observance of the Lord's day came in for considerable attention, and he hoped that the Church would continue to take active interest in maintaining its faithful observance. The Venerable Archdeacon dealt at some length on the temperance question and urged that the Church should do all in its power to stamp out such an evil.

At the conclusion of the Archdeacon's address the following were elected as members of the Council for the ensuing year—Venerable Archdeacon Allan appointed Rev. Rural Deans Marsh, Webb, and Harding, and Rev. W. E. Cooper, of Campbellford. The Conference of the Deanery of Northumberland nominated Rev. Mr. Warren and Mr. R. M. Dennistoun; the Deanery of Durham, Rev. W. C. Allan, and Mr. Wm. Grace, of Lindsay; the Deanery of Haliburton, Rev. C. Lord and Mr. G. Dennister.

Rev. H. Symonds was re-elected secretary.

The Conference then adjourned for lunch, which was served in the Sons of England Hall by the ladies of the Parish of Peterborough.

In the evening in St. John's church there was Evensong, prayer and sermon in connection with the Conference. Rev. Provost Welch, of Trinity University, officiated.

This evening an open meeting will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall.

Fresh Oysters, per pint, 20 and 25c, the Spot Cash Grocery Co.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Robert Neill has just returned from a business trip to Boston.

Mrs. Wm. Pym has returned from Haliburton, where she has been visiting with friends.

Mrs. and Miss Pousette have returned from Bridgenorth, where they have been spending the last couple of weeks with Dr. Pousette.

Mrs. Sidney Blade and her daughter, Annie, who left here to join Mr. Blade in Australia, arrived safely in Sydney on the 29th of September.

This week's issue of the Illustrated London News contains a photogravure of the First Scotts Guards, of London, England, before embarking for South Africa. The picture of Mr. Thomas Miller, son of Mr. F. W. Miller, of town, can be seen quite distinctly among the members of the Guards.

Capt. Eden has returned from the Klondike district, where he was engaged in running a large steam boat from Dawson City to White Horse, and will spend a few weeks with his family in Cobourg before returning to the land of gold.

Mr. P. M. Gunter, superintendent for the Gilmour Company, Trenton, passed through town on his way north yesterday.

Mr. George McHugh, M. P. P., Lindsay, was at the Snowden House yesterday on his way to Ottawa.

Laid at Rest.

The remains of Mrs. Harry Cavanagh, formerly Miss Henrietta McNair, were interred yesterday in the R. C. Cemetery. The death of this young lady, who was only 27, is deplored by many. She had been suffering from pulmonary trouble for a couple of years, and although everything possible was done for her, the progress of the disease could not be arrested. She leaves two young children, who will never know a mother's loving care. The Times extends its sympathy to Mr. Cavanagh and sorrowing relatives.

Dear Sir:

I have your favor of the 13th inst., and it is with pleasure I avail myself of the opportunity of referring to Mr. R. R. Cresswell, one of your graduates, who is now in our employ, as a young man possessed of marked ability. He is especially careful and accurate in all of his office work, thus manifesting very careful and systematic drilling and being fitted for such duties far above the average clerk. The above qualifications, no doubt, are the result of the practical and systematic training he received at your institution.

Yours very truly,

STORY OF MURDER

Told at the Inquest Upon Varcoe's Death.

FATAL BULLET WOUND.

The Result of Detective's Visit to the Premises.

Williams' Bullet Caused Varcoe's Death—The Wound Made by McIntosh a Superficial One—Some Interesting Evidence at the Inquest—McIntosh's Identity.

The number of the witnesses in the Varcoe inquest last night at the Police Court was so large that the inquiry could not be concluded, and an adjournment had to be made until Friday evening. Crown Attorney Dewart conducted the examination of the witnesses, and they were cross-examined by Mr. T. C. Robinette representing the prisoner Williams. The latter sat quietly in the Police Court dock. He did not appear to be much affected by the evidence, but at one point a tear slowly trickled down his cheek.

The Three Bullets.

The report of the post-mortem examination, made by Drs. Caven, Cotton and Nevitt, showed that there were a number of cuts and gashes on the scalp, some of them appearing to have been caused by a revolver barrel. In addition there was a bullet wound in the back of the head, extending downwards. There was also a bullet wound in the left flank and another near the left nipple. One ball lodged in the upper part of the left lung. This was the bullet that entered the head. A 32 calibre bullet was found in the abdomen, having penetrated the stomach. The third bullet was found superficially embedded. It was a 22 calibre bullet. The wounds caused by the 32-calibre bullets were the ones that caused death.

The hair adhering to the cylinder of one of the revolvers produced was similar to Mr. Varcoe's hair, Dr. Caven stated.

The Scene of the Murder.

Detective Cuddy told of his visit to the scene of the murder, about six hours after it occurred. He said that he found a rear cellar window opened, with empty boxes piled up on the inside, forming steps down into the cellar. A stairway led up from the cellar to the store, and a stairway from that to the floor above. A kitchen, sitting room and bedroom were on the first floor. The east front window of the sitting room was broken, as were two chairs. On the second floor were bedrooms. The door of the front room had been pried open by a chisel, the same size as the one found under the prisoner Williams and marked exhibit "1." The room was in disorder. On a bed were blankets and pillows, stained with blood. There were powder marks on the blankets and blood on clothing identified as that of Varcoe. The other bedroom on the floor was at the head of the stairs. The bedroom on the floor below had not been forced open, so far as could be seen.

His Thrilling Experience.

Frank Armstrong, of 181 Queen street, east, said that on the night of November 8 there were in the house, besides himself, Noah Thomas, Allan Varcoe, Mrs. Armstrong, her two daughters and three younger sons, Miss Loake, Varcoe, the deceased, and his little girl. In the bedroom on the first floor Thomas, Allan Varcoe and the witness slept. When Armstrong retired he left Mr. Varcoe down in the store talking. Mr. Varcoe went up to bed before ten o'clock. Then the witness heard the other occupants going to bed and went to sleep.

He was awakened by Allan Varcoe, who jumped out of bed. He saw a light in the hall. "A man rushed into the room with a revolver," said the witness. "He told me to lie down and I did so immediately. I heard another man in the hall." The man who came into the room was McIntosh, the witness said. He shielded himself partly with his coat. Then he ordered the three occupants of the room to pull the bed clothes over their heads, and they obeyed. "We heard two men in the room while our heads were covered. They went through the drawers of our dresser and searched our pants. Then they arranged for one to stay and guard us. If anyone raised he was to shoot him. The next I heard was footsteps upstairs. Then two shots and the little girl screaming all at once. Allan Varcoe said he couldn't stand it any longer, and we all went out to the front room and raised the west window and yelled for the police.

"Two men were rushing down stairs from Mr. Varcoe's room. They ran into the front room and one raised the window and got out. The second man rushed to it, and Allan Varcoe struck him with a chair. He swung around and Thomas hit him and sent him through the window. He fell on the pavement stunned. The other man hung from the awning rod with one hand and his revolver in the other, pointing at the policeman. The next I saw was him running and the constable after him."

The witness then related how he found Varcoe lying bleeding on the floor and summoned the doctors. He identified a number of articles produced as belonging to the store. In cross-examination Armstrong said that the man who was knocked out of the window did not try to draw a weapon when he saw him. He did not see anything in the hand of the first man either.

McIntosh's Identity.

The police have been informed that the father and brother of the dead man, Curtis, or McIntosh, are living in the city. Curtis, it is claimed, was born and brought up here. At any rate it is certain that his father was in the city on the day following the shooting of Varcoe, and that he retained legal counsel for his son's defence. The statement that the dead prisoner Curtis was connected with a George street family of the same name is said to be entirely wrong.

Williams, the other prisoner, admits having known Curtis for about a year. Williams appears to be well connected, and his counsel states that he has no previous criminal record. He maintains that the other man did the shooting.

The inquest upon the death of McIntosh will be continued at police headquarters to-night, and the evidence taken which bears on the death of Mr. Varcoe will be read to the coroner's jury at the continuation of the inquest. The name of the man who guarded Williams when he lay stunned on the pavement has been learned. Heny Spottingwood, 219 Berkeley-st., was the man, and he will be called as a witness.

The body of McIntosh has been handed over to Alex. Millard, Inspector of Anatomy, by order of Coroner Johnson.

THE BATTLE OF LIFE AND [illegible] [illegible]

HARD CHASE AFTER A THIEF.

Who Finally Escaped Into the Woods—Exciting Incident Near Kingston.

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 15.—At an early hour this morning fire was discovered in the rear of the fruit store on Princess street, owned by Joseph Hiscock. The firemen worked hard and saved the building, from entire destruction. Hiscock's groceries and fruit were ruined by the fire and water. His loss is heavy, but he carries a good insurance. The building, owned by Richard Waldron, was also insured. The smoke penetrated the wholesale house of MacNee & Minnes, and the carpet and house furnishings store of R McFaul, doing heavy damage. They both carry insurance. Wm Smith sleeping in MacNee & Minnes' store had a narrow escape from suffocation.

Yesterday afternoon the local police received a telegram from Newboro' on the Rideau canal, to arrest two men who were supposed to have burglarized C H Reid's general store at North Augusta last Friday night. Constables Arniel and Bateson found the two men, who disembarked from the Newboro' stage about two miles outside of the city. They placed the men under arrest, but after proceeding along quietly for some yards, one of the prisoners thrust a revolver in Bateson's face and threatened to shoot if he stirred. He backed away and then ran.

Arniel handed his man over to Sergt. Snooden, and both Arniel and Bateson went after the fleeing burglar, whom they chased seven miles. So close did they press him that he discarded his overcoat. Several times he threatened to shoot the constables, and declared he would die before being taken. Under cover of darkness he escaped into a dense wood and could not be found. The man captured gave his name as Jack Wilson. He was attired in a suit of clothes, overcoat, boots, etc., stolen from Reid's store.

BOERS ARE CLOSE TO GEN. WHITE'S POSITION.

Report That Cannonading Has Ceased and Rifle Firing Commenced, But No Details Received of Battle.

ALL EANLAND ANXIOUS ABOUT LADYSMITH.

In Some Quarters This is Taken to Indicate That Gen. White's Position Has Been Assaulted. Further Details of Boers' Repulse by Baden-Powell.

London, Nov. 15.—It was officially announced this afternoon that the British transport Goorkha, with the first Brigade staff, the third battalion of the Grenadier Guards and a detachment of the Royal Engineers; the transport Manila, with the second Devonshires, and the transport Nomadic, with the remounts, have arrived at Cape Town.

The transport Britannic, with the Royal Irish Rifles, has sailed from Cape Town for East London.

London, Nov. 15.—The Paris Matin and other pro-Boer papers publish despatches to-day announcing the fall of Ladysmith. Several of these papers represent that the garrison is thoroughly demoralized and insubordinate.

BY WAY OF PRETORIA.

Cape Town, Friday, Nov. 10.—A despatch received here from Pretoria under date of Thursday, Nov. 8, says the reports received there from Ladysmith said heavy cannonading started at daybreak, that some of the Boer forces were within 1,500 yards of the British when the cannonading ceased and rifle fire commenced. The Pretoria despatch also announced that all was quiet at Mafeking and Kimberley.

ATTACK ON LADYSMITH.

London, Nov. 15.—If the news contained in the Pretoria despatches of Thursday, Nov. 9, by way of Cape Town Friday, Nov. 10, is correct, and there is every reason to believe it is accurate, as the Boers despatches have almost invariably, hitherto, rendered fairly accurate accounts, it is claimed here that it implies that a general assault on Ladysmith was pending when General Joubert's report was sent off. Attention was called to the fact that the date, Nov. 9, is assumed to be the date of General White's last pigeon post message announcing a renewal of the bombardment since which nothing has been received except rumours from Estcourt, that the bombardment was suspended Nov. 10. It is claimed that the Boers got their forces within 1,500 yards of the British position it shows, they fully realised the necessity of utilising the brief interval before the arrival of the British reinforcements to make a determined attempt to storm General White's position.

To successfully advance so close to Ladysmith, it is pointed out, the Boers must have been most active in entrenching, and the nearness of the besieging lines, it is added, indicates their readiness for the assault, which there is a disposition in military circles to believe the Boers were not willing to undertake. It must, however, have been patent to General Joubert that to the fire of his artillery, and therefore, he had no choice but to assault the place or retire to the passes of the Drakenberg, in the hope of involving the pursuing British in the intricate fastness of the mountain. The cessation of cannonade mentioned in the despatch, and in opening of musketry fire, implies, it is claimed, that the Boers were obliged to stop their artillery for fear of hitting their own men, and that nothing further had been heard from this movement is regarded here as an indication either that the threatened assault was postponed or that the result was indecisive; otherwise, it is claimed, something further would have leaked out before now.

A Paris paper this morning gleefully announces the fall and capture of Ladysmith, but reports from this source no longer causes a ripple of excitement. Nevertheless, there will be considerable anxiety here until the War Office or some independent version of the latest developments at Ladysmith is known.

A private message from Mafeking reports that all was well there Friday, November 6. The details of the fighting at Mafeking, received by way of Cape Town and Magalapye, relate to the engagement of October 25, already reported. The story, however, is pleasant reading to the British, as it shows the garrison was cheerful, well-provisioned and confident.

The possible revolt of the Basuto chief, Joel, who it has been announced may join the Boers, is attributed to tribal jealousy. There has been a long feud between the half-brothers, Jonathan and Joel, the latter refusing to recognize his brother's nomination as chief. Joel, therefore, took an anti-British side against Jonathan in 1880, and committed most hideous atrocities If he joins the Boers it is prophesied Chiefs Lerotnid, Jonathan and others are liable to make short work of the recalcitrants.

THAT WHITE FLAG STORY.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—The Record publishes the following special to-day:—

Save for the announcement of the arrival of some troopships at Cape Town, bringing about 13,000 soldiers, no news of any serious import has been received here since yesterday, so we in London are entirely ignorant of the actual position of the British forces at Ladysmith, Kimberley or Mafeking during the last two or three days. Telegraphic delay chiefly accounts for the dearth of information, though the strict censorship is also responsible for it. Even the establishment of heliograph communication between Ladysmith and Estcourt does not give any really definite news of the beleaguered city later than Friday, when it was briefly told that the bombardment was proceeding without any particular harm being done. In the absence of precise information, attention here is directed toward the various side issues chief of which is the Times correspondent's interview with Father Matthew's, chaplain of the 1st Battalion of the Irish Fusiliers, who was captured at Nicholson's Nek, and who asserts that the white flag was hoisted on that occasion without authority by a subaltern. Much indignation has been aroused by the publication of the story, and military authorities agree that if literally true Father Matthews should not have told a correspondent, that the latter should not have reported it, and that the censor should not have passed it. The military man seems to think, however, that the story is merely a piece of gossip told by a gentleman who was a non-combatant and whose knowledge of war tactics and usages is necessarily limited. The allegation that the officer, no matter what his position, should take it on himself to raise a white flag and thus surrender to the enemy two regiments nearly 1,000 strong, is so serious that a court of enquiry will, without doubt, be formed to ascertain its truth.

If this is not done at once it will be left to General Buller to make an enquiry at the close of the war and bring to court-martial the party responsible for the great disaster, and one actually involving the honor of the British army. In any case the truth and if possible the whole truth, will be got at. Meanwhile Father Matthew's story is the sole topic in the clubs.

A rumor that Secretary Reitz had threatened to shoot six British officers if the Transvaal spy captured in Ladysmith is not released, is not thought to be literally true. Another account has it that President Kruger threatened to execute British officers if they spy were hanged. This is more credible, but there is perfect confidence here in Buller's ability to adequately deal with the circumstances. In any case it is not believed that in any event the threat will be fulfilled.

An interesting letter appears in the Times to-day. It is from Cape Town, and explains for the first time the Boer delay in declaring war before the first British reinforcements arrived. The fact is, Joubert's troops were not ready to move, because the rolling stock was employed at the front, and commissarit was entirely neglected. In these circumstances a forward move was impossible until food supplies had accumulated. A valuable week was lost and 5,000 British troops were landed from India. The letter also explains why the Boers did not invade defenceless Cape Colony at the beginning of the war. This was due to the want of a directing head and to the fact that a sufficient strong commando could not be found in the southern part of the Orange Free State.

The Defence of Mafeking.

Meanwhile the defence of Mafeking continues to form the brightest feature of the campaign. Colonel Baden-Powell is universally praised for bringing out the best qualities of his troops, and for proving himself more than equal to the occasion. He not only repels the Boer attacks, but carries the war into the enemy's camp. His constantly attacks which are uniformly successful, and his plucky resistance are both creditable to the British army and not only this, but he keeps a large number of the Boers confined to attempting an apparently hopeless task. News that Kimberely garrison lives on reduced rations causes anxiety here. but it is thought it has sufficient food to hold out until relieved by General Buller. The landing of British troops at the Cape indicates that the real campaign will be soon begun. That General White's relief is considered a matter of pressing importance is again evinced by the satisfaction with which the officials heard of the arrival of the transport Armenian at Cape Town yesterday, a couple of days before her time. It is considered unfortunate however, that neither cavalry or artillery has yet reached South Africa. This threatens a serious delay in General Methuen's arrangements for the relief of General White. It is true the first division still lacks cavalry, but in all probability the first arrivals of that arm at Cape Town will be sent to Durban irrespective of which division they were originally assigned to. The latest accounts to hand indicate that the bombardment of Ladysmith has increased the intensity during the last few days, and though all messages from there speak of the confidence of defenders, a load of anxiety will be removed when unrestrained communication with the beleaguered town is re-established.

EFFECTIVE BRITISH CHARGE

Cape Town, Nov. 15.—An undated despatch from Mafeking, received by runner via Magalapye, Wednesday, November 8th, says: "To-day all is quiet. We have been bombarded pretty heavily all week. Friday night [illegible], with a squadron of the Protectorate Regiment, made a magnificent [illegible] charge upon [illegible] entrenchment, driving them from their positions and bayoneting numbers of the Boers, who must have lost very heavily. The charge was most gallant and determined. The party could not hold the trenches, and lost six men killed, two prisoners and nine wounded in their retirement. We expect a general attack to-morrow. The bombardment has been most ineffectual. Every one remains under shell-proof cover. So far the shells have only wounded one man. The enemy are using one 94 pound howitzer and seven other guns, from 7 to 12 pounders. The town is most cheerful, and determined to resist attack to the utmost. The Boers are entrenched on every side in great numbers, and are pushing gradually closer and closer to the town fortifications. We are well off for provisions and water, though very tired dodging shells and fighting. Quite on civilized lines, General Cronje has always given due notice of a bombardment, and allowed an ambulance party two hours, on Saturday, to recover the bodies of the six dead left in the vicinity of the Boer trenches. On Friday night Jan Botha, the well known Boer commandant, told a man with the ambulance party that their loss had been heavy and that his heart was very sore.

The wounded include Captain Fitz-Clarence and Lieut, Swinburn, both slightly.

In a skirmish at the outposts yesterday one trooper was killed and nine were wounded

Bought Nova Scotia Land

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 15.—B. F. and D. P. Young have sold for $300,000 their property at St. Margaret's Bay, consisting of 30,000 acres of land, to Peter Ryan, the Toronto contractor, who, it is understood, is acting for Michigan and Chicago capitalists, who will continue lumbering operations and manufacture pulp. It is expected that about 1,000,000 will be expended in improvements and developments.

Verdict of Murder.

Forest, Nov. 15.—The jury in the inquest on the body of the man found beside the G.T.R. track near here, returned the following verdict; "That a certain man, whose name is to the jury unknown, on or about the 11th day of November, 1899, at the township of Plympton, in the County of Lambton, unlawfully and with malice aforethough did kill and murder a certain other man, who name is also to this jury unknown."

Put the Heads in Salt.

Gibraltar, Nov. 15.—The Sultan of Morocco has sent a letter to the authorities at Rabat, an important seaport on the west coast of Morocco, announcing that he has sent them the heads of the latest batch of prisoners executed, "for the poor Jews to salt and place over the city gates.' The very considerable European colony at Rabat complains bitterly of the barborous practice. Almost daily, it is said, this ghastly spectacle is to be seen at the limits of the city.

Against the Government.

St. John's, Nfld., Nov. 14.—The Ministerial party has been defeated in the bye-elections in the divisions of St. John's and Fortune Bay, the Liberals carrying the former by a majority of 426 and the latter by a majority of 117. The Government had thus lost three elections this year.

Bristol's Welcome.

Bristol, Nov. 15.—The visit of Queen Victoria here to-day to open the convalescent home of Clifton, was made the occasion for a great display of patriotism. The town was lavishly decorated and Her Majesty passed through six miles of venetian masts, Imperial standards, heraldic designs and garlands of flowers.

Thirty miles brought immense crowds of visitors to Bristol.

A Liberal Gets the Job.

Edinburgh, Nov. 15.—The Right Hon. John Blair Balfour, Q. C., member of Parliament for Clackmannan, and Kinross, one of the foremost Liberals of Scotland, has been appointed Lord President of the Scots Court of Session, in succession to Lord Robertson, who has recently been made appellate judge. It is something unprecedented that a Liberal lawyer and politician should receive such an appointment from the opposite party.

Swore to Purity.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—All the officials and players of the Shamrock Lacrosse Club appeared before O'Hara Baynes, Official Commissioner of the Senior Lacrosse League, and made affidavits that they were "Simon Pure" amateurs. It is likely they will shortly be in possession of the lacrosse trophy.

A meeting of the Senior League will be held next week to decide what shape the trophy will take.

For Fox Bay Men.

Ottawa, Nov. 155.—In connection with the Fox Bay settlers on Island Anticosti, who are in poor circumstances, it is said that the federal government will be willing to pay their fares to Manitoba or the North West, where they will have no difficulty in earning a livelihood and be better off than if they never quarrelled with Meiner, owner of the Island.

A SPECIAL SESSION

Of the Town Council Held Last Night.

PAVEMENT CONSTRUCTION

Urged to be Pushed by Alderman Langford.

Ald. Hall Favors Amending Bicycle By-law So That Riders Can Use Sidewalks Between Five and Seven in the Morning—This is Not Approved of.

The Town Council met in special session last night, when there were present Mayor Davis, and Aldermen Denne, Corkery, Neill, Sawers Langford, Weir, Best and E. H. D. Hall.

Sale of Debentures.

Ald. Denne moved, seconded by Ald. Neill,—That the Council accepts the offer of Mr. George Read to purchase at par the debentures authorized to be issued by By-laws Nos. 877 and 844, and also that the offer of the Commissioners of the Peterborough Town Trust to take at par those issued under by-laws No. 822, 878 and 879, be accepted, and that this Council is willing for the Commissioners to sell one thousand dollars of each class of debentures, namely—One thousand dollars issued under By-law No. 822, and one thousand dollars issued under By-law No. 877 or 879, to the Little Lake Cemetery Co. at par, and further, that the Mayor and Treasurer be authorized to complete these transactions.—Carried

Legal Disbursements

Ald. Langford moved, seconded by Ald. Hall,—That the Town Solicitor be allowed $100 towards his disbursements in connection with the granolithic sidewalk investigation now in progress.—Carried

In the Matter of Sewers.

The Council discussed at length the present condition of Stewart and Aylmer street sewers, which it appears are completely plugged up. Ald. Langford thought the trouble had been caused through the lack of thorough and systematic flushing.

It was decided to instruct Mr. English to report, through Engineer Hay, to the Board of Works, by Monday night, as to the condition of these sewers.

Ald. Neill thought the Council had been very slack in this direction and favored appointing a thoroughly competent man to look after the town's sewers.

On motion of Ald. Langford the town engineer was instructed to prepare plans for the construction of sewers from Dublin to Smith, on either George or Water streets; from McDonnel to Dublin; on Harvey street, from Brock to Murray; on Stewart street, and on Park and other streets as advertised.

Asked to Reconsider.

Ald. Hall moved, seconded by Ald. Denne,—That Mr. John Carnegie be requested to withdraw his resignation as a Commissioner of the Town Trust.—Carried.

Street Watering.

On motion of Ald. Corkery, Town Treasurer Brownscombe was authorized to issue a cheque for $5 to Z. Blodgett, in payment for extra work in the matter of street watering.

In Favor of Wheelmen.

At this juncture Ald. Hall suggested that wheelmen should be priviledged to ride on the sidewalks during the early hours of the morning where streets are impassable for such traffic. He would like to see the by-law amended in this direction, provided a speed limit was fixed and riders prohibited from passing pedestrians.

Alds. Neill and Denne did not favor amending the by-law in any particular.

Ald. Langford thought Ald. Hall's suggestion a good one and moved that a by-law be prepared to amend the present bicycle by-law allowing riders to use the sidewalks between the hours of five and seven o'clock a. m.

Ald. Best moved in amendment, seconded by Ald. Neill,—That the by-law be not amended.

The amendment was carried.

Ald. Hall here proposed that the Chief of Police be permitted to ride on the sidewalks in any case of emergency. The majority of the Aldermen, however, did not favor discriminating in favor of the police or any other officials, and the matter was dropped.

The Council then adjourned.

Result of a Prize Fight.

New York, Nov. 13.—Harry Appel, the prize-fighter lies at the point of death at the Norwegian hospital suffering from a concussion of the brain as the result of his fight with Jack Fox at the Pelican Athletic Club, Brooklyn, Saturday night. The injury was not the result of a blow but of an accidental trip which sent him heavily to the floor.

"Salted Carrion."

London, Nov. 15.—A letter in the Times, written by an officer on board the transport Nubia, asserting that '1,60 rations of salt carion, labelled New York, 1899, had to be thrown overboard, as it was full of disease.' adding; 'they only salt down the very worst portions of very inferior beasts and pigs,' has aroused a storm of indignation against the rascally contractors and incapable Admiralty transport officers, who are allowed filthy, salted brisket beef to be furnished to the troops.'

Nothing is occurring to disprove from the facts it's making that if England picked a quarrel with the Transvaal it picked it before it was ripe.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 16, 1899

A BIG INDUSTRY

The statement current that the Edward Lloyd Company Limited, of London, England, is about to erect an immense paper mill on the Canadian side of the Niagara Falls, is of happy import to that section of the Dominion. The manufacture of paper is one of the great industries of the world. It is represented that the new company will expend between five and six million dollars in construction and equipment, and that over two thousand men will be employed in the mills when completed. When will some of the great little men, who administer the governemnt, rise to the situation. We have it quite within our power to monopolize the paper manufacturing business of the universe. This fact is generally admitted. The entire world is now looking to Canada for wood from which to manufacture paper. What do we do? We let them take it and welcome. It is quite impossible for any outsider to understand what deters the government from prohibiting the export of pulp wood. It would seem the simplest thing imaginable to declare that all such wood must be manufactured into paper in Canada. A stiff export duty on pulp wood, would accomplish this end. What are the little great men at Ottawa thinking about it while the country is being stripped of its pulp wood wealth without adequate resources.

THE PARIS EXPOSITION.

GREAT SHOWING TO BE MADE OF ONTARIO'S MINERALS.

Will be Sent From the Laboratory in This City—An Interesting Report Made by the Assay Office

The statement of laboratory work done at the Ontario Government Assay Office, located at Belleville which is conducted by the Bureau of Mines as an aid to the discovery and development of the mineral resources of the northern portion of Ontario shows a total receipt of 160 samples of ore sent in for examination during the month of October.

The determinations on samples sent in for assay or analysis aggregated 156, consisting of 98 for gold, 18 for gold and silver, 6 nickel, 16 copper, 1 zinc, 1 arsenic and 1 platinum. Seven iron ores, mostly magnetites from Eastern Ontario, were sent in for partial or complete analysis as to smelting quality.

The fees collected on 149 determinations done for the public amounted to $152.56, being about one-half the customary rates. The Bureau of Mines required 7 assays from the laboratory.

The samples sent in for indentification or report as to probable commercial value numbered 15 for the month, on which nominal fees amounting to $5 were collected

During the past month the Bureau of Mines has forwarded representative samples of ore from all the working mines in Ontario to the Geological Survey Department at Ottawa, for shipment to the Paris Expositino to be held in 1900. The samples consist of free-milling gold ores from the various mines and developed prospects in the Rat Portage, Seine River, Shoal Lake, Wabigoon and Manitou districts; also from the Michipicoten, Wahmpetae and North Hastings districts. Iron ores, magnetites and hematites from the Mattawin and Atikokan ranges, which will shortly be retapped by the Ontarion and Rainy River Railway, under construction, together with the hematites ores from the extensive deposits being opened up in the Michipicoten district by the Algoma Central Railway, will form a collection of great interest to iron-masters and foundry men. Eastern Ontario also sends a few first grade hematites and magnetites. The Sudbury district is represented by samples of nickel copper bearing pyrrhatites from the extensive deposits which have been worked for several years by the Canadian Copper Company, the Vivian Co., of Swansea, and other metallurgical concerns.

Probably the most attractive samples on the collection are the peacock ores from the Parry Sound district which are rich in copper, running as high as 65 per cent. copper and carrying small gold values. The Parry Sound district has hitherto been known only for its lumbering industry, but it may yet become a copper producer, judging from the recent developments in the prospects so far exploited.

Eastern Ontario is represented by samples from the following working mines or prospects so for opened as to be called mines—Arsenical gold ores, partially free milling from the Deloro mine, Gatling five acres, the Diamond mine, the James property in North Hastings, free-milling gold ores from the Belmont in Peterboro county, the Boerth mine and Little Doris in Fontenac county, the Craig, Crescent, Landenburger and other properties in North Hastings. Hematite iron ores from the from the Wallbridge, Welsh, Cook and St. Charles mines in North Hastings, also from the large deposits at Calabogie and Wilbur in Frontenac county. Magnetic iron ores from the Dufferin, Coe Hill and Irondale deposits in North Hastings, also from the Bedford and Robertsville mines in Frontenac. The collection also includes zinc blende from the Hogan mine at Millbridge, galena from the Hollindia and tetrahedrite copper ore from the Chisholm mine near Cloyne, upon which extensive exploratory work is being done by New York capitalists.

The non-metalliferous minerals of commercial value are also represented by rough and thumb-dressed amber mica from Frontenac county where seven deposits are being worked at present, the product being used in electrical works. Other economic minerals such as phosphate, felspar, baribe, graphite are included.

The corundum deposits in North Hastings are represented by a series of specimens prepared by W. G. Miller, professor of geology, Queen's University, Kingston, who conducted the exploratory survey for the Ontario Government and, starting from the known deposit in Carlow township, has discovered and marked out the belt of corundum bearing rocks in Renfrew, Peterborough, Frontenac and North Hastings counties. These samples range from almost pure corundum as found in Carlow to the low grade running about 12 per cent. corundum.

With the specimens ofcrude orethere is a series of concentration products of variousgrades, being the results of the treatment of 18 tons of ore in the melting laboratory of the Kingston School of Mines.

The deposits in Carlow are being opened up by the Canada Corundum Company of Toronto, who propose to utilize the product in making emery wheels, paper, etc.

Building stones in Eastern Ontario are represented by the Crookston and Point Anne quarries near Belleville. The sample from the latter quatty being an excellent square-dressed stone presented by Mr. Robert Boyde, superintendent of the quarry.

This collection, consisting of over 300 samples of ore of commercial value, will serve as a practical illustration to the metallurgists and manufacturers of the old world in search of raw material as to the extent and variety of the mineral resources of Ontario.

A carefully compiled descriptive catalogue with full information and photographs accompanies the specimens.

The collection also illustrates how far capital has been employed in Ontario hitherto known only as an agricultural and lumbering country in utilizing the wealth of the mine.

In 1890 when the Royal commission was appointed to report on the mineral resources of Ontario, there were nine working mines mostly for iron ore, silver and mica. In 1891 the Bureau of Mines was organized with Mr. Archibald Blue as director and the annual report of the Bureau shows a steady increase in production from $4,705,673 in 1891 to $7,235,877 in 1898. The greatest increase being in value of metallic products from $383,715 in 1891 to $1,489,666 in 1898.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and specially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little cañyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."

Bone dust for raspberries and blackberries may be simply scattered broadcast over the ground, as the necessary cultivation will work it sufficiently in with the soil.

While peach seedlings are usually healthier and last longer than budded trees, one is never sure what kind of fruit a seedling will produce when it comes into bearing.—Exchange.

The Graphophone

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

HAS IT EVAPORATED?

The Whereabouts of Aguinaldo's Army a Mystery.

AMERICANS ARE WELCOMED

Insurgents Have Drained All the Resources of the Province.

The Army Has Impressed a Large Share of the Crops, and the People Are Miserably Poor—Insurgents Are Active Near Manila.

Manila, Nov. 14.—The whereabouts of Auginaldo and his army and Cabinet is a perfect engima. General Otis has learned that AAguinaldo recently issued a proclamation transferring the capital to Bonabong, giving as a reason for the step the unsanitary condition of aralac.

It is supposed that the leaders of the insurrection who are already at Borabong are retreating to that place, though they left Tarlac, whether they are travelling with the army, how many of the soldiers they were able to hold together, and whether the leaders of the troops have got beyond General Lawton's line are all unknown. It is hoped, however, that General Wheaton has effected a junction with General Young, forming a cordon from San Fabian to Caniadro.

General Lawton has 6,000 men and Gen. Wheaton 2,700, a small force to control so many miles, but it commands the main roads by which the insurgents must move to the ortheast. Witht he Americans advancing at the present rate they could drive the insurgents from Bongabong in a fortnight, and it is impossible for the rebels to establish another capital in Luzon which cannot be captured within a month.

Americans Welcomed.

A majority of the natives welcome the army enthustically.

The insurgents have drained the resources oft he province. The army has impressed a large share of the corps and the people are miserably poor. Everywhere are elaborate trenches built by the non-combatants, working day and night. The Americans found large stores of rice at Tarlac, Tubig and elsewhere, and several thousand new Filipino uniforms were captured at Tubig. Thirty insurgents surrendered to General MacArthur, receiving $30 for each gun.

Maor Marsh's battalion of the 63rd Regiment, which includes many old roughriders from trhe southwest, attacked and defeated 400 Filipinos three miles from San Fabian, on the Dagupan road, on Friday. Fourteen Filipinos were killed and two Americans wounded.

Active Near Manila

The insurgents have resumed their activity in the Cavite Province, threatening an attack on Imus. Yesterday they attacked Calamba, in the usual fashion. A nightly fusilade between the marines and the hundred insurgents, who have again entrenched themselves on the isthmus between Cavite and Navelta is plainly to be heard in Manila. On Saturday the Filipinos attempted to entrap the marines by landing a force from Casroes behind them. The searchlights of the Petrel discovered the preparations to embark and a few shots from the Monadnock's and Petrel's guns spoiled the game.

ESCAPED SPANISH PRISONER.

Washington, Nov. 14.—The following was received at the Navy Department from Admiral Watson to-day—

"Manila, Nov. 14.—Escaped Spanish prisoners at San Fabian report seeing Gilmore in Tarlac Nov. 6 with five men, all well. He crossed mountain from Baler in May with 13 men. Location of other eight unknown."

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in 'Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (I, 257)

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how the mournful crocodile

With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
—"2, Henry VI.," I, 226.
—"Poet's Lore."

Dreyfus Case Again.

Paris, Nov. 14.—Col Picquart has written a letter to the Premier, M Waldeck-Rousseau, asking for a judicial inquiry into the proceedings of General Gonse and M Gribelin, of the Archives Bureau, in connection with the Dreyfus case.

COPPER SHARES.
LARGEST DIVIDENDS. SAFEST INVESTMENT.

Boston & Texas Copper Company.

CAPITAL STOCK $2,500,000.

PRESTON R. MANSFIELD, Treasurer Abbott M'f'g Co., Dedham, Mass.
HON. GEO. D. ALDEN, Boston, Mass.
E. A. SMITH, Capitalist, Lowell, Mass.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment. This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

WILLIAMS PUTS UP A DEFENCE.

Says That Curtis Fired All Three Shots, Borrowing His Revolver.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—Williams, the survivor of the two burglars who murdered J. E. Varcoe last week, has acknowledged he has known Curtis, off and on for a year. As far as he knows, Williams says, the dead burglar's name is Curtis.

Williams is in receipt of plenty of money for his defence, but refuses to divulge the whereabouts of his relatives.

He says he never spent a day behind the bars. He says Curtis planned the Varcoe robbery.

Inspector Stark to-day received a photograph of Joseph Martin, the man the Montreal detectives believed was the dead desperado, and it was easily seen that Martin is not the man.

The police to-day discovered the man "Harry" who assisted Policeman Dickson in the capture of the two men. He lives at the head of Seaton street and will give evidence at the inquest to-night. He says that the burglars both ran down stairs into the store after the shooting, and, seeing Dickson and himself, fled upstairs again and out of the window.

It is probable that the line of defence for Williams will be that McIntosh fired the first shot at Varcoe, then damaged his weapon by battering the struggling man on the head with it, and borrowed Williams' revolver to finish the job, and that Williams was adverse to the shooting.

Mr. T. C. Robinette, the prisoner's counsel, is confident that Williams will escape the scaffold.

It was reported to-day that Curtis was the son of a former drill instructor at Stanley Barracks, and that a brother at one time kept an hotel or restaurant on King street.

One Was Smothered.

London, Ont., Nov. 14.—Neighbors entered the home of Samuel L. Milliken yesterday morning an found him, with his wife and two sons, unconscious from the fumes of coal gas. Andrew the younger boy, was dead when the doctors arrived, and it was several hours before the rest of the family were brought back to life. Mrs. Milliken, however, was very low last night, and it is feared may not recover. The escape of gas was caused by a defective conection between a pipe and the coal stove.

VIVID HEALTH

Nothing is as rare as charity, easily impaired and often lost—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of sickness in the gain of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the altering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of it impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the fire of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and so Death gathers in his chequer.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Straight, full skirts continue to be used in making up sheer transparent summer textiles for slender waists.

The new corded taffeta silks in a great variety of summer colorings and effects are in favor for making up dressy shirt waists.

The black and white striped fabrics in silk or silk and wool effects, which impart length and slenderness to the figure, are uncommonly handsome and varied in design this year.

The pretty Tudor sleeve, cut off at the top and finished above the deep upward point with a small gathered cap of fabric matching the yoke or guimpe, is a model used on costumes and toilets of every sort.

On many of the costumes of foulard, figured taffeta or surah, drap de chine, drap d'ete, summer costume cloth, etc., the waist is belled at the back and on the sides, but in front is in jacket style, with tabbed ends falling below the waist line.

One of the most graceful summer models for a rather full figure, to use in making up organdie muslin, dimity, batiste and similar goods, is the new seven gored model, with a pretty demitrain, to be made up separately over a foundation skirt of exactly the same shape.

Skirts with closings at the side instead of at the back are now the most favored. If so arranged, the round waist or basque bodice can be permanently fastened to the skirt at the back, thus avoiding the time and trouble necessarily given to a waist and skirt differently laced or hooked.

White veiling or barege may be as elaborately trimmed as a white organdie. It will have as cool an effect, be nearly as comfortable on a hot day as cotton, and during a sudden change in the temperature the light wool gown will give the needed protection.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Kyrle Bellew denies the rumor that he is coming to the United States with Henry Irving.

Rose Coghlan, who plays in "Mlle. Fifi," has patented a sunshade for use at the seashore.

A dramatization of "The Hidden Hand," by Mrs. Southworth, was recently produced in Chicago.

Digby Bell is to be seen in "Arizona." Next season he will be in one of Charles Frohman's companies.

Phoebe Davies has a belt made from Mauser shells found on dead Spaniards after the fight on San Juan hill.

Since Calve has her tombstone and Sarah Bernhardt her coffin, why do not certain would be players go and bury themselves?

At the Filipino theater of Manila it is the custom to show appreciation by tossing coins on the stage in lieu of bouquets.

The German emperor's play, "Eisenzahn," means "The Iron Tooth," and, with his imperial pull, it should draw well.

Vonie Bennett, sister to the late Alice Atherton and widow of the comedian John A. Mackey, will appear in the vaudeville theaters.

As an instance of how the romantic drama has revived abroad, no less than six companies are touring England with "The King's Musketeer."

It is stated that Reginald De Koven has received about $75,000 from "Robin Hood." Barrie will probably take $100,000 or more from "The Little Minister."

Aubrey Boucicault, who plays the husband in "Mlle. Fifi," is said to have inherited some of his father's talent as a playwright and is now finishing two plays which may be produced next season.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A folding stepladder has recently come into use in which the legs and step supports are hinged at the center to close up when not in use, allowing the ladder to be stored in about half the space of the old ladder.

A carving knife sharpener and fork guard are combined in a Pennsylvanian's patent, the upper portion of the guard having two disks carried on spindles to rotate as the edge of the knife is drawn between them.

In a new bicycle tire the resiliency is obtained by hollowing the face of the rim deeply and stretching a strip of fabric across the face, with a ring of rubber or other flexible material suspended in the center of the fabric.

A pneumatic axle bearing for vehicles has been patented to take the place of inflated tires on road wagons, being less liable to puncture, the weight being carried by pneumatic rings placed inside drums surrounding the axle.

THE BOOKMAKERS.

Margaret Deland says she reads economics, history and the newspapers for instruction and novels only for entertainment.

R. W. Chambers, when not writing books, gives his time to many fads. He collects butterflies, designs uniforms and keeps up his painting.

Max Pemberton, the author, is also a good business man and combines with his literary labors the London agency for an American publishing house. His home in West Hampstead is an ideal place.

Dr. Conan Doyle, it is reported, intends to contest a seat in parliament. Meanwhile he is turning into a playwright. He has just brought out a play (a domestic drama called "Halves") in Scotland and is about to produce another.

ANOTHER SEAT VACANT

Member for East Elgin Unseated by the Courts.

HON. MR. GARROW MAY GO.

An Association's Agency in Campaign Not Ended in Nomination.

And The Same Point Which Unseats Mr Brower in East Elgin May be the Means of Unseating Hon. J. T. Garrow in West Huron.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—The Court of Appeal handed out judgment in the East Elgin Provincial election appeal this morning. Mr. C. A. Brower, the Conservative member, was unseated. The same point which unseats Mr. Brower, is up in the West Huron case, and may result in the unseating of Hon. J. T. Garrow.

The trial judges, it will be remembered, found there were corrupt acts on the part of two men, Taylor and Luton, but they held that agency was not established, and confirmed Mr. Brower in his seat. A. B. Aylesworth, for the Liberals, appealed against this decision and the Court of Appeal has voided the election for the following reasons—

Chief Justice Burton said the Conservative Association of East Elgin had followed the usual practice in selecting a candidate. He pointed out that the trial judges held that the activity of the Association ceased right there. A majority of the Judges of the Court of Appeal, however, were of a different opinion and were convinced that agency had been established, at least as far as Taylor was concerned. It was not clearly established in the case of Lutton. The election would, therefore, be voided with costs.

Mr. Maclennan was the only dissentient from this judgment.

"Since Mr. Brower is unseated the other bye-elections will be delayed a little," said a prominent Liberal this morning. "They will all be brought on together, and very soon, too."

THE ITALIAN PARLIAMENT.

King Humbert Says the Foreign Relations of His Country are all Good.

Rome, Nov. 14.—Parliament was opened this morning by King Humbert in the hall of the Senate, Halazo Madama. His Majesty was accompanied by the Queen and all the royal family, except the Duke of Abruzzi; the Cabinet members and the principal court officials and dignitaries. In the speech from the throne, his Majesty expressed the hope that the Deputies would actively resume their labors and dispose of the measures not dealt with last session. Above all, he added, it was necessary that the budget be speedily discussed. The king also announced the projected bills, including measures for the mitigation of the taxation laws and dwelt upon the notable economic improvements in the kingdom.

Adverting to foreign affairs, King Humbert said Italy's relations with the powers were excellent, and that nothing menaced the country in any direction. He also alluded to Italy's participation in the Hague peace conference, and added: "The forthcoming celebration of the Holy year will afford us the opportunity of showing we understand how to respect the obligations we have assumed in coming to Rome."

Hard and Fast Aground.

Manila, Nov. 14.—The United States cruiser Charleston ran aground near Vigan on a hidden reef. She has 35 fathoms of water on both sides. She worked her machinery for two days and nights in trying to get afloat; but a typhoon arising, the crew were compelled to take to their boats and seek refuge on a small island five miles away. The natives are friendly. Lieut. McDonald and a number of sailors put off in a small boat and reached the Callao, which brought them to Manila. The gunboat Helena has been despatched to bring away the crew. Lieut. McDonald describes the Charleston when he last saw her as hard and fast aground, with her bottom badly stove and well out of the water.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone.

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the graphophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sung it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Two Murder Cases.

Brandon, Man., Nov. 14.—Brandon Assizes open to-day. There are two murder cases, and both the accused are women. Hilda Blake will answer to the charge of murdering Mrs. John Lane, and Agnes Glendinning is charged with the murder of her own infant, by leaving it out over night on the open prairie first having undressed it.

COMPROMISE DENIED.

Congregational Committee Deny that they Have Dropped Rev. Mr. De Soyres.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—A report was circulated to the effect that the Congregational Committee of St. James' Cathedral had discussed the appointment of a rector and had come to the decision that, if satisfactory to the bishop, Rev Mr Cody of St. Paul's be given the position. The committee have made no compromise in the matter whatever, and have not had a conference with the bishop since the latter's ultimatum was published.

Bishop Sweatman will be in Toronto on Thursday and the committee will arrange a conference, when they will again put forward the name of Rev De Soyres, and anticipate a favorable consideration of the nominee notwithstanding the recent statement by the bishop that he would not appoint Mr De Soyres.

Sardinian's Fast Run.

Montreal, Nov. 14.—The fast time that is being made by the Sardinian to South Africa is a surprise. The distance from Quebec to Cape Town is computed to be about 7,015 miles. The Sardinian has now run 3,447 miles of her long journey. There remains 3,568 miles to cover, or 21 miles more than half the whole distance. The Sardinian was out just thirteen days at 5 o'clock yesterday. This would make a daily speed of 265 miles, or thirteen knots. The ship will complete the journey in another thirteen or fourteen days, reaching Cape Town on the 24th or 26th inst.

Blown to Pieces

Tiffin, O., Nov. 13.—A nitro-glycerine magazine was blown up here this morning with terrific force. The shock was heard in towns within a radius of 40 miles, and people within a mile of the place were knocked flat. The driver of a wagon and his two horses were at the door of the magazine at the time and received the full force of the explosion. They could not be found afterwards.

Killed by Shock

Hamilton, Nov. 14.—Thomas Fee, a well known cab driver here, was accidentally killed yesterday evening at the Grand Trunk station. He was on the train collectin a fare from a patron, and jumped after it had started. The train had got up a good speed, and Fee fell under the wheels, his right leg being cut off at the thigh and his right hand badly crushed. It is supposed that the shock killed him instantly, no person having seen the accident.

Magistrate Dead

London, Ont., Nov. 14.—E. Jones Parke, Q. C., Police Magistrate, died suddenly in his private office at 2.30 yesterday afternoon. He had not been feeling well during the early part of the day and had a conversation with his partner, Mr. Purdom, and also his son, in regard to his health in general, leaving them to consult his physician, Dr. Woodruff, who informed him that he had heart trouble, from which old people often suffered. He then returned to his office and conversed upon several matters of business. An hour later he was dead.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS

Evidence Heard Before the County Judge.

CONTRACTORS IN THE BOX

Mr. Adam Dawson and John E. Hayes Give Evidence.

The pavement investigation resumed on Friday morning with only three witnesses to come up for hearing and good prospects of an early conclusion of the hearing of evidence.

Ex-councillor Adam Dawson, who was inspector on the Evans & Langford contract on George-st. for a short time and also on the Evans & Langford work on Brock and Murray-st., was the first witness. He began work on Sept. 22nd and worked 27 days.

Witness stated that he saw the mixing of the batches. "I understand that Mr. Sawers charged me with being off the work. I was never off the work except when the duties of the work called me off. I had to go over to the Light and Power Co's office three times to ask them to remove a gas pipe. On a couple of other occasions I went over to their office to see a pipe going into the drill shed. Going over the hill on Murray-st. I also had to put in some posts necessary to fix the grade. These were all on Murray-st. When the last batch of cement was being mixed on Murray-st. I had to go down to where the men were starting the Brock-st pavement to see about the stones being put in. It was at this time that Ald. Sawers abused me about. I never left the work unless some part of the work called me."

Mr. Dawson stated that he got his instruction regarding proportions from Mr. Ranney. The work done under his supervision was well done. He had no trouble with the men at all.

Nobody had ever endeavored to use improper influence with the witness in regard to his work.

Mr. Dawson had examined Mr. Sheehy's pavement in three places, including the places described by witness on Thursday, that is on the east side of Water-st. between Dublin and London. Mr. Dawson considered the work good in all the places he had examined. It was good concrete. Concrete and surface were of full thickness. Witness measured it on the edge.

Witness was asked about hollow places and replied that he hadn't time to go around tapping and looking for places like that.

CROSS-EXAMINED.

To Mr. R. F. McWilliams witness stated that he got his instructions as inspector on the work from Mr. Ranney and Mr. Bartlett. He got no instructions from Mr. Hay.

Q.—Do you know the specifications?

A.—I was in the Council last year. I can't swear that I knew last year what the specifications were. Mr. Belcher took full charge. I know that some changes were made last year, that sand was used and that in one block no granite was used. I was aware of no specifications this year and did not know anything about the specification except what instructions I got from Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Ranney. I did not examine the specifications myself.

Witness stated that the curb was built of stone 25 or 28 inches or more deep. He got no special instructions about building the curb but went according to the pattern that had been used before he went on as inspector.

Good rough gravel went into the base concrete. Mr. McWilliams asked for the proportion of sand. "I could not tell you and I am not going to try. But I am prepared to swear that it made a good job."

Mr. Dawson was asked if any of the concrete laid under his supervision could be poked out with an umbrella. He stated that at its present age it might. His opinion was that no concrete was fit to be judged until it was a year old. But he would not be satisfied if concrete laid by himself could be removed with a small months after it was laid.

The witness was asked to examine the specimens of concrete made by Mr. Rose for Mr. McWilliams and produced in court but he refused, stating that the conditions under which they were made were altogether different. No one could tell him his own business. No one could tell him that it was fair to compare blocks of concrete made under pressure in a square box with the sidewalks made outside.

To Mr. Dennistoun he witness stated that he had ordered more water to be used in the mixing of the concrete than had been used by Mr. Ranney. He thought the use of more water made a better setting. The concrete would not set if too little water was used. Pounding the surface with a hammer would powder the base.

Witness had seen Mr. George Rose putting in pavements on Hunter-st with a curb not more than 3 1-2 inches thick. This was faulty and would be broken by a waggon backing in. It would lessen the cost of the work to build such a thin curb.

Mr. Dawson stated that he had always found Mr. Sheehy a straight forward honest man, though "rather cranky as regards the laying of brick." Witness had known him for twenty-five years and had much dealing with him and always found him trustworthy.

JOHN E. HAYES.

John E. Hayes, stonemason and contractor, was the next witness. He tendered on all the contracts let this year in town. On the first contract this year Mr. Sheehy tendered at 13 7-8 cents, and Mr. Hayes at 16 1-4 cents. Witness had a copy of the specifications this year and tendered on carrying the contract out according to the specifications. He would not say that he intended to put in no sand, as he knew that sand was added last year, but he expected that it would be added over the granite. Witness had contract for walks in Couburg this year and holds one in Lindsay at present. When preparing to tender on Peterborough walks Mr. Hayes went to Engineer Hay for information. The latter told him that exactly the same sidewalk was to be laid this year as last year. Witness figured according, counting upon Star cement for the base. He knew sand was used last year but did not figure on it this year, although expecting that it might be used.

Mr. Hayes also tendered on the contract given to Evans & Langford, asking 14 1-2 cents instead of 16 1-4 as in his tender for the first contract. He supposed he could do it cheaper and knew pretty well what Mr. Sheehy was using, though he had not been on his work at all. He understood that Ensign cement was to be used as he was present at a talk at Ald. Best's store where Aldermen Best, Denne and Langford, Mr. Belcher, Mr. Cahill, Mr. Sheehy and himself were present and it appeared to be understood that Ensign cement was to be used in the base of the second contract. There appeared to be no doubt about it. About the surface calculations of this second tender Mr. Hayes said, I never knew that only one box of granite was to be used or was being used. I thought they were using 2 boxes of granite with perhaps 1 box of cement. I knew nothing of the 5 1-2 bags of cement.

Mr. Hayes also tendered on the third contract, Mr. Sheehy's second one, his figure being 14 3-10 cents. He still did not know that 5 1-2 bags was being used.

A hollow sound did not necessarily indicate a defect in the sidewalk. It might show that there was not a good bond between the surface and concrete though there was no hollow.

The surface of the pavements in Lindsay is laid in about the same proportions as that in Peterborough.

Mr. Hayes stated that in the presence of Ald. Denne he had tested Mr. Rose's work at the corner of Charlotte and Bethune-sts., where the curb was exposed. It broke off very easily with a small stone. A man might remove it with his fingers. It appeared to have no bond. It was not good or half good or quarter good. It must have been finished two or three weeks. The reason why witness had examined the place at all was because Mr. Denne had asked him who Mr. Sheehy's work was not as good as Mr. Rose's.

To Mr. McWilliams witness stated that this work he had mentioned could hardly be called concrete at all. Too much sand might cause the defect.

The Court thought it rather unfair that Mr. Rose was not present.

CROSS-EXAMINED.

Regarding the meeting where Mr. Hayes came to understand where Ensign cement would be allowed to go in the base of the second contract Mr. Hayes stated that this was just about 20 minutes before the time for receiving tenders. Ald. Langford never told witness that 5-1-2 bags cement were to be used. Witness also told Mr. Hay what he should figure on in tendering for the Evans & Langford contract and Mr. Hay stated that he had made no change from the first one.

Mr. Hayes stated to Mr. McWilliams that he did not know that 5-1-2 bags of cement was to be used. Had he known of that he could have made a lower tender than he did.

The other men must have known it when they figured it down the way they did.

Regarding the finisher, Lawless, who was employed on the Sheehy and Evans and Langford contracts in town and is now under Mr. Bartlett; Mr. Hayes stated that he was paid $1½ a day and board while on the day work in Lindsay. Mr. Hayes offered him $3.50 a day to stay with him on his contract in Lindsay but he came back to town to work for Evans and Langford. Witness did not know how much he was paid.

BY MR. DENNISTOUN.

To Mr. Dennistoun witness stated that the surface finish in both Lindsay and Peterborough was an inch in thickness.

Q.—Prices you get in Lindsay are higher than in Peterborough?

A.—The prices are all right.

Q.—But you could not do it for less than 14 cents?

Witness had examined the crossing at Dr. Hallidays's. It was not hollow sounding all the way across as stated by Mr. Rose. He would judge that it was the repairing of the sidewalk that had caused the hollow sound as the inside was hard and the outside sounded hollow.

To Mr. McWilliams witness stated that there is not as good a bed for a foundation in Lindsay as in town. The works were hard to compare.

MR. DENNISTOUN.

Mr. Dennistoun—Do you know that Mr. Sheehy got 7 cents a lineal foot for his curb and you got 70?

Mr. Hayes—Yes, That's right.

Mr. McWilliams objected that the comparisons and calculations were wrong.

ALD. LANGFORD.

Ald. Langford next questioned.

Q.—When you were in Mr. Best's store did you not remark that you were going to use Ensign cement?

A.—Yes.

Q.—And that you were going to have all the privileges Mr. Sheehy had and Mr. Denne answered "Yes."

A.—No. That's wrong. You might as well tell me that I knew that 5 1-2 bags cement were being used.

MR. T. E. WADE.

Mr. T. E. Wade was next sworn. He had tendered with Mr. Bogue on the contracts. Mr. Bogue knew something of Mr. Sheehy's first contract and in tendering for the other two contracts they had tendered without calculating what proportions they would use but dropped a little below Mr. Sheehy's price on the first contract because they thought they knew where they could get materials cheaper. They had not considered the specifications minutely at all.

Mr. Wade had examined Mr. Sheehy's work on Water-st north and considered it rather sappy. There were various things that might account for it. It had been poked at a good deal before he went there. Had seen the place excavated on Water-st. The concrete seemed to be all right. The observation of the witness being confined to a couple of places he would not judge from these that all the work was bad.

Mr. Dennistoun then stated that Mr. Dumble, counsel for Evans and Langford, was expected home on the 16th.

Mr. Edwards stated that as far as he was concerned the investigation could not be closed without an examination of the contractors. The examination of Mr. Sheehy might as well take place before any argument. Mr. Dennistoun thought the argument should show whether it was necessary for Mr. Sheehy to be called. He was willing to have Mr. Sheehy examined regarding charges of fraud but would object to his giving evidence regarding the contract just as he had objected to Mr. Hays' evidence and that of others. Mr. Dennistoun suggested an adjournment till Mr. Dumble returns.

An adjournment then took place for a week or more, no precise date for resuming being named. In resuming argument will take place regarding the course to be followed.

Mr. Dennistoun will object to the Judge answering any questions asked by the Council except those relating to charges of fraud or misconduct.

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and set to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and heavings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproar of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall, flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

Shopgirl's Hard Lot.

Persons complain that shopgirls do not jump actively to wait upon them when they enter a store. Why not? The other day I saw a girl approach a respectably dressed woman of middle age—that's 35—and heard her ask, over the counter, "What would you like, ma'am?"

To this polite attention I was shocked to hear the woman reply: "You shut up! Don't you talk to me! I can ask for what I want, and I don't want any impudence from clerks!"

A few rebuffs from such creatures are quite enough to cool the ardor of any shopgirl.

Mrs. Axel Kjer, of Gordonville, Cape Girardeau Co., Mo., writes: "When I look at my little boy I feel it my duty to write you. Perhaps someone will see my testimony and be led to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and be blessed in the same way. This is my fifth child and the only one born alive; the others have died from lack of nourishment — so the doctor said. I was not sickly in any way and this time I just thought I would try your 'Prescription.' I took nine bottles and to my surprise it carried me through and gave us as fine a little boy as ever was. Weighed ten and one-half pounds. He is now five months old, has never been sick a day, and is so strong that everybody who sees him wonders at him. He is so playful and holds himself up so well. I would like to see this in print for so many have asked me, 'Do you think those are the testimonials of the people, or has Dr. Pierce just made them up and printed them?'"

This is one of over two hundred and fifty thousand similar letters which prove to be the greatest of all medicines for the cure of diseases and disorders of the organs distinctly feminine. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

It is a safe medicine in any condition of the system. It contains no whisky, alcohol, opium or other narcotic, and therefore, does not cause a craving for stimulants. It is sold by medicine dealers everywhere, and any dealer who hasn't it can get it. Don't take a substitute. No counterfeit is as good as the genuine and the druggist who says something else is "just as good as Dr. Pierce's" is either mistaken or is trying to deceive you for his own selfish benefit. Such a man is not to be trusted. He is trifling with your most priceless possession—your health—maybe your life itself. See that you get what you ask for.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

A SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR.

Entertainment at Auburn on Tuesday Evening Last.

The entertainment given by the Auburn Sunday School and Auburn Lodge of Good Templars, was a decided success. The proceeds were for the defraying of expenses connected with the renovating of the building. The attendance was large and many being turned away, the hall being so much crowded. Mr G W Powell occupied the chair and an excellent programme was run off. It was as follows: Open chorus, "All Hail the Power", prayer, Mr G W Powell; chairman's address; solo, Miss M Curtis; reading, Miss A Fraser; solo, Miss Pasco; recitation, Miss L Primeau; solo, Mr F Turner; recitation, Miss White; solo, Miss Vina Belleghem; recitation, Mr O Bell; dialogue, "Married before the new Justice of the Peace, Miss A Ellis and Messrs V Thewlis, G G Pratley and G Downing; reading, Miss M Hamilton; duet, Misses B and M Parnell; recitation, Miss L Primeau; God Save the Queen.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to all those who took part in the programme and to the accompanists of the evening, Mr V P Thewlis and Miss A Bell.

A Dead Bargain.

A five volume set of the great work, "The Canadian Album; Men of Canada," bound in Seal Grain Leather, and containing 500 pages in each volume, sizes 8½ by 10¾. We invite inspection. The set will be sold for fifteen dollars, but is worth twice what we ask for it. Times Bookstore.

The Meeting Last Night.

The public meeting held in the Y M C A hall last night in connection with the Archidiaconal conference was most interesting. The subject under discussion was "The Extension of the Kingdom," and divided into two portions, Rev H C Dixon, Toronto, dealing with the question, "At Home" and Rev Daniel, M A, Port Hope, and the Rev R J Carson, Havelock, speaking on the subject, "Abroad." There was a large attendance.

New Readers.

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The selections are from the works of Mr John Imrie, Toronto, and are up to date. For sale at Times Bookstore.

The Butter Market.

The intended organization meeting of the Peterborough butter market, which was to have been held in the town council chamber yesterday morning did not materalize. At the hour for which the meeting was called, there were only representatives of the two factories present. Mr George Fitzgerald, the well known cheese buyer, who also intended going into the butter business, stated that he had received a letter from his firm in Montreal offering to lay down in Peterborough good butter at 20 1 2c a lb. This did not appear to be very encouraging news to the local butter men. Nothing definite was done.

Shoot a Big Bear.

At the Grand Trunk station Tuesday evening quite a big crowd viewed with interest a magnificent bear which was being shipped through. It was the property of Mr John Barkwell, of Garden Hill, who had shot it in a hunting trip in Cavandish township. The carcass weighed over four hundred pounds and as it lay stretched out on the platform it gave everyone the impression that in life Bruin was a tremendous fellow.

Declined.

We are obliged to decline publishing a letter handed in yesterday. Although the writer of the article disclosed his identity he did not sign the production, and desires to have it appear over a nom de plume. The article is a violent attack on those whom the writer calls "Stratton-Conservatives" whom he accuses of pretending to be Conservatives while they vote the other way. We advise our friend to take his production to the Review.

THE WALLS RAN DOWN.

Experience of a Son of Erin in a Local Elevator.

There was a little quiet fun in a big store on Simcoe street a few days ago. An Irishman went into the store above referred to and thus relates the story:

'I wint to the store, and says I, 'Is Misther Kerr in?

''Yes, says the young man they call Rolley 'Will yez step in?'

'So I steps into the closet, and all of a suddint he pulls the rope, and—its the truth I'se telling yez—the walls of the building begun running down to the cellar.

''Och murther!' say I, 'what'll become of Bridget and the childhren which was left below there?'

'Says the young man. 'Be aisy, sorr; they'd be all right when yez come down.'

''Come down, is it,' says I. 'And is it no closet at all, but a haythenish balloon that yez got me in?'

'And wid that the walls stood stock still, and he opened the door and there I was wid the roof just over my head. And, begorra, that's what saved me from from goin' up to he hevins intirely!

The Agricultural Society.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I find that there has been a meeting held by the directors of the late Peterborough Central Fair, when the board took the members and prize winners sufficiently into their confidence sufficiently to tell them that they, the board, were in debt to the tune of $1600, and had $4 in the bank, having taken the municipal grants, government grants, members fees and a lot of subscriptions, also admission fees, and had applied them to an outstanding note in the bank, the result of previous mismanagement, on their part. Mr. Elliott says that in 1898, owing to bad weather, there was a deficit of $[illegible].00, which, added to outstanding indebtedness of $11, incurred for buildings and improvements, would bring up the deficit at that time to $1600. An effort was made by the board at that time to keep debt down, and a canvass was made and help was given in subscriptions, and in five years the society was out of debt. But what has happened between then and now 'Our business' board has got into the toils again,—not by building and making improvements—unless you call that flat-roofed excuse for a shed that was built after some of the good sheds were burned two or three years ago improvements. In any case they had the insurance money to build those elegant sheds. Mr. Kennedy says Peterborough people are not satisfied with an agricultural fair as they want attractions. I suppose circus performers, acrobatics, clowns, skirt dancers and high kicerks, etc. Well if that is what they want they had better patronize those performances at their proper time and place, as they are neither an elevating or an educating factor at an exhibition; How is it that at Norwood and Millbrook, they hold purely agricultural fairs and they are successful and the people go home satisfied, as is shown by the attendance every year.

Next there is a proposal to form a joint-stock company to take hold of the poor old fair. That means losing the government grant—a small consideration in Mr. Kennedy's estimation. But they will require better management than in the past if they can successfully do the business even with a joint stock company and $5,000 at its back. I was glad to see that Mr. Elliott still has confidence that 100 cents on the dollar will be paid, but how will that be done with a 10 per cent call on that amount of stock? Some further information is what is wanted by the public before they are going to subscribe for said stock. It is only reasonable that it should be known who are promoters and provisional directors of the Peterborough Central Exhibition Joint Stock Company, Limited.

I think it would be better to make an effort and keep the old association alive by the board raising money and paying off everything they owe, and at the same time ask their creditors if they will not give them some assistance, business men and others would come to their relief if they would only act manly and show a bold determination to do again what was done once before and at the annual meeting any new directors appointed to office would assume the place on a new note that had been taken by a retiring director. There is no valid reason, why a good agricultural exhibition can not be held here if taken hold of and managed as men do their business.

If the board adopts the latter course let there be a good and grand turn out at the annual meeting, and show the board that both town and county is united, and of one mind in the matter of keeping the fair going on as of keeping the fair going on as if of old.

Yours,
ONLOOKER,

Peterborough, Nov. 15.

Dear Sir:

I have your favor of the 13th inst., and it is with pleasure I avail myself of the opportunity of referring to Mr. R. E. Cresswell, one of your graduates, who is now in our employ, as a young man possessed of marked ability. He is especially careful and accurate in all of his office work, thus manifesting very careful and systematic drilling and being fitted for such duties far above the average clerk. The above qualifications, no doubt, are the result of the practical and systematic training as received at your institution.

Yours very truly,

Boers Prepare to Resist Advance of British Relieving Column From Estcourt—Every Day Lessens Their Chances of Success—Another Line Blown Up.

London, Nov. 16.—The climax of the campaign in Natal is approaching rapidly. The end of the week ought to bring news either of a retreat of the Boers from Ladysmith or of a general engagement near the place between the British relieving column and General White on the one side and the Boer forces on the other. The only other alternative is the fall of Ladysmith and the surrender of White's forces, and this seems utterly improbable, there is no reason why an advance should not be made to relieve White by Saturday. By the addition of the division at Estcourt White's forces would be increased to 22,900 men, with which he could take the offensive against the Boer, whose morale is undoubtedly weakened by the check before Ladysmith.

The report that the Boers have blown up the line at Chievely, south of Colenso, indicates that they are fully aware of the imminence of an attack from the south and are preparing for it.

The report of General Joubert's death is accepted here with the greatest reserve and is not confirmed by the War Office. It is recollected that during the Spanish-American war perodical reports of the killing of leaders were circulated and afterwards discredited.

REPORT OF JOUBERT'S DEATH

London, Nov. 16.—A despatch received here to-day from Pietermaritzburg, dated November 11, says it is rumored there that General Piet Joubert, commander-in-chief of the Boer forces, has been killed in action.

SLAIN IN ACTION.

Durban, Nov. 12.—It was rumored here to-day that Commandant General Joubert, of the Boer forces, is dead. The Times of Natal, later publish a telegram from Lorenzo Marquez saying that General Joubert was killed in action on Thursday, November 9.

REPORT NOT CONFIRMED.

London, Nov. 16.—The most startling news from the seat of war to-day is the report of the death of General Piet Joubert, the commander-in-chief of the Boer forces. The report needs confirmation, but many people believe it to be well founded, as the general's death is said to have occurred November 8, when the Boer riflemen were understood to be within 1,500 yards of Ladysmith. Severe fighting between the British and the Boers the same day has been since reported, and it is regarded in some quarters as quite possible that General Joubert, always noted for his personal coolness and courage, may have dangerously exposed himself in a personal reconnaissance of the British position. Even General Joubert's most bitter enemies admit that he fought squarely and fairly, and his action when General Symons died in expressing his sympathy elevated him to the high regard of all soldiers. It is claimed that the death of Joubert would be likely to lead to the adoption by the Boers of bolder and more active tactics, as he had considerable difficulty in restraining his hot-headed followers. The driblets of news this morning bring the news that Ladysmith was still undergoing on Sunday bombardment from six forty pounders. The British naval guns were silent. The Boers, therefore, have got more heavy guns into position, while either the British ammunition has given out or the British gunners were reserving their fire.

SURRENDER OR ANNIHILATION.

London, Nov. 16.—The Times' Durban correspondent, under date of Sunday, Nov. 12, says—"Chaplain Matthews arrived here to-day. He testifies to the splendid defence at Nicholson's Nek of the Royal Irish Fusiliers and the Gloucester regiment against an overwhelming force of Boers, who held positions on three sides of the British troops. Retirement on the fourth side was impossible, as the way was too precipitous. Surrender was the only alternative to annihilation, as the Boers were on the point of opening a shell fire upon them. It was pathetic to hear the Fusiliers bemoaning their misfortune, several with tearful eye saying, 'Father, I would rather have been shot than this.'

"The Boers have few tents and are thought to be suffering severe privations.

"While in Pretoria Father Matthews understood that President Kruger was about to visit Natal to encourage the burghers there. Many empty trucks have been sent to Natal, but the Boers declare that these are to bring the Ladysmith garrison to Pretoria."

LINE CLEAR TO COLENSO.

Estcourt, Natal, Nov. 16.—The armored train has returned from another trip from which Colenso was reached. No Boers were seen. On its way back the train picked up at Frierre a native runner carrying a number of letters. He said that Ladysmith was bombarded on Thursday, November 9, by six 40-pounders, one shot from which struck Illings store. The British big naval guns were still silent when he left. Little damage was done by the Boer bombardment, and there were few casualties. The runner further said that the Boers intend to visit Colenso to-morrow.

The armored train on its return reported that the Boers had blown up the line between Colenso and Chieveley. Not much damage was done, but the rails were bent and a small culvert was destroyed. On seeing the British patrols the Boers retired. Every day lessens the chances of the Boers coming further south.

BOERS CRIED FOR MERCY.

London, Nov. 16.—More particulars have been given of the night sortie from Mafeking on October 25, on the trenches behind which the Boers were advancing on the town. After stealing silently out the little party got right up to the Boer trenches, and with a ringing British cheer charged with fixed bayonets.

There was a fearful struggle, the attacking forces catching and bayoneting the Boers under the tents where they crouched, crying for mercy. At least 50 bayonets got to work, and the havoc they wrought was terrible.

For just a moment there was no systematic return fire; but then a perfect hailstorm of bullets poured in from the trenches to the rear. The British forces scattered, silently crossing back under the furious fire in the darkness to the appointed rendevous where the roll was called.

Colonel Baden-Powel met and congratulated Captain FitzClarence and his men upon their splendid work, saying that it was a heavy price to pay, but that the Boers had to be stopped making rifle trenches within range of the town.

On Sunday night Colonel Baden-Powel hoisted a red lamp on the commange, the signal for Captain FitzClarence's night attack. The Boers at once began a fusillade that lasted all night, wasting a lot of ammunition. It is estimated that the night of the sortie the Boers wasted 30,000 rounds of ball cartridge.

During Sunday's bombardment General Cronje sent a demand of surrender, following it up with Monday's big bombardment. On that day it is said the kopje where the Boers were driven back looked like a shambles.

STRATEGY OF THE BOERS.

London, Nov. 16.—The report that the Boers have penetrated southward from Colenso to Chively, where they are said to have cut the railroad, shows that they are adopting a proper strategical plan to impede the advance of the British forces. Perhaps this may not turn out to be Gen. Schalkburger's force which when last heard from was riding —ululand. This force, it is asserted, may next be heard from south of Estcourt, which they will probably attempt to isolate, before further reinforcements arrive. Indeed, it is already reported that a Boer force has been seen in the neighborhood of the line north of the Mooi river.

According to the latest advices from British sources at Estcourt the Boers are suffering from lhack of supplies, though the large stores the British left when they evacuated Newcastle and Dundee must have been of great assistance to the Boer commissariat. But the task of maintaining a complete investment of Ladysmith is probably onerous. Ladysmith seems to be well provisioned and the entrenchments are daily being strengthened. The Boers have re-named Dundee "Mayersdorp," after General Lucas Meyer, whose forces fought those of Gen. Symons there.

Wounded Boers.

It is said this morning that two hundred wounded of General Meyers' forces arrived at Pretoria the next day. There are signs that a forward movement for the relief of Kimberley may be expected very shortly. There is grat activity at De Aar whence the advance seems likely to be made. There is, it is said, no urgent reason for this unless food at Kimberley is getting low, but the moral effect would would be good for the British. The greatest enthusiasm was shown this morning at the departure from Newport of a mountain battery of the Royal Artillery consisting of six guns. Thousands of people lined the streets cheering and singing. Zan dthe battery had difficulty in reaching the train through the dense crowd. This was the last mountain battery remaining in England, eight others being in India and the tenth having been captured by the Boers at Nucholson's Nek. Nothing is known at the War Office of the reported death of General Joubert.

NO CONFIRMATION AT DURBAN.

Durban, Natal, Monday, Nov. 13.—Gen. Hildyard has arrived here. He brought a message from General Buller expressing his high appreciation of Natal's course throughout the crisis and admiration for the way the voluteers and colonial forces fought.

A correspondent in Zululand reports that many Boers who fought at Dundee are now quietly plowing and that nothing will induce them to return to the battlefield.

Most of the guns positioned around Durban are being withdrawn and all fear of a Boer attack has disappeared.

There is no enfirmatioon of the report of General Joubert's death.

BOERS WERE DRIVEN OFF.

London, Nov. 16.—A special despatch from Durban, dated Monday, November 13, says that a member of the Natal force, who has succeeded in traversing the Boer lines with Ladysmith despatches has arrived at Pietermaritzburg, and reports that a determined attak was made by the Boers on the British garrison, but the advance was met with such a heavy and well directed fire that the Boers were driven off, leaving many dead.

A despatch from Pietermaritzburg says that an armored train was engaged in reconnoitering was attacked by the Boers. One British soldier was killed and fifteen were wounded.

STARVATION WITH DEATH.

Three Men Lose Their Lives In Alaska After Terrible Privations.

Victoria, Nov. 16.—The Skaway Alaskan tells a thrilling story of starvation death in northern Alaska. The victims were M C Daly, of Coston, Mass., and two Frenchmen whose names could not be learned. The story was brought to Skagway by Wm Lawler, an oldtime Arizona miner. Late in the fall of 1898, it appears, Lawler, together with the three men mentioned and a fifth named J Smithson started out to prospect on the head waters of the Mosquito River. About Christmas the six men went across the range and began to stake ground on the Bananza river. A blizzard came on and Daly and the two Frenchmen became separated from the other two and wandered away without provisions and with scant clothing and blankets and a single tent. After the storm Lawler and Smithson followed the footsteps in the snow and finally came to their camp. Death had been there before them. On the ground rolled in his blankets, his form wasted to a mere skeleton, was the corpse of one of the Frenchmen. On a camp stove was a kettle containing a frozen mass that told its own story. It was filled with the rawhide thongs of snowshoes which the starving men had attempted to boil for food. A short distance from the tent close beside the trail was found the body of the other Frenchman; the wolverines had stripped every particle of flesh from the bones. A little farther on, Daly's body was found in a similar condition.

CHANGE IN MILITARY ORDERS.

Leinsters Will Stay at Halifax—Troops to West India Withdrawn.

Halifax, Nov. 16.—Importand orders were received here this morning by which the Leister Regiment will remain in Halifax indefinitely. The regiment was under orders to leave Halifax for Ireland on the 26th inst., and were to be replaced by the Worcestershire Regiment now doing garrison duty in the West India.

The Worcestershire Regiment has been ordered to England at once, and no troops will be sent to replace them.

The officers of the Leinsters had made all arrangements for the sale of personal effects. Military authorities here state the proceedings are unusual and significant.

SEALSKIN REGULATIONS.

Assistant Secretary Spaulding Relaxes the Obnoxious Rules

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 16.—A Washing. special to the Free Press says—Assistant Secretary Spaulding has again relaxed the regulations with regard to sealskin garments brought into the United States by foreign tourists. In the ruling recently made in order to prevent the indiscriminate bringing in of garments manufactured from pelagic skins, it was provided that each foreign tourist should secure a certificate that his apparel was not merchandise. Owing to complaints General Spaulding has modified the original ruling so as to permit tourists to make affidavits before the notaries at the port of arrival instead of port of departure. This modification will afford relief and greater protection against frauds, because if false affidavits are made the United States courts can punish the offenders, which is not the case with affidavits made in Canada.

Manitoba Elections

Winnipeg, Nov. 16.—At a cabinet meeting at noon to-day the date of the elections was decided. Nominations will be held on November 29th and the polling on Dec. 7th. Hon. Messrs. Cameron, McMillan and McIntyre will run for Winnipeg in the Liberal interests.

Hugh John Will Command

Winnipeg, Nov. 16.—Speaking with Sir Charles Tupper and Premier Haultain at a meeting at Indian Head, N W T, last evening Hugh John Macdonald said, that should a second contingent be sent from Canada to South Africa and the Manitoba elections were over, he would only be too happy to take the command.

More Work For Kitchener.

Cairo, Nov. 15.—The Khalifa is advancing along the White Nile, and has reached Abbah Island, 150 miles south of Khartoum. General Kitchener's present intention of opening the Soudan campaign on Dec. 1, may suffer serious delay unless the Khalifa in the meanwhile is defeated in a decisive fight and driven westward.

LAST NIGHT'S BANQUET.

The Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary, Honored by the Citizens.

A MOST MAGNIFICENT DEMONSTRATION.

Brilliant Scene in the Opera House Last Night—Partial List of Invited Guests—Splendid Speech of the Provincial Secretary—Many Prominent Men Present.

The most successful banquet ever given in Peterborough took place last night, when Hon. J. R. Stratton, the Provincial Secretary, was entertained by the citizens of Peterborough and surrounding district. The Opera House was a thing of beauty. The spacious room was bedecked with bunting, flags and mottoes.

The stage and rear of the hall was occupied by the ladies, several hundred of whom were present.

His Worship Mayor Davis presided, with the guest of honor on his right. The following gentlemen amongst many others accepted invitations to be present—

Hon. G. W. Ross, Messrs. Robert Jaffray, W. F. McLean M.P., The World; A. E. Ames, J. S. Willson, The Globe; John Bertram, A. C. MacDonald, E. W. Cox, W. G. Ramsay, F. G. Cox, A. F. Rutter, Chas. LETTERS OF REGRET.

The following letters of regret were read—

St. Peter's Cathedral, Peterborough,
Nov. 13th, 1899.

A. L. Davis, Esq.,
Hon. Chairman.

Dear Sir —

I desire to express my sincere thanks for the invitation to the banquet, to Hon. J. R. Stratton on Thursday evening. Circumstances prevent me from being present at this pleasant union of the citizens, who wish to testify their appreciation of the honor conferred on Peterborough by the selection of the representative of the West Riding to be a member of the Ontario Cabinet. This non-political demonstration, which is intended to be also an expression of the kindly feeling and personal regard entertained by the public towards a deserving citizen, is a happy omen of that liberality which honors merit and fidelity to duty. Believe me, Dear Sir,

Yours very truly,
R. A. O'CONNOR, Bishop of Peterboro'

Toronto, Nov. 10th, 1899.

A. L. Davis Esq., Mayor,
Chairman Citizens Committee.

Dear Sir —

I am in receipt of your favor of the 4th inst., enclosing an invitation to be present at the non-political Citizen's Banquet to be tendered to the Hon. J. R. Stratton, at the Opera House, Peterboro, on Thursday night the 16th instant, on the occasion of his elevation to the portfolio of Provincial Secretary in the Ontario Cabinet. Will you please convey to the Committee my profound regret that an engagement, made some two months ago, to meet a number of gentlemen at Kansas City on the morning of the 16th inst. will deprive me of the pleasure of being present at the banquet on that evening, will you also please convey to the Hon. the Provincial Secretary for the Province of Ontario, my most cordial congratulations upon his well-merited honour, and, will you also kindly convey to the citizens of the good old town, and county of Peterborough which, with all its political faults I hold so dear, my cordial congratulations that at last they have an able representative in the Cabinet Councils of the Ontario Parliament.

It is to be a matter of great personal satisfaction that after the hard fought battles of West Peterborough both political parties can, for a time, bury the hatchet and meet together, to do honour to their representative. I am greatly disappointed to be deprived of the pleasure of being present, but the appointment which I have already referred to and at which I have to meet a number of gentlemen from various parts of the country, is of such a nature that there is no possibility of getting the date altered.

With kindest regards to all, I am,
Very truly yours,
GEO. A. COX.

Toronto, Nov. 8th, 1899.

A. L. Davis, Esq.,
Mayor of Peterborough

Dear Sir —

It would have given me the greatest possible pleasure to have been present on the occasion of the banquet to be given in honor of Mr. J. R. Stratton, because, although differing in politics from Mr. Stratton, I have the greatest respect for his ability and patriotism, and believe that he will be a most valuable acquisition to the governing body of this Province. I look upon him as the very best man that the Hon. Mr. Ross could have called upon not only to support his Government, but also to act to the best of his ability in the interests of the whole country.

The state of my health will not allow me to attend public dinners at the present time; but kindly say to Mr. Stratton that I heartily congratulate him and also congratulate you, Sir, as the Mayor of Peterborough, upon the elevation of Mr. Stratton to be the Provincial Secretary in the Ontario Cabinet.

I am with respect, Yours very truly,
W. R. BROCK, Pre. Can. Gen Elec. Co.

Belleville, Ont. Nov. 9th, 1899.

A. L. Davis, Esq.,
Mayor.

Dear Sir —

I am extremely obliged for the kind invitation of the Citizens of Peterborough to the Complimentary Banquet to be tendered to The Hon. J. R. Stratton on the 16th inst., and will be delighted to be present if at all possible. It would be a great pleasure indeed for one who had the honor of serving eight years in the Legislature with Mr. Stratton to attend such a hearty demonstration and see such evidence of popular favour as I am sure will meet that evening. Mr. Stratton highly deserves the honour and I am sure will fill the important position of Provincial Secretary with great ability and judgement. I shall be very disappointed if anything unforseen should arise to prevent my attending.

Yours very gratefully,
W. H. BIGGAR.

St. Andrews Manse, Peterboro,
Nov. 9th, 1899.

Dear Sir —

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of of your kind invitation to be present at the Banquet to be tendered the Hon. J. R. Stratton next Thursday.

I appreciate very much the kindness and recognition given, yet regret that owing to a Bible Society meeting arranged for some week ago in Flinton for that evening I will be debarred from enjoying what would have been to me a great privilege.

I have already expressed my hearty good wishes to Mr. Stratton and feel that the Citizens of Peterborough cannot do too much to express our high appreciation of the services Mr. Stratton has already rendered, and our pleasure at his elevation to an important Provincial Trust.

I have the honour to be, Honored Sir,
Yours very truly,
JAS. G. POTTER.

Ottawa, Nov. 15th, 1899.

A. L. Davis, Esq.,

Dear Sir —

I only reached Ottawa this morning after an absence of a couple of days, and am required to remain here the whole of this week, which makes it impossible for me to join in the demonstration in honor of Mr. J. R. Stratton.

With congratulations on his well merited promotion and best wishes for his success in his new position, believe me

Yours sincerely,
W. MULOCK, Postmaster General.

Douro, Nov. 15th, 1899.

A. L. Davis, Esq.,

Dear Sir —

Many thanks for the kind invitation to the Stratton Banquet.

Unfortunately I can't be present on account of the state of my health.

I am sure that the banquet will be a grand success. I am so pleased to see Conservatives and Reformers sitting down together and enjoying themselves as if they all belonged to the same party. It is an object lesson and shows that Canada is putting on the characteristics of a nation.

Yours very truly,
W. J. KEILTY.

Toronto Ont. Nov. 9th, 1899.

A. L. Davis, Esq.,
Peterborough

Sorry but am physically incapable of being with you owing to sciatica. Congratulate Mr. Stratton on his elevation to an office which I am convinced he is is well able to fill. Would have been a great pleasure to have personally joined with your fellow townsmen in marking event.

E. E. SHEPPARD, Ed. Saturday Night.

Letters of regret were read from Right Hon. Sir Wilfred Laurier, Premier; Hon. F. W. Borden, Minister of Militia; Hon. Richard Harcourt; B. E. Walker General Manager Bank of Commerce; Hon. THE TOAST LIST.

"The Queen"—This toast was enthusiastically responded to by the singing of the national anthem, followed by three rousing British cheers.

"The Governor-General and Lieut.-Governor."—In passing this toast Mayor Davis alluded to the Governor-General as a link binding Canadians to the mother country and fittingly eulogized the ready manner in which our Canadian militia had volunteered for service in South Africa. In conclusion he referred to the Earl of Minto as a "soldier of the Queen," well qualified for the high position he has the honor to fill in this loyal colony of Canada and one truly acceptable to every Canadian.

"Our Guest"—Was next proposed by the chairman, Mayor Davis, who opened that both the town and County of Peterborough were honored in the elevation of the Hon. J. R. Stratton to the post of Provincial Secretary. He, himself, felt doubly honored in view of the fact that he and the evening's honorable guest had been school boys together, and had started in business at the same time. The speaker then briefly reviewed the new Provincial Secretary's many successful business enterprises, in all of which he had fully demonstrated marked business ability, coupled with an eminently successful parliamentary career, in which his legislative capability had been readily recognized, now culminating in his recent promotion to a position in the acceptance of which he reflected great honor upon the cabinet of which he was now a honorable member. Cheers.

"Our Guest"—At this juncture glasses were filled to the brim and the toast was drunk with right good will. The Hon. Provincial Secretary then took the floor and a perfect ovation. He would be less than human, he would be destitute of the smallest spark of grateful feeling, if he were not profoundly touched by the hearty, and, it seemed to him, enthusiastic manner in which they had honored the toast. He could not for a moment assume that it was a mere formality, for it was quite in line with the great kindness and consideration he had received on many occasions from his fellow citizens. He thanked them from the bottom of his heart, but it would, he said, be the height of vanity on his part to regard himself as worthy of the honor they were conveying upon him. He took their generous attitude towards him as an evidence of the kindness of their hearts. He assured them he could not find words, or hardly even voice, if the words would come, to express what he felt upon this occasion. He knew that they would believe him when he said that it was the proudest moment of his life. He had, he gratefully acknowledged been enabled by the help of his staunch friends in West Peterborough to achieve some degree of success as a public man, and in business affairs he had not been entirely unsuccessful. The recent honor which he had received and shared with the town was a source of gratification, but not one of them, but both of them combined, overwhelmed him with one half the pride with one half the gratification he felt at this magnificent demonstration in his honor. It was doubtless a legitimate source of pride to be called on to serve one's native province in an exalted and responsible capacity, but it touched home with ten-fold intensity to be surrounded, as he was, by that magnificent gathering of his fellow citizens, and to be the object of a demonstration of friendly feeling and neighborly good will, of which any man, no matter how high his position, might well be proud, and with which the most matter-of-fact would be deeply touched. He had, Mr. Stratton said, passed practically the whole of his life in Peterborough, he had grown to manhood with the rest of them, he had been actively engaged in business pursuits, in which naturally conflicting interests had clashed, he had been engaged in many a stern political fight, in which very many of the gentlemen present had been active opponents. In these he had given and received hard knocks, but he had striven to promote what he thought was right without offence. (Applause.) He had been willing to concede to his most energetic opponents the honest enjoyment of their opinions. He had tried to so conduct himself in relation to his opponents that when the smoke of battle had rolled away, nothing in the way of hostile feeling should rankle in their hearts or in his own. (Applause.) And he took this occasion of asserting that in the main he had been manfully met on this ground, and of the success with which they had mutually striven to maintain friendly relations abundant evidence was seen there that night in the presence of so many of his political opponents, but at the same time his warm personal friends, his good neighbors, and magnanimous fellow citizens. It was to the credit of our human nature, it was to the credit of our loyality to the mutal obligations of citizenship, it was to the credit of our public spirit, that we were able to take our stand on common ground, able to unite on an occasion when an honor to the town was recognized in the honer to a fellow citizen, however undeserving, for, said Mr. Stratton, wherever he was, whatever outside interests claim his attention, he did not hesitate to say that his heart was in Peterborough, that its interests were paramount with him. (Applause.) After all, here in Peterboro we were one big family, and our interests as citizens were one. There would of course be differences of opinion even in families—ever man with a wife knows that, and every man with a due regard for his personal comfort, knew his wife's opinion was the right one, that she always had the best of the argument, that is, if there was any virtue in the "last word." But with differences of opinion on other matters we were, as members of the civic family all united, at least all should be united, in action and sentiment, in every thing that concerned the material, moral, and intellectual progress of Peterborough. And that, he remarked, was the keynote of this magnificent demonstration. Though ostensibly he might be so to speak, the figure head, he was "only that and nothing more." The town had been honored in the honor conferred upon one of its citizens, and it was to that view and not to his personal merit that he was to look for a justification of that occasion. Whatever success he had achieved he felt that he owed it principally to his staunch friends in West Peterboro. While he fully appreciated and gratefully recognized the unswerving support of his Liberal friends, he had in this regard a large debt of gratitude to discharge towards many of his Conservative fellow citizens in Peterborough. He had been favored with the support of many of them on grounds that appealed more to patriotism than to partisanship. In provincial affairs, from the nature of the interests involved party lines were not so closely drawn; the elector had more of a personal interest at stake in provincial matters as in municipal matters, and was often inclined to support a candidate irrespective of considerations that would influence the exercise of his franchise in Dominion matters. In his representative capacity Mr. Stratton said he had tried to be fair to friend and foe alike, had considered himself the representative of the whole riding, and that every elector, whatever his political or religious creed, had a claim upon his good services. (Prolonged Applause.) He had not endeavored to use any power he might possess as a supporter of the Government to harass his political opponent. He had in a word tried to be broad, liberal, and fair, and it was a pleasure to observe that his endeavors had been so largely reciprocated and appre-

IRONCLAD FRIENDSHIP.

It is the custom in Great Britain for the ministers of the government to take advantage of their appearance at public banquets and other similar gatherings to convey to the nation very important information especially regarding the foreign relations and policy of the administration. Lord Salisbury's speech at the Guild hall banquet, on Thursday evening, announced the satisfactory position of the empire as regards its present alliances, which will preclude the possibility of interference of unfriendly powers during the war with the Transvaal. The United States and Germany stand with Great Britain in alliance against the world.

On the following evening evidently as a supplementary assurance to that conveyed to the nation by the premier, United States ambassador Choate in a speech delivered at the Sir Walter Scott club annual banquet in Edinburg, referred to the subject of the relations between the republic and the empire, and said —

"Truly, your country and mine are connected by bonds of sympathy which were never stronger or closer than at this very hour.

"Little did Dandie Dinmont dream when he remarked 'blood is thicker than water,' that he was giving two great nations a watchword for the exchange of their love and greeting eighty years afterwards. I assure you that Lord Salisbury's words, uttered last night at the Lord Mayor's banquet, will meet a quick and hearty response on the other side of the Atlantic.

"Our own great writers said 'peace hath her victories not less renowned than war,' and this ironclad friendship that now prevails between these two kindred nations is her last and greatest victory. It means peace not merely between your country and mine but among all the great nations of Europe, and that means an advance of civilization to promote the prosperity and welfare not of the Anglo-Saxon race alone, but of the whole human race."

GROWTH OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mulhall, the statistician has been accumulating figures to show the growth of the United States during the five years from 1894 to 1898, inclusive, and the results while marvelous in themselves, are of special interest to Canadians. It is felt that the time has come when the expansion of the United States has reached that point when Canada must commence to reap the benefit of the overplus of population. This country offers just as free institutions, just as great advantages for the investment of capital, and as favorable a field for individual effort. But hitherto our big southern neighbor has monopolized the immigration, the foreign capital seeking investment, and the commercial energy of the Americans themselves. At the rate the United States is progressing, however, Canada must soon begin to feel the effects of the overflow. It cannot be otherwise.

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grisly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lochnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a fold where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

All Roads Lead to the Dressmaker.

Mr. Hornbill—Do you know, darling, I could pick you out of a crowd of women just by your style!

Mrs. Hornbill—I don't wonder, and me with this same old dress for the last two years!

The Prevalence of Appendicitis.

Surgeons admit that 75 per cent of all cases of appendicitis will recover without operation, but claim that 95 per cent could be saved by operating promptly on every case as soon as discovered. This discloses a debate of great significance, for physicians are disinclined to turn all cases to the surgeon. Morris has estimated that there are 200,000 new cases of appendicitis discovered each year in the United States. If this is true and the surgeons are right, 40,000 of them would be ruthlessly sacrificed under medical treatment. But physicians assert (and I wish I knew whether truly or not) that autopsies upon subjects that have died from other diseases than appendicitis show old inflammatory processes about the appendix in one third of the cases, just as old tuberculous cicatrices are found in the lungs where tuberculosis has never been suspected. In other words, one-third of all coming to the autopsy table and by inference a large proportion of the population have got well spontaneously from an unsuspected trouble which would have subjected them to a life endangering operation had they fallen into the hands of a surgeon of sufficient skill to make the diagnosis.

When surgeons extol the skill necessary to make diagnosis in doubtful cases, physicians retort that these are the cases in which diagnosis would better not be made. Obviously the subject has not crystallized and is in process of evolution, but even the laity clamor for an operation when there is recognized tumor and poisoning from pus absorption.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the heatedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 25 cents each, but with $35 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fiah department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Ragdale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Nixon's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye;
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored climes.—Andrew Carnegie in North

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors. The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape, a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean, then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

HARD CHASE AFTER A THIEF.

Who Finally Escaped Into the Woods—Exciting Incident Near Kingston.

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 15.—At an early hour this morning fire was discovered in the rear of the fruit store on Princess street, owned by Joseph Hiscock. The firemen worked hard and saved the building, from entire destruction. Hiscock's groceries and fruit were ruined by the fire and water. His loss is heavy, but he carries a good insurance. The building, owned by Richard Waldron, was also insured. The smoke penetrated the wholesale house of MacNee & Minnes, and the carpet and house furnishings store of R McFaul, doing heavy damage. They both carry insurances. Wm Smith sleeping in MacNee & Minnes' store had a narrow escape from suffocation.

Yesterday afternoon the local police received a telegram from Newboro' on the Rideau canal, to arrest two men who were supposed to have burglarized C H Reid's general store at North Augusta last Friday night. Constables Arniel and Bateson found the two men, who disembarked from the Newboro' stage about two miles outside of the city. They placed the men under arrest, but after proceeding along quietly for same yards, one of the prisoners thrust a revolver in Bateson's face and threatened to shoot if he stirred. He backed away and then ran.

Arniel handed his man over to Sergt. Snooden, and both Arniel and Bateson went after the fleeing burglar, whom they chased seven miles. So close did they press him that he discarded his overcoot. Several times he threatened to shoot the constables, and declared he would die before being taken. Under cover of darkness he escaped into a dense wood and could not be found. The man captured gave his name as Jack Wilson. He was attired in a suith of clothes, overcoat, boots, etc., stolen from Reid's store.

For Fox Bay Men.

Ottawa, Nov. 165.—In connection with the Fox Bay settlers on Island Anticosti, who are in poor circumstances, it is said that the federal government will be willing to pay their fares to Manitoba or the North West, where they will have no difficulty in earning a livelihood and be better off than if they never quarrelled with Meiner, owner of the Island.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sung it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. STORY OF MURDER

Told at the Inquest Upon Varcoe's Death.

FATAL BULLET WOUND.

The Result of Detective's Visit to the Premises.

Williams' Bullet Caused Varcoe's Death—The Wound Made by McIntosh a Superficial One—Some Interesting Evidence at the Inquest—McIntosh's Identity.

The number of the witnesses in the Varcoe inquest last night at the Police Court was so large that the inquiry could not be concluded, and an adjournment had to be made until Friday evening. Crown Attorney Dewart conducted the examination of the witnesses, and they were cross-examined by Mr. T. C. Robinette, representing the prisoner Williams. The latter sat quietly in the Police Court dock. He did not appear to be much affected by the evidence, but at one point a tear slowly trickled down his cheek.

The Three Bullets.

The report of the post-mortem examination, made by Drs. Caven, Cotton and Nevitt, showed that there were a number of cuts and gashes on the scalp, some of them appearing to have been caused by a revolver barrel. In addition there was a bullet wound in the back of the head, extending downwards. There was also a bullet wound in the left flank and another near the left nipple. One ball lodged in the upper part of the left lung. This was the bullet that entered the head. A 22 calibre bullet was found in the abdomen, having penetrated the stomach. The third bullet was found superficially embedded. It was a 32 calibre bullet. The wounds caused by the 32-calibre bullets were the ones that caused death.

The hair adhering to the cylinder of one of the revolvers produced was similar to Mr. Varcoe's hair, Dr. Caven stated.

The Scene of the Murder.

Detective Cuddy told of his visit to the scene of the murder, about six hours after it occurred. He said that he found a rear cellar window opened, with empty boxes piled up on the inside, forming steps down into the cellar. A stairway led up from the cellar to the store, and a stairway from that to the floor above. A kitchen, sitting room and bedroom were on the first floor. The east front window of the sitting room was broken, as were two chairs. On the second floor were bedrooms. The door of the front room had been pried open by a chisel, the same size as the one found under the prisoner Williams and marked exhibit "2." The room was in disorder. On a bed were blankets and pillows, stained with blood. There were powder marks on the blankets and blood on clothing identified as that of Varcoe. The other bedroom on the floor was at the head of the stairs. The bedroom on the floor below had not been forced open, so far as could be seen.

His Thrilling Experience.

Frank Armstrong, of 182 Queen street, east, said that on the night of November 8 there were in the house, besides himself, Noah Thomas, Allan Varcoe, Mrs. Armstrong, her two daughters and three younger sons, Miss Loake, Varcoe, the deceased, and his little girl. In the bedroom on the first floor Thomas, Allan Varcoe and the witness slept. When Armstrong retired he left Mr. Varcoe down in the store talking. Mr. Varcoe went up to bed before ten o'clock. Then the witness heard the other occupants going to bed and went to sleep.

He was awakened by Allan Varcoe, who jumped out of bed. He saw a light in the hall. "A man rushed into the room with a revolver," said the witness. "He told me to lie down and I did so immediately. I heard another man in the hall." The man who came into the room was McIntosh, the witness said. He shielded himself partly with his coat. Then he ordered the three occupants of the room to pull the bed clothes over their heads, and they obeyed. "We heard two men in the room while our heads were covered. They went through the drawers of our dresser and searched our pants. Then they arranged for one to stay and guard us. If anyone raised he was to shoot him. The next I heard was footsteps upstairs. Then two shots and the little girl screaming all at once. Allan Varcoe said he couldn't stand it any longer, and we all went out to the front room and raised the west window and yelled for the police.

"Two men were rushing down stairs from Mr. Varcoe's room. They ran into the front room and one raised the window and got out. The second man rushed to it, and Allan Varcoe struck him with a chair. He swung around and Thomas hit him and sent him through the window. He fell on the pavement stunned. The other man hung from the awning rod with one hand and his revolver in the other, pointing at the policeman. The next I saw was him running and the constable after him."

The witness then related how he found Varcoe lying bleeding on the floor and summoned the doctors. He identified a number of articles produced as belonging to the store. In cross-examination Armstrong said that the man who was knocked out of the window did not try to draw a weapon when he saw him. He did not see anything in the hand of the first man either.

McIntosh's Identity.

The police have been informed that the father and brother of the dead man, Curtis, or McIntosh, are living in the city. Curtis, it is claimed, was born and brought up here. At any rate it is certain that his father was in the city on the day following the shooting of Varcoe, and that he retained legal counsel for his son's defence. The statement that the dead prisoner Curtis was connected with a George street family of the same name is said to be entirely wrong.

Williams, the other prisoner, admits having known Curtis for about a year. Williams appears to be well connected, and his counsel states that he has no previous criminal record. He maintains that the other man did the shooting.

The inquest upon the death of McIntosh will be continued at police headquarters to-night, and the evidence taken which bears on the death of Mr. Varcoe will be read to the coroner's jury at the continuation of the inquest. The name of the man who guarded Williams when he lay stunned on the pavement has been learned. Heny Spottingwood, 219 Berkeley-st., was the man, and he will be called as a witness.

The body of McIntosh has been handed over to Alex. Millard, Inspector of Anatomy, by order of Coroner Johnson.

A Liberal Gets the Job

Edinburgh, Nov. 15.—The Right Hon. John Blair Balfour, Q. C., member of Parliament for Clackmannan, and Kinross, one of the foremost Liberals of Scotland, has been appointed Lord President of the Scots Court of Session, in succession to Lord Robertson, who has recently been made appellate judge. It is something unprecedented that a Liberal lawyer and politician should receive such an appointment from the opposite party.

Swore to Purity.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—All the officials and players of the Shamrock Lacrosse Club appeared before O'Hara Baynes, Official Commissioner of the Senior Lacrosse League, and made affidavits that they were "Simon Pure" amateurs. It is likely they will shortly be in possession of the lacrosse trophy.

A meeting of the Senior League will be held next week to decide what shape the trophy will take.

Bought Nova Scotia Land

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 15.—B. F. and D. P. Young have sold for $300,000 their property at St. Margaret's Bay, consisting of 20,000 acres of land, to Peter Ryan, the Toronto contractor, who, it is understood, is acting for Michigan and Chicago capitalists, who will continue lumbering operations and manufacture pulp. It is expected that about 1,000,000 will be expended in improvements and developments.

Against the Government.

St. John's, Nfld., Nov. 14.—The Ministerial party has been defeated in the bye-elections in the divisions of St. John's and Fortune Bay, the Liberals carrying the former by a majority of 485 and the latter by a majority of 117. The Government has thus lost three elections this year.

E. A. SMITH, Capitalist, Lowell, Mass.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment. This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

VINEGAR, THEN LEAD.

They Settled the Trouble at the Carbonville Postoffice.

"I think my most exciting official experience," said Captain J. R. Stone, formerly United States postal inspector, "was at the town of Carbonville, Colo., in 1878. It was a star route post, and there was much complaint about the nonreceipt of mail, so I went over to investigate.

"The postmaster was a man named Wilson, who kept a general store, and the postoffice consisted of a soap box on the end of his counter. When mail arrived, it was dumped in, and every fellow helped himself, an arrangement that worked well enough until a chap known as Black Hills Pete came to town. Pete disturbed the entire system. When he didn't get a letter himself, he would tear up several others on the principle that misery loves company, and, being a notorious desperado, nobody dared interfere. I got the facts, and as the mail came in that evening I took a seat in the corner and awaited developments, first ordering the box removed.

"A little after dark the miners from camp began to assemble, and presently in came Black Hills Pete. He was a big brute of a fellow, and I saw at once there was going to be trouble. 'Where's that letter box?' he demanded of Wilson. 'I've ordered him not to use it any more,' I said, getting up. 'Who the blank blank are you?' roared Peter. 'I'm the inspector,' I replied. 'Well, you get me that box quick,' he retorted, and, seeing him reach toward his pocket, I made a grab for my gun; but, as bad luck would have it, the confounded thing caught in the holster.

"In a twinkling he had me covered, but before he could turn loose a quivering voice called out: 'Pete! Oh, Pete!' The desperado glanced around, and there stood Wilson holding a large tin squirt gun used for drawing liquors. The sight was so ludicrous that the bully burst into a guffaw, and as he did so Wilson let drive the plunger and busted about a quart of the strongest kind of vinegar squarely into his face. The stuff blinded him, and before he could recover himself the storekeeper had two bullets in his shoulder.

"That's the true story of the strangest fight that ever occurred in the west. Pete recovered, but before he could be arrested was spirited away by friends to New Mexico. His right name was Luther Coleman, and there is a warrant now standing against him for destroying United States mail matter. After the episode I have narrated there was no further trouble at the Carbonville postoffice."—New Orleans

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally are served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

Shopgirl's Hard Lot.

Persons complain that shopgirls do not jump actively to wait upon them when they enter a store. Why not? The other day I saw a girl approach a respectably dressed woman of middle age—that's 35—and heard her ask, over the counter, "What would you like, ma'am?"

To this polite attention I was shocked to hear the woman reply: "You shut up! Don't you talk to me! I can ask for what I want, and I don't want any impudence from clerks!"

A few [illegible] from such creatures are quite enough to cool the ardor of any shopgirl.

Where the Pot of Gold Is Buried.

How many women are fretting and struggling along on a very little money when a good sized yard or adjoining patch of ground is going to waste! Yet that very piece of ground may contain all sorts of possibilities—clothes, furniture, books, medicines, luxuries and even necessities otherwise impossible.

Clear, plow, fertilize and plant. This done, the great beginning is made, and perseverance and attention will secure the rest. Onions, tomatoes, cabbages, celery, a small poultry farm, a violet or rose farm—any one of these may add several hundred dollars to one's purse every year. Small fruits, hops, tuberoses and grapes are also very profitable. With some intelligence a blooming garden can always be made a paying one. Make it a principle to have no more waste in the garden than in the kitchen.

If there is only a very small place and just enough raised for one's own family, try, after the table is supplied, to prepare what vegetables and fruits are left over for sale for winter use. There is always a demand for good homemade canning and preserving. Do not let a valuable scrap of ground be idle.—Annetta Halliday-Antona in Woman's Home Companion.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how the mournful crocodile

With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
—"2, Henry VI.," 1, 226.
—"Poet's Lore."

Smoking In the Dark.

"How can you account for the well known fact that a cigar when smoked in the dark loses much of its flavor?" was asked of an alleged philosopher.

"The reason is," said the philosopher, "that when all the senses are active each sense is more active than it would be if it were doing duty alone. So that when the eye ceases to work the palate and nose become dulled. To express it figuratively, the eye is endowed with a rudimentary power of smell and in the dark loses not only its sight, but its contributing power of smell."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a close, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

Blood

If the blood in sufficient quantity leaves the body because of a wound or hemorrhage of the lungs the result is death.

Life depends on the blood because the blood carries to all parts of the body the nutritive elements necessary to sustain it.

What if these nutritive elements are absent?

What if they are supplanted by poisonous, effete matter and disease germs?

The first result is disease—partial death. The final result is the same as from loss of blood.

All disease is traceable to impurity or weakness of the blood and that is the reason the "Golden Medical Discovery" cures so many different diseases—it purifies and vitalizes the blood—makes it rich, red and healthy—fills it with nutriment for the starving nerves and tissues.

Consumption is properly a disease of the blood—so is scrofula—so is rheumatism. They look like different diseases but one medicine will relieve all three.

"I am using a good many of your medicines in my practice," writes Dr. Joseph Pike, of Lost Springs, Marion Co., Kansas. "Ten years ago a patient of mine was badly affected with that dreadful disease, scrofula. Her mouth and throat were in an awful condition, and there were lumps on the outside below the jaws the size of a hen's egg. Other doctors said it was a fatal case. I felt confident that none of my remedies would benefit her any. It came to my mind that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was recommended for such cases, so I gave it to her as directed. Five bottles cured her and she is well to-day. She is married now and has three healthy children."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

THE COOKBOOK.

A nourishing dish may be made from cooked meat by stewing it very slowly in really good stock or gravy for 1½ hours.

An Italian way to give the touch of garlic to the salad is to rub a piece of bread with it and put it in the salad dish, where it lends its flavor through the dish as the salad is tossed.

Cook twice as much hominy as you want for a meal and pack what is left in a square dish. Next day cut in slices, fry in pork fat and serve with maple sirup. Rice is good fried in the same way, and children are very fond of both.

For baking, the banana should be green, but neither too green nor too ripe. It may be made most delicious by peeling and rolling in brown sugar and baking in a buttered pan in a very hot oven. It should be served around blanc mange.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has, to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

NEAR THE BIG HILLSIDE LEDGE.

A Tunnel Will Crosscut a Huge Ore Body

Republic, Wash., Nov. 8.—The great Hillside property is being developed by a tunnel. It has one of the largest surface showings in the camp. Where crosscut on the surface it shows iron from 40 to 100 feet wide. It is believed that the face of the tunnel is within 20 feet of the ledge. After its width and character are demonstrated by the tunnel, a shaft will be sunk to a depth of several hundred feet, as it is the only method by which it can be opened to any considerable depth.—Spokesman Review, Nov. 10, 1899.

Trespassers Beware.

Some time ago the Horticultural Society had Victoria Park fenced in by putting wire around the outside row of trees. This was for the purpose of keeping the school children, and others, from trespassing on the grass. It has not had the desired effect, however, and the police are determined to take action in the matter. Henceforth any one found crossing through the park will be dealt with in a summary manner. At this time of year the sward is soft and easily cut up, hence the action of the society.

LAST NIGHT'S BANQUET

ciated. This was the age of progress, an age of innovation, an age of improvement, the "growing time"—inasmuch as as the committee of management have grown sensible in having the ladies present at this banquet. It was a great honor and pleasure to have the ladies present with them. It was true they had not votes, and some hardened bachelors think that the ladies ought not to have a vote. Not that they are not intelligent enough, for there are very few women that haven't got better heads than most men—that is if one judges from the figures it costs to furnish a becoming hat—but on the very lowest grounds, on grounds of personal interest these petticoat-proof gentlemen felt that they would not be safe if the ladies had a vote because they would be sure to vote for the handsomest man.

Upon any subject the speaker did not claim to be an eloquent speaker, but when one's humble self was the subject it was natural to feel that it was easy to become wearisome. This was not the time nor place to talk politics either for be believed politics was a prohibited subject that night. But that did not prevent him from feeling patriotic, and expressing patriotic emotions. Out patriotism has a tremendous sweep. We can begin with our beautiful and progressive town, we could say all we could in its praise, and still leave much unsaid. We could next turn to our splendid province, the best and dearest land under the sun, a magnificent heritage which has only begun to achieve its destiny of greatness; we could go on to our splendid Dominion, the greatest colony of the Empire, equal and superior to many colonizing nations, and we could go on in our patriotic enthusiasm to the great Empire, of which we are the most important possession—an empire greater than the world has ever seen, the mightiest civilizing influence the world has known, for in the wake of its mighty and countless ships follow the highest type of civilization, and the broadest liberty, the widest freedom possible to human conditions—the refuge of the oppressed, the hope of the down-trodden. This was the Empire of which we were a part. It was an empire worth guarding, it was an empire that called for the united service of every son wherever he may be—we had shown that we appreciated the necessity of uniting, we had sent to the war centre of the Empire to help her in her hour of struggle, the flower of our manhood, and, as our clever local poetess, Miss McCollum, says, "the best of the brave." (Great applause.)

Hon. Mr. Stratton concluded his address by urging to united effort in promoting local and provincial interests, and thus cooperating we should help to draw closer the bond of imperial unity that now held in close touch the greatest empire in the world.

Song by Miss Hendren, of Lakefield, "England Shall be Mistress of the Seas," followed by "Fishing with Looks and Eyes," as an enchore.

"The Senate and the House of Commons"—was next given by Mr. Peter Hamilton, who humorously alluded to the continuous fault-finding with, and accusations against politicians of every party, and concluded that "the dead politician was in every case the only good politician" to be found in the arena of public life. And yet,, continued the speaker in looking around this vast and representative assembly present, and omitting politics in any shape or form, he almost felt inclined to withdraw that expression. He then jocularly referred to the Hon. J. R. Stratton's unlimited pluck and ambition in political matters when quite a lad, which traits of character, more fully developed in mature years, had secured to him to-day the proud position he now holds in the Cabinet of Ontario. In conclusion he fittingly expatiated upon the priveleged position of Canada to-day, as a self-governing colony in every respect, while at the same time enjoying the protection of the greatest empire the world has evre seen.

In response to this toast Senator Kerr of Cobourg next took the floor. He heartily thanked the assembled guests for the hearty manner in which the toast had been received, and humorously alluded to his title at Ottawa of "the Baby member of the Senate," of which he was as yet only eight months old. He regretted the unavoidable absence of Senators Dobson and Cox, who would have materially assisted him in pulling through the present ordeal, and deplored the responsibility thus thrust upon the "Baby Senator's" shoulders in these gentlemen's absence. Laughter. He congratulated the town and riding upon the honor conferred upon them in the elevation of Mr. Stratton, whom he felt convinced would prove a man true to the interest of his constituents and county, irrespective of politics. The newly appointed Provincial Secretary he argued has proven by his speech this evening that no mistake has been made in his appointment, and he wished him a lengthy career of usefulness in the position to which he had been so judiciously elected. Turning to the mammoth representative banquet before him, he thought it illustrative of the gallant charge of the noble 600. "We have ladies to the right of us, ladies to the left of us, ladies in front of us, but not the vollying and thundering of cannon; and yet they are darting their sparkling and intelligent eyes towards every nook and corner of this vast assemblage, and I must confess that I am a willing capture to their irresistible charriot wheels." Prolonged laughter. In conclusion he remarked that on behalf of the Senate at Ottawa, he must say that his cup of happiness is brimful and running over in the presence on this auspicious occasion of the exceeding gifted Prime Minister of this great province, the Hon. G. W. Ross. He championed the Senate of Canada, which although open to improvement, was a sound constitutional plank in the Dominion Government, and after an eloquent peroration on "imperialism" and "the "the destiny of the British Empire," resumed his seat amid a perfect storm of applause.

W. F. McLean, M.P. next responded in an exceedingly becoming and acceptable speech. He opened that if Mr. Kerr was simply a "Baby Senator," it was not because he had not been ready to take his seat as such before his time to be born. Laughter. The delay was due to the late arrival of the midwife. Renewed laughter. Turning to the standing of Canadians as a nation he was convinced that we were here to stay in spite of our neighbors to the south of us. Cheers. In conclusion he advocated the development of our vast natural resources and the control of corporations by the people and not the people by corporations. Prolonged applause.

George McHugh, M.P., of Lindsay, next replied, and while admiring the Hon. J. R. Stratton's very successful campaign tactics, admitted that he had never been known to strike below the belt. He heartily endorsed the government's choice of a Provincial Secretary—a man in whom both party and riding might well feel proud.

James Kendry, M.P., expressed in fitting terms his pleasure in doing honor to Mr. Stratton's elevation to a position he feels convinced he will fill with credit to all concerned. He knew, of no man who worked harder at the polls, and yet refrained from carrying politics to too great a pitch. He strongly eulogized the House of Commons as an institution in which will be found politicans capable of gracing the benches of any parliament in the known world. On behalf of the House of Commons at Ottawa he tendered his thanks for the honor conferred upon that body in his presence at the grandest banquet in the history of Peterborough.

"The Legislative Assembly"—was here proposed by R. M. Dennistoun in his customary eloquent style.

Hon. G. W. Ross, Ontario's Premier took the floor in response, and received a prolonged ovation. He referred to the Senate as only half a body, while the Legislative Assembly was a whole one. The latter depends for its usefulness upon the character of the men sent to it by the constituents, and Peterborough has been exceedingly wise in their selection of a representative—for the past few years at any rate—and they caught him, the present Provincial Secretary, young Setting party differences aside, he was rejoiced to be present at such a meeting where one could smoke the pipe of peace, was pleased to see the feeling of respect which prompted a general rejoicing in the advancement of a fellow citizen. Every successful government must be comprised of good business men; large interests are to be governed, and on business lines only. Mr. Stratton has been appointed to his present honorable position on account of his thorough business ability. He is also a man of indomitable energy and application, coupled with a large and tolerant spirit, which are necessary essentials to permit of Cabinet members pursuing the even tenor of their way, despite adverse criticism. All public men are subjected to strenuous opposition, which however is lost sight of on occasions like this, when such men as I are permitted to wear the white rose of a blameless life. Laughter. Legislation is acquired, it is in a certain sense a profession and selections should be made based upon the peculiar fitness of the indivuail. The duty of each party is to bent its energies towards the advancement of the country. Canada is a land of great possibilities and one of which we might feel proud. He then referred in glowing terms to the unbounding confidence of the late Sir John A. Macdonald in the great future of Canada. Prolonged applause.

We should rejoice on every effort made for the country's advancement. While no Canadian should adopt a hostile attitude towards the United States, and thought the British had been wise in their cultivation of American friendship in the past, which now assured an equilibrium of power which prevents hostile European governments from flying at Britain's throat while she is engaged in securing equal rights to all nations in South Africa. Does it not become us to step forth, as the lion's young whelps that we are, and contribute our men and wealth in the cause of maintaining and consolidating the British empire. We should take a large and comprehensive view of ourselves and of our relations to the Empire. The Hon. gentleman resumed his seat amidst enthusiastic applause.

The Hon. F. R. Latchford, Minister of Public Works and T. Blezard, M.P.P., also suitably replied to the above toast.

"Great Britain and Her Defenders of the Hour"

"Our Honored Guests."

"The Professions."

"Our Manufacturing, Mercantile, and Agricultural Interests."

"The Press." and "The Ladies," were also proposed and fittingly responded to, but owing to the lateness of the hour at which the proceedings terminated we are unable to give details.

NOTES.

The decorations was the work of Messrs J. J. Turner & Son, and reflected the greatest credit on that interprising firm.

Mr. George Graham, of the Oriental Hotel, supplied the dinner, which was served in a most creditable manner. The refreshments for the ladies was attended to by Messrs. Long Bros. and was satisfactorily performed.

There was upwards of 350 gentlemen was present, and fully an equal number of ladies.

Mr. Stratton was so overcome with emotion that he was obliged to stop in the middle of his speech for a few seconds This seemed to appeal to the hearts of those present who cheered and applauded him sympathetically.

The banquet was the biggest event of the kind that has ever taken place in Peterborough.

Dear Sir:

I have your favor of the 13th inst., and it is with pleasure I avail myself of the opportunity of referring to Mr. [illegible] R. Cresswell, one of your graduates, who is now in our employ. He is a young man possessed of marked ability. He is especially careful and accurate in all of his office work, thus manifesting very careful and systematic drilling and being fitted for such duties far above the average clerk. The above qualifications, no doubt, are the result of the practical and systematic training he received at your institution.

Yours very truly,

Cashier.

Nothing but the best should satisfy you.

The Mr. Cresswell referred to in the above, is Ralph Cresswell, formerly of Seaforth. His brother Harry, another of our pupils, is now with the Cresswell Cattle Company, of Spearfish, South Dakota, the second largest cattle ranch on the continent.

286 of our Pupils secured good positions in the 17 months. We can send you the list.

We allow railway fare to students from a distance. We can secure good board for ladies at $2.00 per week, and for gents at $2.50

A SHOOTING AFFRAY

Jno. O'Grady Fires Four Shots at a Toronto Bailiff

WHO NARROWLY ESCAPES.

One Bullet Passes Within a Few Inches of Bailiff Small's Heart.

Five Shots Fired, But No One Hurt—Great Presence of Mind Displayed by a Police Constable—The Affair Caused Great Excitement in Toronto.

Toronto, Nov. 17.—There was wild excitement at King and Church streets at one o'clock to-day when revolver shots rang out and Bailiff Peter Small, of the 10th Division Court, fled into Redden's hotel at the corner. One bullet went crashing through the window. P. C. Sockett ran up and found a middle-aged man brandishing a revolver. "Don't shoot," the officer cried, and adroitly closed in on the man. A wrestle for the revolver ensued, in which both men fell to the pavement. In the struggle the revolver was again discharged, but the plucky constable soon overpowered his man and lodged him in the cells at police headquarters. The prisoner registered as John O'Grady, of 262 Adelaide street west, a former hotel-keeper.

Although five revolver shots were discharged and the corner was crowded with people, no one was injured. Mr. Small had a marvellous escape. A bullet passed through his coat sleeve, where his left arm was rested against his side, but caused no greater damage than a hole in the cloth and a slight bruise. P. C. Sockett's right hand was slightly lacerated in the struggle on the pavement, but although a revolver was discharged under him he escaped any further injury. The affray created great excitement, for the street was crowded with men returning to their offices from lunch.

O'Grady is said to have met Mr. Small on Toronto street, and to have walked with him, on apparently friendly terms, down to King street, and along to Church. His drawing a revolver was quite unexpected. It is said that he fired indiscriminately. At any rate, the crowd quickly sought the shelter of doorways and telegraph poles. A citizen named Kelly, who tried to interfere, narrowly escaped death.

O'Grady accused Mr. Small of depriving him of his property. He is the owner of a hotel at the corner of Wellington and York streets, and the trouble is alleged to have arisen over a proposed transfer of the license of this place.

THE AFTERMEATH.

A Few Jottings Concerning the Banquet Thursday Night.

We omitted to mention that the floral decorations were supplied by Messrs. Jordan Bros.

Although plates had been provided for 250 guests, thirty-five extra had to be arranged for at the last moment. Even then all were not served.

The speech of the Premier was a masterly one, and only confirmed the high opinion that the people of Peterborough hold of Mr. Ross's eloquence.

The toasts of "The Press" and "The Ladies" were not reached, so the editor of the g.f.j. had no opportunity of displaying his eloquence. It is understood that Mr. T. D. Kerr, had sat up nights preparing himself to do justice to the ladies.

Mayor Davis made an excellent chairman. He spoke clearly, effectively and eloquently.

Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, who ably proposed the toast of "the Legislature of Ontario," made a capital speech. If Mr. D. should take to politics there will be another banquet of a similar nature in the near future in which the Hon. R. M. Dennistoun will be the guest of honor.

Many persons were anxious to hear Hon. Mr. Latchford, and came away persuaded that Mr. Ross has made no mistake in selecting him for a cabinet position

Grace was said by the Ven. Archdeacon Casey, who sat close to the chairman as one of the honored guests.

The singing of the national anthem at the opening of the toast list was not a success. It was pitched a trifle high, and only those who had stepladders with them could reach the high notes. However, it was sung with a will, only slightly out of tune.

Amongst those who sat at the first table was Mr. Geo. Wilson, the veteran editor of the Port Hope Guide, who returned a short time ago from an extended European trip.

The Hon. Mr. Ross and Mrs. Ross remained over until noon yesterday the guests of Mrs. Stratton.

Too much credit cannot be given the committee in charge, especially Mr. R. R. Hall, who worked like a beaver, and to whose energy and tireless industry the success of the banquet is largely due.

A PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Meeting of the Committee Yesterday in Which Important Action was Taken.

A meeting of the representative Committee regarding the Public Library, appointed to consider the question of establishing a free library or of suggesting a scheme to make the Public Library, while retaining its present status and excellent management, more generally available for the citizens, was held in the Town Clerk's office yesterday afternoon. There were present:—Ald McWilliams representing the Town Council, Dr Burnham, representing the Library; Dr Moher, representing the Separate School Board, and Mr W H Hill, representing the Board of Education.

On motion of Ald. McWilliams, seconded by Mr Hill, Dr Burnham was appointed chairman of the committee, and Mr S R Armstrong was appointed secretary.

The following resolution, moved by Ald. McWilliams and seconded by Dr Moher, was adopted:—That in the opinion of this committee it is advisable to ask the Council of the Town of Peterborough for a grant of $300 to the Public Library on condition that the membership fees for residents of the town of Peterborough reduced to 50 cents a year for one member and 25 cents a year for each additional member of a family, and that the same privilege be extended to residents of the village of Ashburnham on that municipality contributing $50 a year.

A copy of this resolution will be sent to the Municipal Councils and other bodies interested.

To Defeat McKinley.

Columbus, O., Nov. 17.—One of the most prominent democrats in Ohio is authority for the statement that a conference is to be held by the leaders of the democratic, union reform and socialistic labor parties, and the leaders of the Jones campaign, with a view of bringing about a fusion of those interests. It is hoped if the fusion can be brought about the anti-imperialists can defeat McKinley in Ohio in the presidential elections.

Publishers Imprisoned.

Melbourne, Nov. 17.—The legislative assembly has ordered the imprisonment of the publishers of the Daily Age and the Weekly Australasian for contempt, those papers having commented on the procedure of the select committee of inquiry relative to the Ministerial Administration while the case was still under consideration.

Spain's Woes.

Madrid, Nov. 17.—The speedy downfall of the Silvela cabinet is considered certain, and the rulers of Spain, dynastic and ministerial, if they were convinced that the trouble would end they would be devoutly thankful. Just what politicians think of the situation may be judged when it is known that all the talk relative to the formation of a new cabinet takes it for granted that that cabinet will be military. Just now it is considered possible that Gen. Azcarraga will be next premier, and also minister of war.

THE HEROISM OF A SMALL BRITISH FORCE!

An Armored Train Is Derailed and Most of Its Occupants Captured by Boers Near Colenso.

BRITISH LOSSES ARE NOT EXACTLY KNOWN.

Hard Fighting Has Taken Place at Ladysmith, and Transvaal Force is Advancing to Estcourt—Rumor of a Second Armored Train Disaster.

London, Nov. 17.—A special despatch from Durban says that another complete armored train has been sent to Estcourt to replace the one disabled by the Boers Wednesday.

GREAT BRITISH VICTORY.

New York, Nov. 17.—The Journal publishes the following special from London;—A special cable from Durban gives the very latest news as to Ladysmith, brought in by reliable messengers through the investing lines.

The Boers have suffered a disastrous reverse in front of the town:

Their loss is fully 400 killed and wounded.

The British made a sortie on Friday. The leading column was composed of colonial volunteers.

They manoeuvred cleverly to deceive the Boers and drew them from their positions in hot pursuit. Then a body of British regulars fell upon the flank of the enemy and drove them back with great slaughter.

The fire of the British was most effective. The ground was strewn after the fiht with the Boer wounded and slain. Their lines were thrown for a time into complete dismay by the furious charges of the British.

GEN. BULLER'S ACCOUNT.

London, Nov. 17.—The War Office has received the following despatch from General Buller;—

Cape Town, Nov. 16.—Evening—Have received from Hildyard, Pietermaritzburg, a telegram, dated Nov. 15, of which the following is the purport.;

The officer commanding the troops at Estcourt reports at midday that an armored train left Estcourt this morning with a company of the Dublin Fusiliers and a company of the Durban Volunteers. North of Frere they encountered a party of Boers and bean to withdraw. While retiring some of the trucks were derailed. The Dublins turned out and advanced towards the enemy, while the rest of the train appears to have returned without them to Estcourt.

The officer commanding the troops reports that he was sending mounted troops in order to cover their withdrawal, but that about 100 are missing.

BOERS IN A TIGHT PLACE.

Pretoria, Thursday Nov. 9.—The following despatch has been received from the Boer camp at Elandslaagte, under to-day's date;—

"Ladysmith has been completely encircled by the Boer forces. Our second big gun was successfully placed in position on Bulwan hill in front of Ladysmith. The firing of heavy guns commenced early this morning, with no casualties to the burghers up to the present.

Botha has heliographed from the south of Ladysmith that the British batteries opened a heavy fire with big guns, and continuously dropped shells into the works around Ladysmith. The Pretoria force was in a tight place, having taken up a position commanded by the big British fire, which was so hot that the position became untenable. The big gun, however, saved the situation.

SERGEANT SAVD THE CAPTAIN.

Estcourt, Natal, Thursday, Nov. 16.—A correspondent who has just visited the Sanatorium Hospital says all the armored train wounded are doing well.

Capt. Wylie, who was interviewed, said Sergt. Tod deserved special mention for having surrounded him with boulders to protect the captain from the rifle fire when lying helpless and wounded. Tod even lay down beside the officer to cheer him up. A shell landed among the protecting boulders spattering them with earth, but Capt. Wylie sustained no further injury. But for Tod he would have been killed.

Several men escaped marvellously. When Winston Churchill requested Capt. Wylie to call for volunteers to remove the upset truck, bullets were dropping on the track like rain. The men throughout stuck to their work, responding to the noble example set by Churchill and Lieut. Franklin, until the line was cleared.

Churchill actually left with the engine, but he got out at the next station, Frere, took a rifle from a soldier, saying he could not leave the wounded, and walked away in the direction of the Boers.

An Irishman's Bravery.

Sergt. Hassett, of the Dublins, behaved with the ggreatest bravery. He took charge of the firing party, and stood up unflinchingly during the Boer's hot fire. His example electrified the Fusiliers, who kept the Boers at bay by volleying.

Capt. Haldane fell early in the engagement shot through the shoulder.

Lieut. Franklin's conduct is highly praised. He exhibited great coolness during the critical period. He is reported missing.

The [illegible] of [illegible] last is described as being so heavy that a private, after being struck down, dug for his head.

Copeland, of the Durbans, was crushed to death by detrailed truck; Godfrey, a plate-layer, was shot through the head but is doing well. Lieut. Alexander had an exciting experience. A Fusilier who had been wounded in the arm by a shell, which shattered the limb, swung round and hit Alexander in the neck, almost smothering him with blood. The shell burst in front of the lieutenant on a level with his face, and he staggered, blinded for a moment. The next instant he saw his comrade lying dead at his feet, while he himself was unharmed.

ARRIVAL OF TRANSPORTS.

London, Nov. 17.—It was officially announced to-day that the British transports Malta, City of Vienna and City of Cambridge had arrived at Cape Town, and that the transport Manila had sailed from Cape Town for Natal.

The British transport Orient has arrived at Durban.

The Malta carries the Second Coldstream Guards, the City of Vienna the 12th Lancers, and the City of Cambridge the Second Scottish Rifles.

TO RELIEVE KIMBERLEY.

Londn, Nov. 17.—An undated despatch from De Aar, Cape Colony, says a strong British froe left there for Kimberley on November 10. When within fifty miles of the beleagured town, the relief party encountered a considerable party of the enemy. The Boers were routed after a smart brush leaving the road clear to Kimberley, which may now be relieved at any moment.

BOERS ADVANCE ON ESTCOURT.

Lorenzo, Marquez, Thursday Nov. 16.—The Standard and Digger's News, of Johannesburg, on Tuesday published official advices confirming the report that 3,000 Boers were advancing on Estcourt. The searching of the mines continues, but no startling discoveries have been made beyond the finding of a case of interesting documents, in one of the shafts, relating to the reform conspiracy at the time of the Jameson raid.

BRITISH KILLED AND WOUNDED.

Estcourt, Natal, Thursday, Nov. 16. Afternoon—The Red Cross train has again returned without bringing in the dead and wounded. The Boers declined to give any information as to the names of either the killed or injured referring the enquirers to the Pretoria press for all information. All that they would disclose was the fact that three of the British were dead and nine wounded.

BOERS IN FORCE NEAR ESTCOURT

Estcourt, Natal, Nov. 17.—Afternoon—The Elmelo Boer force has taken up a positin near Ennersdale, a few miles north of here. They have eight seven-pounders and two French guns. Their strength is 2,000 men. They have looted Henderson's store. All is quiet here and ready for the enemy if he should attack. There is no anxiety.

BRILLIANT WORK AT MAFEKING

~~Chicago, Nov. 17.—The Record's~~ London correspondent telegraphing last night says; The news from Mafeking causes much gratification. Enough is now known that the defence is one of the most brilliant feats ever performed by an irregular force. If the latest reports can be trusted the attack has slackened perceptibly. At least, it continues unsuccessful. Further nort the Boer forces have withdrawn, only to assist in increasing the besiegers at Kimberley.

The Ladysmith position still engrosses the attention of the military experts. It is thought the advance of relief is imminent. General Buller has left General Methuen with his staff and gone northward, but news comes on the other hand that the Boers are south of Colenso. These tidings are unwelcome as going to show the Colenso bridges have probably been destroyed, or anyway mined and ready to be blown up at a minute's notice. The destruction of the bridges would interfere with the passage of the British guns and ammunition. The Tugela infantry and cavalry would be able to ford, unless in case of flood, but the passage of guns would be tedious business. It is also feared the Boers would be able to isolate Estcourt before the arrival of the reinforcements. This is thought to be the obvious strategical plan probably being carried out by the force of burghers recently in Zululand, which it is the hope fo the British to be able to checkmate.

The news that Boers are still bombarding Ladysmith with six forty-pounders and the British naval guns not replying may point to a lack of ammunition which was feared from the beginning. Save for this the position of Ladysmith would still not cause uneasiness, though there are not wanting pessimists to declare that the relieving force would be unable to reach the beleaguered garrison in time to prevent General White's retirement.

WILL CONTEST BRITISH ADVANCE

London, Nov. 17.—The serious and unexpected disaster to the Estcourt armored train on the eve of the forward movement for the relief of Ladysmith has apparently convinced the British that the advance will be contested step by step. The Boers are seemingly swarming south of Colenso. While a large force has come from the neighbourhood of Ladysmith, a much larger force has arrived from elsewhere, and will probably turn out to be General Schalkburger's corp. The Boers evidently are straining every nerve and bringing up every man to reduce Ladysmith before the British relief force is ready. Their operations southward show considerable boldness and correctness of strategy. If their aim is to isolate Estcourt by cutting off communication with the Mooie River, where there is an important railroad bridge, everything points to the fact that the officer commanding the relieving column will have a more difficult task than is generally assumed. In front he will have a broad river to cross in the presence of the Boers; on his right and probably in his rear will be hostile bodies who are continually demonstrating their superior cunning.

Odds in Favor of Boers.

The official account of the disaster to the Estcourt armored train, showing that a hundred missing men are probably already on their way to Pretoria to swell the large number of British prisoners already there, besides a score of wounded, demonstrates that the British must have encountered big odds, as all accounts agree that the small British force fought with the utmost bravery. Winston Churchill's brilliant behaviour is compared with the gallant action in the Tirah campaign, which won for Lord Fincastle who also was acting as a newspaper correspondent, the Victoria Cross. The railway men of Estcourt have already forwarded a despatch to the general manager of the railroad expressing admiration for the coolness and pluck of young Churchill to whose efforts they attribute the saving of the engine and tender and wounded, and asking the manager to convey their admiration for the brave man.

Another Disaster at Estcourt.

There are rumors of another disaster to an Estcourt armored train, and it is reported that twenty-five volunteers, who formed the escourt, are missing. But there is no confirmation of these reports. When definite news from Ladysmith is available, it will doubtless be found that the garrison has been having a lively time. Nevertheless, not much credence should be paid to stories of trains full of Boer wounded taken towards Pretoria as the result of a crushing defeat sustained at the hands of the British. Experience has shown that these 'Kaffirgrams,' even though emenating from missionaries, are not trustworthy. However, there seems no doubt that there have been some sharp affairs. Heavy rifle firing, followed by an explosion, was heard in the direction of Ladysmith before daylight on Thursday, indicating a night surprise and possibly the explosion of a magazine.

The transports already officially announced to-day as having arrived at Cape Town carried the following troops.

The Malta, mounted infantry reserves and the Coldstream Guards, total 75 officers and 1,567 men.

The City of Vienna, the cavalry brigade staff, the 12th Lancers and a field hospital, total 15 officers and 519 men.

The City of Cambridge, the Second Scottish rifles and a field hospital, total 45 officers and 965 men.

The Gold Output.

A despatch from Pretoria gives the Minister of Mines' interim announcement of the gold output for October as a total of 17,246 ounces, against 426,554 in September and 482,166 in August. The despatch adds—somewhat ironically—that some of the companies have not worked the full month.

The Standard and Digger's News announces that six thousand Boers are marching through Zululand. It also says that a deserter from Ladysmith reports great anxiety among the troops to escape and that the provisions and stores are loaded on waggons ready for the flight of the British.

FROM A BOER SOUR CE

Pretoria, Wednesday, Nov. 15.—In an engagement yesterday morning south of Ladysmith the British advanced with 12 guns and attacked 800 burghers of the Transvaal. A big gun was fired on the troops, who retired at three o'clock to Kloof, near Ladysmith. The British loss is unknown. The Boers had one man killed and three wounded and thirteen horses killed.

No Settlement in Sight.

Washington, Nov. 17.—The indications are decidedly against any early re-opening of the negotiations looking to a permanent adjustment of the Alaskan boundary question. It can be stated positively that there have been absolutely no exchanges on this subject between the two Governments since the return to this country of the British Ambassador, Lord Pauncefort. The modus vivendi, which was adopted to define temporarily the respective rights to the two parties, is working satisfactorily, and there is said to be no reason just now for pressing forward toward toward a solution oft he permanent boundary issue. The administration feels that any agreement acceptable to Canada would be rejected by the American Senate.

Coal Famine in Russia.

Moscow, Nov. 17.—The coal supply in Russia is growing shorter daily, and a fuel famine among manufacturers is imminent. Already in Lodz, an important manufacturing town, of 315,000 inhabitants, town, seventy-four miles from Warsaw, many factories are stopping for want of coal.

Fears Bubonic Plague.

Naples, Nov. 17.—The discovery of a case of bubonic plague in the harbor of Trieste, Austria, has roused the Italian government to fear that the pest may invade this country. Surgeon Haiser, stationed at Naples, has been ordered to proceed at once to Alexandria and to report to the surgeon-general of the army on plague conditions in Italy.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL

Annual Meeting of the Association Last Thursday.

NEW OFFICERS CHOSEN.

Hon. J. R. Stratton Again Elected as President of the Association.

A Largely Attended and Important Meeting—Encouraging Reports Received Concerning the Work Carried on During Past Year.

Want of space prevented our report of the Trent Waterway Association's annual meeting appearing in yesterday's issue. The meeting was held in the Town Council Chamber, with the President, Hon. J. R. Stratton, in the chair, and a representative attendance present from the districts interested in the completion of the canal.

Among those occupying seats in the chamber were—Messrs. W. J. Chirpaw, Victoria Road; Dr. J. Grant, Victoria Road; S. J. Fox, M. P. P., Lindsay; M. B. Morrison, M. P. P., Mayor of Trenton; John A. Holgate, Foxboro; James English, Warden county of Hastings; R. Burgess, Warden county of Victoria; Duncan Graham, M. P., North Ontario; E. Hawthorne, Warden county of Peterborough; Alderman J. B. McWilliams, A. P. Poussette, Q. C.; T. E. Bradburn, S. R. Armstrong, secretary; Robert Shaw, Harvey; Peterborough County Council; Peter Hamilton, County Councillor Jos. Forster, North Monaghan; County Councillor E. A. Peck, Ashburnham.

Mr. Stratton in calling the meeting to order, explained that the main object in bringing the members together was for the purpose of electing officers, and also for the receiving of reports concerning the work of the past year. He drew attention to the fact that the attendance at the meetings was gradually increasing each year, and congratulated the members on the growing interest which was being shown in the work. Continuing, Mr. Stratton said he was in a position to give the meeting some reliable information regarding the future of the Trent Waterway, which would, he was sure, be gratifying not only to the members of the Association, but also to all residents of the town and district. It would be perhaps of interest to know that the Department of Railways and Canals has from July 1st, '96, to November, '99, expended $1,077,283. Very nearly all the work was done upon contracts which had been let recently, they having only been made previous to the elections of 1896. Mr. Stratton added that he was able to inform them that it was the purpose of the Government to complete the balance of the section between Simcoe and Balsam Lake, and it was estimated that something like $300,000 would be required to do this. Prior to the last session of Parliament the Government came to the conclusion that it would be well to take up and carry out with reasonable despatch the completion of the southern division of the canal from Peterborough down and at the conclusion of the last session of Parliament the Minister of Railways and Canals gave instructions, with the approval of his colleagues, for the immediate survey of the section at the southern end of the work with a view to at once inviting tenders and enterinl into a contract. Specifications of what may be called the Trenton section, were immediately prepared, but some delay arose owing to the necessity of further surveys and engineering information on the subject. These specifications are now in the printers' hands, and full reports will, it is anticipated, be handed to the Minister of Railways and Canals before the end of the month. The plans will be ready in ten days, when tenders will be immediately invited, and the work proceeded with. Mr. Stratton felt he could safely say that all who were interested in this enterprise might rest assured that there is no disposition on the Department of Railways and Canals or on the part of the Minister, to delay the earliest possible progress of the work for which the Department is now making the necessary preparations.

The president then read a most encouraging letter which he had received from Hon. Mr. Blair, Minister of Railways and Canals.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong, secretary-treasurer, submitted the financial statement, which was published some months ago, as audited by Mayor Davis and Warden Hawthorne. The minutes of the last meeting were also read and confirmed.

The election of officers came next in the order of business. Mr. Stratton announced that he thought that as the work for the ensuing year would be largely centred around Trenton, that the president of the Association should reside in that town. He would not therefore stand for office again this year, but would ask the members to choose a presiding officer from Trenton.

Mr. M. B. Morrison, Mayor of Trenton, stated that he had never been in favor of changing horses whilst crossing a stream. It had been his pleasure to nominate Mr. J. R. Stratton for the office of president last year, and whilst in the chair that gentleman had done more towards securing the completion of the work than any one else had ever done. A huge mistake would be made if there was a change made in the President, and it gave him great pleasure to again nominate Mr. Stratton as presiding officer. He had been delighted to hear the statement made by Mr. Stratton concerning the progress made in the work recently. The Association's time had formerly been taken up in trying to convince others of the merits of the scheme, but this was all over now, and all that remained was to urge the Government to a speedy completion of the work. He thought all the progress made was due to the work of the Association. He could remember when at the meetings there was difficulty in getting a mover and seconder to the resolutions, and it was very pleasing to look around and see so many representatives in attendance.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

A recent writer advises those who wish to know something of Niagara falls to go soon, because in addition to the water already abstracted for power more and more is being taken "with a wise caution so as not to strain the patience of the grandeur lovers to the breaking point." Water to produce 100,000 horse-power is about to be withdrawn by a Canadian company and the time is within computable distance when all that remains to be seen will be a dry wall over which the river once poured.

FAIR MILLBROOK.

Batch of Breezy Notes From Peterborough's Southern Suburb.

Mr. J. B. McMahon returned home from the Northwest Friday, well pleased with this picturesque trip.

Mr. A. Raper, Dominion Hotel, went up to Toronto on a business trip Friday.

Mr. Wm. Raper left Saturday to visit friends in the Queen city.

We would like to know who the young lady was that while spending a blissful hour received an affectionate candy with the words "When will we wed?" and while replying in a graceful manner accidently broke one of her precious little teeth. Better luck next time. L.

Miss Winnie McFarlane, Peterborough, is visiting her friend Miss Kate Carveth.

Mr. H. Hewson, one of our most popular and esteemed young men, made his usual trip to Lindsay on the evening train Saturday, amid the good wishes of his many friends. Among the Honorary ones we noticed F. G. Horner, I. O. R. T., and John Howard, O. H. M. S. Harry has become such a favorite with one of Lindsay fair ones that the boys show great anxiety for his Monday morning return so as to be able to give him an enthusiastic welcome and to sing "Welcome little Ben," to Canada's fairest town.

On Saturday as the Syrian peace of noon tide was being indulged in a terrific report rent the air and was taken by those in the suburbs, for an explosion, but which has since proved to be the new gasoline engine at the elevator. But things wore a different aspect at the station. As the hackmen and numerous others who were awaiting the arrival of the lightning express from Port Hope, had taken up position on the south side of the station, and were enjoying the autumn sun's balmy rays to full extent, all at once, to their astonishment, a terrific report rent the air and caused a panic. Many in their wild race for life were severely injured. But owing to the early arrival of Dr. H. Stitch who was at once summoned to the scene of the catastrophe, we are glad to report that the injured are doing nicely under his world renowned Gilead Balm treatment. Mr. John Howard in his dilemma mistook one of the N. T. C. cars for one of Baden Powell's armoured ones, and was located about two hours later hid behind a bundle of washboards, by Detective Horner. The hackmen, in their great consternation, took refuge behind some empty tea caddies in the Palace Restaurant, and would only consent to come out when assured by Charles Mosher, "engineer," that he was only testing the merits of the new engine by seeing how close he could explode the gas without hitting the station. Went Gray, who was occupying the most perilous position, never stopped running till he fell headlong into Russell's pond, where he was rescued by the powerful arms of James Turner, who happened to come along just in the nick of time. After regaining consciousness, Mr. Gray gave his sincerest thanks for his deliverance, claiming that he had seen a good speculation for a horse deal which he wished to take advantage of.

Mr. Herb Law has entered into the store of Mr. J. Steele, jeweler. We wish him success in his chosen profession.

Rev. Mr. Phelps, of Oakwood, formerly of here, preached a very appropriate missionary sermon Sunday.

Mr. C. Tait left Tuesday for a fortnight's visit to his old home in Bowmanville.

Messrs. Geo Sotheran, Chas Needler, J. Dawson and Chas. Leach, returned home Tuesday, after a successful hunting trip back north, bringing with them the alloted number of deer besides numerous other small game. One of the deer tipped the scales at 575. We offer our congratulations.

Miss M. Sotheran, of Lindsay, returned home Tuesday after spending a pleasant visit with her uncle, Mr. Geo. Sotheran.

We would like to know where Johnny M. is going to spend Christmas.

Miss Edna Given returned home Wednesday, after spending an enjoyable two months holiday in western Ontario.

OMEMEE.

Isaac Richardson made a large shipment of hogs last week.

The farmers never got more plowing done nor the root crop taken up in better shape than this fall.

There is a large amount of grain coming in.

Our business houses are on the lookout for burglars. Attempts have already been made. Winchesters and British Bull-dogs are in store for the next midnight mechanics.

The burning of the old mortgage of the balance debt on the Presbyterian church here, was held in the basement of the church last week, and proved a very interesting and pleasant evening. Light refreshments were served. The history of this church as a mission station since 1838 was given by Rev. Mr. Kennawin, the enthusiastic and energetic pastor in charge now. A good musical programme made up a very pleasant and profitable evening.

A very pretty wedding took place at Mr. John Donaldson's last Wednesday evening, his daughter being united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Savigny, merchant, of Peterborough, by the Rev. Mr. Kennawin.

HAVELOCK.

Mr J Toman and Mr George Phillips have returned from the hunt having secured their limit. Mr J Carey's party had excellent success as usual.

Miss R Dean, sister of Mrs Wm Nicholl, returned on Saturday evening from Cuba, where she has been in the employ of the United States Government as nurse in the recent war.

On Thursday morning Miss Dean will start for Manilla, where she will pursue her duties in the army there, while the war lasts.

Mr H Fordham, an old citizen of Havelock, while temporarily insane, from serious troubles, took a large dose of strychnine on Sunday evening last. A doctor was quickly summoned and succeeded in pumping out his stomach and saving his life. Mr Edmison was called down on Tuesday by Mr W Mathieson, but Mr Fordham having repented nothing was done in the matter.

Mr A Copp who was injured at Sharbot Lake by the explosion of piece of dnamite, is slowly recovering.

The revival services which have been going on in the Methodist church for the past seven weeks, are proving a great success. Rev Mr Bell, who is conducting the services has been well rewarded for his labors.

Butter Market to be Formed.

Mr G Payne of the Warminster factory and Mr W T Buck of the Norwood factory, who were the only factory representatives present on Wednesday have every faith in the project, and feel that the small attendance at Wednesday's meeting was not due so the people having no faith in the idea of forming a butter market. They have called a meeting for Wednesday, the 29th inst., when it is hoped that a successful organization will be accomplished. There is no reason why there cannot be a market of at least twelve factories formed for this district. The following cheese factories are now engaged in butter making for the winter: North Smith, Central Smith, Lakefield, Blackstock, Westwood, Norwood, Hastings, Ormonde, Lang, Warminster and Warsaw.

The Curing of Ills No Longer a Luxury.

Old Hutch, the one time Chicago Wheat Plutocrat, leaves the formula of a cure for dyspepsia, given him by the greatest dietetic specialist in the world, a bequest to suffering humanity; made up into tabules heavily coated with chocolate, and called Hutch Tablets, that the benefit of the billionaire's legacy may be within the reach of all. Ten Hutch Tablets can be obtained for ten cents. Endorsed by the most prominent physicians of Canada and the United States Hutch Tablets as a cure for dyspepsia are regarded by them as the only preparation which works in a natural and healthful manner. Never before has a preparation received so many marks of distinguished approval as has Hutch Tablets, the cure for stomach troubles with a special feature of giving instant relief to and permanently curing indigestion. From the instant of its conception in the brain of the great dietetic specialist of New York up to the present moment of writing, the progress of Hutch Tablets has been a succession of triumphs, unique in the history of proprietary preparations. The reason of its marvellous success is that it is efficacious. It assists digestion, increases the secretion of the gastric juices, causes perfect assimilation, and by being gently cathartic expels all excreta which may remain in the intestines to poison the system with its pestiferous gases and poisonous liquids. In this way Hutch advances all the organs in a healthful natural manner, and no organ is invigorated at the expense of another; Peter is not robbed to pay Paul. Peter-robbed-to-pay-Paul policy is that of all other dyspepsia cures and is bound to end disastrously. The formula of Hutch will at once be made known to your family physician and will be placed on the prescription lists of the hospitals. No more headache. Headaches result from a sick stomach and excrement which is not expelled from the intestines. The matter remains in the system, forms gases as stated before, and poisons the blood with its deleterious liquids. These reach and inflame the delicate organs of the brain—hence that dull maddening throb. Hutch by being instantly solvent is able to start work immediately. Its value as a headache cure is evident. Already a large number of testimonials have been received from cases cured and deriving much benefit from Hutch Tablets. It is not claimed that Hutch Tablets are infallible. Quacks and Impostors do that for their so-called "remedies" and "cures." What is claimed for Hutch is that it will cure the most obstinate stomach troubles and give relief where all others fail in ninety-nine out of a hundred cases. None such as Hutch. Ten for ten cents. At all first-class drug establishments.

SEALSKIN REGULATIONS.

Assistant Secretary Spaulding Relaxes the Obnoxious Rule.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 16.—A Washington special to the Free Press says—Assistant Secretary Spaulding has again relaxed the regulations with regard to sealskin garments brought into the United States by foreign tourists. In the ruling recently made in order to prevent the indiscriminate bringing in of garments manufactured from pelagic skins, it was provided that each foreign tourist should secure a certificate that his apparel was not merchandise. Owing to complaints General Spaulding has modified the original ruling so as to permit tourists to make affidavits before the notaries at the port of arrival instead of port of departure. This modification will afford relief and greater protection against frauds, because if false affidavits are made the United States courts can punish the offenders, which is not the case with affidavits made in Canada.

They Keep Moving.

The religion of a Bedouin of the desert is to be to "move onward." Having once begun the nomadic life, it becomes almost necessary for them to keep it up. In the first place, they don't want to settle down, and they wouldn't have any place to stop if they wanted to. Sometimes it becomes expedient that they make great haste in their long journeys. Wandering around over the plains are other tribes whose only occupation is "moving on." There is frequently enmity between two of these Arabian families, and should one pursue the other it behooves the pursued to hasten onward with all the speed their animals are capable of. Or, it may be that the springs of water are so widely separated that hard travel is necessary to make the distance from one to the other in a day.

When either of these contingencies arises, they cook and eat while on the march. They don't eat much. Two or three dinners such as American boys and girls are used to every day and something extra for Sundays and company are supposed not to agree with Bedouin children's stomachs. When on the road, bread is their chief food. This is baked while riding. One woman will mix the coarse flour which is carried in a sack on the back of her camel, another will roll and shape the dough, which is brought to her in small quantities, and a third will make a fire in an earthen vessel and attend to the baking. Women or boys on foot run along from one cook to the other and carry the material, and when the feast is ready they distribute it among the various members of the tribe.

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally see served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving unbroken the tiny hearts; lay them all in cold water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving, wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and close loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the biggest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my derndest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes, said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

No King in the Dark.

"How can you account for the well known fact that a cigar when smoked in the dark loses much of its flavor?" was asked of an alleged philosopher.

"The reason is," said the philosopher, "that when all the senses are active each sense is more active than it would be if it were doing duty alone. So that when the eye ceases to work the palate and nose become dulled. To express it figuratively, the eye is endowed with a rudimentary power of smell and in the dark loses not only its sight, but its contributing power of smell."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

STARVATION WITH DEATH.

Three Men Lose Their Lives In Alaska After Terrible Privations.

Victoria, Nov. 16.—The Skaway Alaskan tells a thrilling story of starvation death in northern Alaska. The victims were M C Daly, of Coston, Mass., and two Frenchmen whose names could not be learned. The story was brought to Skagway by Wm Lawler, an oldtime Arizona miner. Late in the fall of 1898, it appears, Lawler, together with the three men mentioned and a fifth named J Smithson started out to prospect on the head waters of the Mosquito River. About Christmas the six men went across the range and began to stake ground on the Bananza river. A blizzard came on and Daly and the two Frenchmen became separated from the other two and wandered away without provisions and with scant clothing and blankets and a single tent. After the storm Lawler and Smithson followed the footsteps in the snow and finally came to their camp. Death had been there before them. On the ground rolled in his blankets, his form wasted to a mere skeleton, was the corpse of one of the Frenchmen. On a camp stove was a kettle containing a frozen mass that told its own story. It was filled with the rawhide thongs of snowshoes which the starving men had attempted to boil for food. A short distance from the tent close beside the trail was found the body of the other Frenchman; the wolverines had stripped every particle of flesh from the bones. A little further on, Daly's body was found in a similar condition.

Manitoba Elections

Winnipeg, Nov. 16.—At a cabinet meeting at noon to-day the date of the elections was decided. Nominations will be held on November 30th and the polling on Dec. 7th. Hon. Messrs. Cameron, McMillan and McIntyre will run for Winnipeg in the Liberal interests.

Hugh John Will Command

Winnipeg, Nov. 16.—Speaking with Sir Charles Tupper and Premier Haultain at a meeting at Indian Head, N W T, last evening Hugh John Macdonald said, that should a second contingent be sent from Canada to South Africa and the Manitoba elections were over, he would only be too happy to take the command.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound, thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

VINEGAR, THEN LEAD.

They Settled the Trouble at the Carbonville Postoffice.

"I think my most exciting official experience," said Captain J. E. Stone, formerly United States postal inspector, "was at the town of Carbonville, Colo., in 1879. It was a star route post, and there was much complaint about the nonreceipt of mail, so I went over to investigate.

"The postmaster was a man named Wilson, who kept a general store, and the postoffice consisted of a soap box on the end of his counter. When mail arrived, it was dumped in, and every fellow helped himself, an arrangement that worked well enough until a chap known as Black Hills Pete came to town. Pete disturbed the entire system. When he didn't get a letter himself, he would tear up several others on the principle that misery loves company, and, being a notorious desperado, nobody dared interfere. I got the facts, and as the mail came in that evening I took a seat in the corner and awaited developments, first ordering the box removed.

"A little after dark the miners from camp began to assemble, and presently in came Black Hills Pete. He was a big brute of a fellow, and I saw at once there was going to be trouble. 'Where's that letter box?' he demanded of Wilson. 'I've ordered him not to use it any more,' I said, getting up. 'Who the blank blank are you?' roared Peter. 'I'm the inspector,' I replied. 'Well, you get me that box quick,' he retorted, and, seeing him reach toward his pocket, I made a grab for my gun; but, as bad luck would have it, the confounded thing caught in the holster.

"In a twinkling he had me covered, but before he could turn loose a quavering voice called out: 'Pete! Oh, Pete!' The desperado glared around, and there stood Wilson holding a large tin squirt gun used for drawing liquors. The sight was so ludicrous that the bully burst into a guffaw, and as he did so Wilson let drive the piston and hurled about a quart of the strongest kind of vinegar squarely into his face. The stuff blinded him, and before he could recover himself the storekeeper had two bullets in his shoulder.

"That's the true story of the strangest fight that ever occurred in the west. Pete recovered, but before he could be arrested was spirited away by friends to New Mexico. His right name was Luther Coleman, and there is a warrant now standing against him for destroying United States mail matter. After the episode I have narrated there was no further trouble at the Carbonville postoffice."—New Orleans

Where the Pot of Gold Is Buried.

How many women are fretting and struggling along on a very little money when a good sized yard or adjoining patch of ground is going to waste! Yet that very piece of ground may contain all sorts of possibilities—clothes, furniture, books, medicines, luxuries and even necessities otherwise impossible.

Clear, plow, fertilize and plant. This done, the great beginning is made, and perseverance and attention will secure the rest. Onions, tomatoes, cabbages, celery, a small poultry farm, a violet or rose farm—any one of these may add several hundred dollars to one's purse every year. Small fruits, hops, tuberoses and grapes are also very profitable. With some intelligence a blooming garden can always be made a paying one. Make it a principle to have no more waste in the garden than in the kitchen.

If there is only a very small place and just enough raised for one's own family, try, after the table is supplied, to prepare what vegetables and fruits are left over for sale for winter use. There is always a demand for good homemade canning and preserving. Do not let a valuable scrap of ground be idle.—Annette Halliday-Antona in Woman's Home Companion.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (4, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how the mournful crocodile

With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
—"2, Henry VI.," 3, 226.
—"Poet's Lore."

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 36 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians, probably through the Phoenicians.

County Magistrate Edmison was down to Havelock recently on peculiar business. Mr. H. Fordham, an old citizen of the village, while temporarily insane, took a dose of strychnine on Sunday evening. A doctor was called and Fordham's life was saved. No action was thought necessary by the magistrate.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

CHANGE IN MILITARY ORDERS.

Leinsters Will Stay at Halifax—Troops to West Indies Withdrawn.

Halifax, Nov. 16.—Important orders were received here this morning by which the Leister Regiment will remain in Halifax indefinitely. The regiment was under orders to leave Hrlifax for Ireland on the 26th inst., and were to be replaced by the Worcestershire Regiment now doing garrison duty in the West India.

The Worcestershire Regiment has been ordered to England at once, and no troops will be sent to replace them.

The officers of the Leinsters had made all arrangements for the sale of personal effects. Military authorities here state the proceedings are unusual and significant.

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grizzly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lochnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a fold where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

A raw egg swallowed will detach a fishbone in the throat.

A good cure for corns is to rub them night and morning with a piece of ordinary sandpaper. If this method is persevered in, great relief is at once obtained, and the corns will gradually disappear.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Straight, full skirts continue to be used in making up sheer transparent summer textiles for slender waists.

The new corded taffeta silks in a great variety of summer colorings and effects are in favor for making up dressy shirt waists.

The black and white striped fabrics in silk or silk and wool effects, which impart length and slenderness to the figure, are uncommonly handsome and varied in design this year.

The pretty Tudor sleeve, cut off at the top and finished above the deep upward point with a small gathered cap of fabric matching the yoke or guimpe, is a model used on costumes and toilets of every sort.

On many of the costumes of foulard, figured taffeta or surah, crêpe de chine, drap d'ete, summer costume cloth, etc., the waist is belted at the back and on the sides, but in front is in jacket style, with tabbed ends falling below the waist line.

One of the most graceful summer models for a rather full figure, to use in making up organdie muslin, dimity, batiste and similar goods, is the new seven gored model, with a pretty demitrain, to be made up separately over a foundation skirt of exactly the same shape.

Skirts with closings at the side instead of at the back are now the most favored. If so arranged, the round waist or basque bodice can be permanently fastened to the skirt at the back, thus avoiding the time and trouble necessarily given to a waist and skirt differently laced or hooked.

White veiling or barege may be as elaborately trimmed as a white organdie. It will have as cool an effect, be nearly as comfortable on a hot day as cotton, and during a sudden change in the temperature the light wool gown will give the needed protection.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Kyrle Bellew denies the rumor that he is coming to the United States with Henry Irving.

Rose Coghlan, who plays in "Mlle. Fifi," has patented a sunshade for use at the seashore.

A dramatization of "The Hidden Hand," by Mrs. Southworth, was recently produced in Chicago.

Digby Bell is to be seen in "Arizona." Next season he will be in one of Charles Frohman's companies.

Phœbe Davies has a belt made from Mauser shells found on dead Spaniards after the fight on San Juan hill.

Since Calve has her tombstone and Sarah Bernhardt her coffin, why do not certain would be players go and bury themselves?

At the Filipino theaters of Manila it is the custom to show appreciation by tossing coins on the stage in lieu of bouquets.

The German emperor's play, "Eisenzahn," means "The Iron Tooth," and, with his imperial pull, it should draw well.

Venie Bennett, sister to the late Alice Atherton and widow of the comedian John A. Mackey, will appear in the vaudeville theaters.

As an instance of how the romantic drama has revived abroad, no less than six companies are touring England with "The King's Musketeer."

It is stated that Reginald De Koven has received about $75,000 from "Robin Hood." Barrie will probably take $100,000 or more from "The Little Minister."

Aubrey Boucicault, who plays the husband in "Mlle. Fifi," is said to have inherited some of his father's talent as a playwright and is now finishing two plays which may be produced next season.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A folding stepladder has recently come into use in which the legs and step supports are hinged at the center to close up when not in use, allowing the ladder to be stored in about half the space of the old ladder.

A carving knife sharpener and fork guard are combined in a Pennsylvanian's patent, the upper portion of the guard having two disks carried on spindles to rotate as the edge of the knife is drawn between them.

In a new bicycle tire the resiliency is obtained by hollowing the face of the rim deeply and stretching a strip of fabric across the face, with a ring of rubber or other flexible material suspended in the center of the fabric.

A pneumatic axle bearing for vehicles has been patented to take the place of inflated tires on road wagons, being less liable to puncture, the weight being carried by pneumatic rings placed inside drums surrounding the axle.

THE BOOKMAKERS.

Margaret Deland says she reads economics, history and the newspapers for instruction and novels only for entertainment.

R. W. Chambers, when not writing books, gives his time to many fads. He collects butterflies, designs uniforms and keeps up his painting.

Max Pemberton, the author, is also a good business man and combines with his literary labors the London agency for an American publishing house. His home in West Hampstead is an ideal place.

Dr. Conan Doyle, it is reported, intends to contest a seat in parliament. Meanwhile he is turning into a playwright. He has just brought out a play (a domestic drama called "Halves") in Scotland and is about to produce another.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate since you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.

Bone dust for raspberries and blackberries may be simply scattered broadcast over the ground, as the necessary cultivation will work it sufficiently in with the soil.

Blood

If the blood in sufficient quantity leaves the body because of a wound or hemorrhage of the lungs the result is death.

Life depends on the blood because the blood carries to all parts of the body the nutritive elements necessary to sustain it.

What if these nutritive elements are absent?

What if they are supplanted by poisonous, effete matter and disease germs?

The first result is disease—partial death. The final result is the same as from loss of blood.

All disease is traceable to impurity or weakness of the blood and, that is the reason the "Golden Medical Discovery" cures so many different diseases—it purifies and vitalizes the blood—makes it rich, red and healthy—fills it with nutriment for the starving nerves and tissues.

Consumption is properly a disease of the blood—so is scrofula—so is rheumatism. They look like different diseases but one medicine will relieve all three.

"I am using a good many of your medicines in my practice," writes Dr. Joseph Fike, of Lost Springs, Marion Co., Kansas. "Ten years ago a patient of mine was badly affected with that dreadful disease, scrofula. Her mouth and throat were in an awful condition, and there were lumps on the outside below the jaws the size of a hen's egg. Other doctors said it was a fatal case. I felt confident that none of my remedies would benefit her any. It came to my mind that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was recommended for such cases, so I gave it to her as directed. Five bottles cured her and she is well to-day. She is married now and has three healthy children."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

The Gold Lake Party.

The Gold Lake Hunting Club returned Thursday night with 21 deer as the result of their season's efforts. When the party reached Taylor's—a few miles on this side of Buckhorn, one of the horses dropped dead. There were four rigs all told, used to convey the party and their products and baggage home, and the particular rig had a load made up of two canoes and four or five men. They secured another horse from a man who happened to come along in a buggy, and thus drove to town. The party had a very enjoyable time, the cottage, which was built at Gold Lake, affording much comfort. Mr Snowden, the chief of the party, told the Times yesterday, on the quiet, that the retreat from the north was hastened on account of the condition of the buttermilk tank. It had run so low that it was unsafe to remain another hour.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

A report of the meeting held yesterday of representatives of the various bodies mainly interested in the establishment of what will probably be a free public library, appears in another column. Ald. McWilliams, who is always to the fore in promoting any scheme that will benefit the community, moved a resolution, which was adopted, recommending the Council to grant $300 a year for the purpose.

The Times has always been in favor of a free library, and while the present scheme does not propose to make the library free, it is next thing to it. The present excellent library comprises upwards of 9,000 volumes. There are sufficient with the usual additions from time to time, to afford reading matter for a much greater number of people than at present, patronize the Public Library. The proposed grant of $300, will, it is agreed, make up for the loss by reason of the reduced membership fee. It is urged, and we think rightly too, that the increase in the number of patrons will in the near future make up this difference. The only other point is, will the present efficient librarian be able to attend to patrons without extra assistance? We hope the rush for membership will be so great that an assistant will be required, for increased patronage means increased revenue.

The Times is therefore of the opinion that the move is a good one, and recommends is adoption by the public Library Board

Will Break Under the Strain of Indigestion—Here's the Testimony of the Preacher and His Wife—Backsliders From Good Health Reclaimed by the Power of the Great South American Nervine.

Rev. W. S. Barker, of Peterboro', says—"I was greatly afflicted with indigestion and nervous prostration, and my wife was all run down and suffering from general debility, and we heartily join hands in giving testimony to the great relief and curative powers of South American Nervine. Splendid results followed the taking of the first bottle, and a few bottles have cured us both and we cheerfully recommend it to our fellow-sufferers." Sold by Ormond & Walsh and H. S. McDonald.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Mr. James English, Warden of Hastings county, seconded Mr. J. R. Stratton's nomination.

The complete list of officers was re-elected as follows—

President—Hon. J. R. Stratton, M. P. P., Peterborough.

1st Vice President—M. B. Morrison, M. P. P., Mayor of Trenton.

2nd Vice President—W. T. C. Boyd, of Bobcaygeon.

Secretary-Treasurer—S. R. Armstrong, Town Clerk, Peterborough.

Warden Bryans, of Victoria County, spoke of the recent advance of 25 per cent. in railway rates, and voiced his pleasure at seeing the canal approaching its completion.

M. B. Morrison, M. P. P., brought up the subject of increasing the draft of the canal. He thought that instead of a six foot draft, there should be a draft of eight feet in the canal. As the new work was to be undertaken at once, the Government's attention should be drawn to this point. In talking with the Engineer lately, that official stated that although the canal was only being excavated to a depth of six feet, yet all the locks but one had an eight foot draft. It would be only a small matter if in the new work the canal was excavated to a depth of eight feet instead of six.

Mr. A. P. Poussette thought that it would be a mistake to urge on the Government the deepening of the canal before it was finished. There was some error, he thought, in the statement that the locks had all an eight foot draft but one. He did not know of any which were over six feet deep. It would be of no advantage to excavate the new sections to a depth of eight feet when the rest of the canal was only six feet deep.

The matter was left in the hands of the officers.

On money matters being touched upon, Mr. Morrison stated that Trenton would do its part.

Mr. Bryans, Warden of Victoria, stated that Victoria County had already put up $100 towards the project, but he thought that they could be counted on to assist still further. He promised to lay the matter before the County Council when they met.

Mr. Chirpaw, of Victoria Road, asked that the Association take some action in respect to a dyke which was being constructed to raise the water in Mitchell's Lake. It would be a great advantage to the village to have this dyke nearer than the point proposed by the Government

Mr. Duncan Graham, M. P. P., stated that it would be an advantage to Victoria Road Village to have the dyke constructed, as asked by Mr. Chirpaw, and at the same time it would not hurt anybody else.

Dr. Grant, of Victoria Road, spoke in reference to the matter, pointing out that the site advocated for the dyke made a good shipping point for the village, whereas if constructed in the location now proposed, it would be of no advantage to anyone, being removed from any central point.

Moved by Mr. Chirpaw and Dr. Grant,—"That this meeting having heard the explanations of the representatives from Victoria Road regarding a site for the dyke on the Trent Waterway Canal at Victoria Road, respectfully requests that the Minister of Railways and Canals, if possible, meet the representations which have been already made to the Department on the subject."—Carried.

It was moved by Mr. A. P. Poussette and Mr. Morrison, that the officers of the Association be authorized to appeal to the various municipalities in the district interested for funds.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. John A. Holgate, of Fenelon, and Warden Hawthorne,—"That having heard the letter read from Hon. A. G. Blair, Minister of Railways and Canals, to the president of the Association this Association desires to give expression to the pleasure it feels in knowing the steps the Government is taking to complete the Trent Waterway, and to express the hope that the plans will be vigorously prosecuted, and the work carried to an early completion."—Carried.

The Association then adjourned.

OUR BEARDED LADY.

Designing men, through alluring and cunningly worded advertisements, constantly endeavor to work upon the feelings of sick and ailing women by inviting them "to write to a woman (!) and secure a woman's sympathy." It is well to remember that the best sympathy is to had at home and not from strangers, perhaps hundreds of miles distant. The object of the sick is to get well, and however precious sympathy may be, it never yet cured a seriously afflicted woman. While the sympathy of your milliner or dressmaker might be appreciated and be just as beneficial, if not more so, than sympathy from a stranger, yet it can not effect your cure if you are an ailing woman.

It is loudly proclaimed through the press that "a woman can best understand a woman's ailments," and on this ground sick women are invited to "write to a woman" and get the benefit of a woman's advice. The sort of "understanding of her ailments" wanted by a sick woman is a trained medical understanding. If a woman has this trained medical knowledge she understands woman's ailments not as a woman, but as a physician. If she is not a doctor she cannot understand the ailments at all, and cannot treat them successfully, because she lacks the necessary training.

As far as known, there is no regularly qualified woman physician connected with any proprietary medicine especially designed for women—no one, therefore qualified by learning and experience, to advise on questions of disease and its cure.

It is certain that there is no one, man or woman, connected with any "put-up" medicine for women, excepting only Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, who, like Dr. Pierce, is a regular graduated and qualified physician, and who has, like him, devoted more than thirty years to the special study and treatment of diseases of women.

For more than thirty years Dr. R. V. Pierce, a regularly graduated doctor, has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. On his staff are nearly a score of regularly graduated, experienced, skilled physicians, each of whom is a specialist in his chosen class of diseases. Every letter addressed to Dr. Pierce as above, has prompt, conscientious attention, is regarded as sacredly confidential and is answered in a plain envelope so your private affairs are kept safe from prying eyes.

The Entire Machine Moves Better.

Thing to be aimed at by every one is to keep the vitality up, and there is no easier way than by use of food that quickly and easily digests. A lady writes, "We have been using your Grape-Nuts for quite a while past, and while using them have discovered that an increase of strength and vigor has set in and also the bowels move regularly and better than ever before. My husband had been troubled with constipation for a long time, but since he has been eating Grape-Nuts the trouble has entirely disappeared. I know that the relief came from the use of the food, for we have a friend that was troubled in the same way and had been treated for a year or more, but since he has been using Grape-Nuts the difficulty has entirely disappeared.

I naturally do not care to have my name used in the public press, but am glad to advise you of these facts."—Stoughton, Mass. (Name can be furnished by Postum Cereal Co., makers of Grape-Nuts, Battle Creek, Mich.

The food is so made that it is predigested, and therefore does not distress the digestive organs. It is a concentrated food, and furnishes nourishment of the highest class in the most simple form. Added to this, the flavor is delicious. The grape-sugar can be seen in fine crystals glittering on the surface of the little granules. It is so easily digested that babes in arms can be fed Grape-Nuts combined with milk or cream, to marked advantage. Sold by all first class grocers.

SAD FATALITY IN FENELON.

Barnardo Home Boy's Deadly Sport While Handling a Gun.

A shocking occurrence took place about eleven o'clock on Wednesday at the home of Mr. Henry Reazin, public school inspector for West Victoria, situated about two miles south of Cambray village, and about eight miles from Lindsay.

It appears that Mr. and Mrs. Reazin went out driving after breakfast, Mr. Reazin having some business to transact at a distance. They left at home their baby boy, two years old last August, and their five-year-old daughter in care of a young girl from the Barnardo Home who had been with them for some months, also a Barnard boy about fifteen years of age, employed to do chores and care for the stock. This lad taking advantage of his master's absence, secured an old shot-gun that had been hidden away in the garret for years, carried it to the kitchen, where the children were playing, and proceeded to snap caps on the nipple, with the usual result—the weapon proved to be loaded, and the charge struck the baby's left leg, lacerating it in a terrible manner, while some of the missiles also lodged in the right thigh of the Barnardo girl—who was holding the child on her lap at the time—and inflicted serious injuries.

Dr. Ray, of Cambray, was summoned as speedily as possible, and Mr. and Mrs. Reazin arrived soon after the heart-breaking occurrence. The injuries sustained by the child proved to be so severe that the Dr. Shier of this town, was called in consultation but despite the efforts of both physicians the little sufferer grew steadily weaker as a result of the loss of blood and the end came at 9 o'clock. The girl improved rapidly after her wounds were dressed, and her recovery was assured unless blood poisoning sets in.

It was discovered that the gun had been loaded with gravel instead of shot. It is an old weapon and had been stored away in the garret so long that Mr. Reazin had forgotten its existence. While the boy sturdily denied having loaded the weapon, the general feeling is that he did, as no person accustomed to handling weapons would use gravel as a charge.

The sad affair has cast a gloom over the entire neighborhood, and Mr. and Mrs. Reazin have the sympathy of all in their terrible bereavement.

WHY RUSSIA IS NEUTRAL

Japan Holds the Balance, and Is Ready to Fight With England Against Russia.

JAPANFSD FLEET IS STRONGER THAN RUSSIAN.

The Mikado Has a Perfect Understanding With the British Cabinet, and His Subjects Hate the Czar Most Bitterly.

Debt of Gratitude to Britain.

London, Nov. 18.—For the neutrality of Russia in the present crisis, despite the virulent attacks of the Russian press upon England, and despite the open invitations which French journals are issuing to their good ally for a coalation against, and treacherous assault upon England, we have not to go far to find an explanation.

It is often overlooked by our good enemies on the continent that no coalation against the British Empire could be formed which would not instantly bring into the field on our side one or more powers who could never allow our navy to be destroyed. These powers are perfectly well aware that the smashing of England would be merely the preliminary to an attack upon their own vital interests. They are bound to us by no paper alliances but it may be stated with some confidence that they have a perfect understanding with the British Government.

One of the most important of these powers is Japan.

England Saved Her.

We saved her once in 1895, and she knows it. We saved her from Russia, France and Germany, and she remembers them and their action. "The heavy Russian battleships," says Mr. Lafcadio Hearn, who knows the far east and at that time was resident in Japan, "were stripped for fighting, and these alone could possibly have overpowered the Japanese fleet, though the victory would have been a costly one. But Russian action was suddenly checked by the sinister declaration of English sympathy with Japan. Within a few weeks England could bring int oAsiatic waters a fleet capable of crushing, in one short battle, all the ironclads assembled by the combination of France, Germany and Russia."

But if Japan remembers what we then did for her, she has never forgotten the conduct of Russia. She had hoped to regenerate China, for her lynx-eyed statesmen saw perfectly clearly what was coming; saw, too, that the only hope of holding back the monster power of the north and curbing its inordinate ambitions lay in a strong China allied with Japan.

Turned Out By Russia.

She was firt contemptously pitched out of Port Arthur, because her presence there would be dangerous to "the balance of power in China," and then she saw the State which had ejected her seize this priceless possession for its own use. No wonder that Japan burnt and still burns with fury; no wonder that, as a Japanese captain once said to me, "On the day that your fleet steams out against the Russians prepared for battle, you will find our fleet close at hand and ready."

Japan would have fought, even in 1895, weak as she then was, against three of the strongest European powers had not her statesmen kept in check the fierce pugnacity of the nation. Men killed themselves for rage at the news of surrender. The navy and army, covered with glory in the war with China, would have fought to the last had the fighting men had their way, but they were told that the war was only postponed, not abandoned.

Since then with redoubled vigor Japan has armed. She is now building up a navy which will give her a good place among the world powers. She is developing the army with all possible speed. She never falters, never hesitates; she knows that her national existence depends upon her armed strength, and that at the first favorable opportunity when England's hands are tied she will be attacked.

Will Show Heroism.

In the hour of death, in the day of battle, she means to show all the heroism of her noble race. She has adopted civilization as she has adopted rifles and battleships, because it is necessary to her existence, and she has been content to pay a bitter price for it.

On the other side, Russia has vastly developed her navy and is building the great Trans-Siberian railway, which, Russia fondly imagines, will place the Far East at her feet. She has trebled in a decade her outlay upon ships and guns and seamen and though in part this increase is directed against England, it is also in part directed against Japan, the new obstacle that has arisen in the Russian path to world-dominion.

When we remember that Japan as an Oriental power is still cruelly poor, the list of ships she is building will show the greatness of her self-sacrifice and the concentration of the national will upon the master-aim of securing command of the sea against the Moscovite adversary. She has now three of the largest battleships, four powerful armored cruisers, three smaller cruisers, six destroyers, and twenty-three torpedo boats on the stocks, completing or projected. She is doubling her strength of enlisted men and officers.

A Strong Navy.

Even as she stands to-day her fleet is equal in naval strength to the Russian squadron in the Far East.

The Japanese battleship Shikishima, a brand new vessel, on her way out, is faster, bigger and better armed than any of the Russian ships; the Yashima and Fuji are also new and very powerful.

The Russians are superior in armored cruisers, but they are vastly behind in modern protected cruisers, where the Japanese are very strong. Such a vessel as the Takasago, with two 8-inch and ten 4.7 inch quick firers, is a match for any of the Russian armored cruisers, except perhaps the huge Rurik and Rossia. But the But the Tokiwa and Asama could perfectly grapple with these two monsters. They are built to do it.

Japan, then, to-day has nothing to faar from the Russian fleet in Asiatic waters. She looks to England to prevent France playing the part of Russia's jackal and bringing up the four French ships which are in the Far East to fight Russia's battle's. She may look confidently; we will see fair play. As between Japan and any combination of European powers England thus holds the balance.

Is This Bubonic Plague?

New York, Nov. 18.—The British steamer J. W. Taylor, from Santos, Brazil, is detained at Quarantine under suspicion of having bubonic plague among the crew.

One man died at sea, Nov. 7, with very suspicious symptoms. Captain Waters and the ship's cook are both ill, and showing indications of bubonic swellings. All of the crew will be sent to Hoffman Island for observation.

The Quarantine is fully equipped with every appliance to meet and combat this disease.

Big Petition for Clemency

Kingston, Nov. 18.—A petition has been forwarded to the Governor-General, praying for clemency in the case of Robert Mackie, undergoing sentence for ten years, for complicity in the robbery of the Dominion Bank at Napanee. There are over ten thousand signatures, including members of parliament, clergymen, doctors, lawyers, bankers of Ontario, and the Mayors of Toronto, Kingston, Napanee, Belleville, Cobourg and other towns in Central Ontario.

The petition is fortified by new evidence just to light and favorable to the prisoner.

THE GENERAL'S SCHEME.

How Hutton Proposes to Rapidly Muster Our Troops in Case of Emergency

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—At the closing session of the meeting of the district officers commanding Major-General Hutton gave a comprehensive description of his plans for mobilization in case of war.

In his last annual report the general commented upon the impossibility of framing any form of administration which can be applicable to mobilization for war unless the existing small units of varying size are increased in numerical strength and made up to a uniform establishment. Regiments of cavalry, batteries of artillery and battalions of infantry must necessarily be of uniform strength. This change might be carried out gradually, and existing battalions, weak and varying in size as they are, might at first be combined into provisional regiments without interfering with their present identity. The units thus organised could then be combined into brigades and divisions. The War Office manuals, lists of stores, mobilization tables, etc., could then beutilized.

An Important Point.

In carrying out this plan two things must be kept in sight, the general said; the regimental sentiment of the existing units and the necessity of the organization being so adapted that large and important increases can be made in times of emergency.

By this plan two small companies of infantry are formed into a larger single company, who will thus upon amalgamation possess a double number of officers and a double number of non-commissioned officers over and above the establishment llaid down as necessary in the War Office schedules. This extra staff of officers and non-commissioned officers thus available will, it is proposed, be retained at the headquarters of each of the battalions forming the provisional regiment, and will there raise by volunteer enlistment or by ballot, as directed, the second battalions to raise the provisional reserve infantry regiment.

The principle would be applied in a similar way to cavalry. An active militia force which at present provides similar system in the case of the cavalry will give at the headquarters of each regiment nearly all the officers and all the staff of non-commissioned officers required for the formation of a provisionally reserve cavalry regiment. It will be observed, therefore, that, carrying out this principle, the active milita force, which at present provides a total strength of, on a peace footing, 35,000 men, would be increased to a war establishment of approximately 50,000 men. By means of the additional cadre of officers and non-commissioned officers allotted to the provisional reserve regiment an additional 50,000 men could be raised from the population without very serious difficulty.

The general will submit the scheme in his report for this year.

Important Changes for Bisley

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—Importan alterations have been made in the rules and regulations of the National Rifle Association of England.

Positions—In all volunteer competitions, unless otherwise excepted, the positions shall be as follows; At 200 yards, standing; at 500 yards, standing or kneeling; at 600 yards, standing, sitting, or kneeling; at 800 yards or upwards, any position.

Targets—The dimensions and divisions of targets shall be as at presen, except that he third-class targets shall be 4 feet by. 4 feet, the bullseye 12 inches, inner circle 24 inches, magpie 36 inches, outer rest of the arget.

Uniform—In individual competions the wearing of uniforms shall be optional, but if uniform be worn it mus be entirely in accordance with military regulations, except the cap covers of patterns authorised by he N. R. A. may be worn.

Order of competition—All competitons included in the grand aggregate will take place during the first insead of the second week as formerly.

A Field Hospital Corps

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—Next week Major-General Hutton will visit Torono and with representatives of Torono University, the Medical colleges and the School of Pharmacy, discuss the practicability of organising from the sudents a field hospital company and a bearer company of 45 officers and men each. The General proposes that officers shall be chosen from the professoriate of the colleges. At presen the bearer company at Halifax is the only one in Canada. No field hospital is yet in existence, but both Torono and Montreal are shortly to have such organizations.

The Queen Failing

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Horace Townsend, cabling from London to the Record, says—"I learn on trustworthy authority that great apprehension is felt in court circles over the Queen's health. Her strength seems gradually failing. She is quite unable to conduct business with that keenness and energy which she has until quite lately displayed. Her late visit to Bristol seems to have overtaxed her strength, and her weakness and frailty were pitiably noticeable on her return to Windsor."

Died in the Woods

Bobcaygeon, Nov. 18.—Wm. Henderson, who resides in the Township of South Guilford, went out shooting, but failing to return, a search party was formed. As there was about an inch of snow on the ground his tracks were easily followed, and about a mile from his house his dead body was discovered in the woods. He had evidently died from fatigue and exposure. He leaves a wife and six children. The hunting parties in the neighborhood interested themselves, and the Gartshore party made a subscription of $32 and gave it to the widow.

Dreyfus Leaves France

Geneva, Nov. 18.—Ex-Captain Alfred Dreyfus, who was forced by the rigorous climate of Carpentras, selected for his retreat, to leave France, left Geneva with Mme. Dreyfus for Basel. It is understood that his ultimate destination is Alsace, the German reichsland, in which province he was born.

GEN. WHITE MAKES A SORTIE

Joubert's Attempt to Make a Closer Invest- Foiled by the British Troops.

THE BOERS OUSTED FROM ALL POSITIONS.

Ladysmith Still Perfectly Safe—Boers Blow Up the Colenso Bridge and Occupy Helpmakaar Pass—Native Chief Assists Col. Plumer.

London, Nov. 18.—The War Office has received the folling despatch from General Buller.

"Cape Town, Nov. 17.—Report from Kimberley, Nov. 11, says all well there.

"Reports from Ladysmith Nov. 12, and Nov. 13 say all well there."

COLENSO BRIDGE DESTROYED.

Lorenzo Marques, Delagoa Bay, Nov. 17.—The official Volkstem reports that the ggreat bridge over the Tugela river, near Colenso, was completely destroyed on Nov. 15. The Boers are looking forward with great interest to the impendingg encounter between Colenso and Estcourt with the advancing British. About six hundred burghers with cannon are guarding the Helpmakar Pass, eighteen miles from Dundee, through which General Yule retreated to baffale any strategical attempt to reoccupy Dundee by the Pietermaritzburg-Greytown route.

GENERAL WHITE'S SORTIE.

Estcourt, Natal, Nov. 17.—A runner arrived here from Ladysmith to-day, bearing despatches from General White, who reports that all are well. He adds that the Boers shells have no effect. General White recently made a sortie and drove the Boers from their ggung and position. The British did not lose a man. The town is healthful. It is rumored that the Boers have occupied the village of Weenen, 25 miles from here. What advantage they hope to derive therefrom is not known. Weenen means "weeping," and is so called because it was the scene of a great massacre of 600 Boers by Zulus in 1831.

The bombardment of Ladysmith has continued almost daily with big guns The Boers endeavored on Nov. 14, to make a closer investment, but were repulsed. General White followed this up with a sortie, which drove the Boers from all their positions with considerable loss. The Boers are reported to be seriously short of provisions.

SIX TRANSPORTS ARRIVE

London, Nov. 18.—It is announced that the following transports arrved at Cape Town to-day; Mongolian, with the Second Seaforth Highlanders and a field hospital, 1,010 men; American, with a battery of the Royal Horse Artillery, part of a cavalry brigade and an ammunition column, 179 men, Pavonia, with the Second Royal Fusiliers and the Second Royal Scots Fusiliers, 1,895 men; Jamacian, with a squadron of the Sixth Dragoons, 100 men; Cephalonia, with the Fourth Brigade staff, the First Durham Mounted Infantry, and detachments of the medical corps, 1,316 men. This makes a total of 4,560 men which reached Cape Town to-day. Buller has now nearly 40,000 troops in South Africa.

CHEERFUL NEWS FROM WHITE.

London, Nov. 18.—The salient feature of to-day's war news is the arrival of a runner at Estcourt from Ladysmith and further informatoion since received, which left Ladysmith under date of Wednesday November 15. The inhabitants were cheerful and that the only recent casualty was a volunteer killed in a tent. The sortie referred to in the runner's report occurred Tuesday November 14. The Boers were driven from their guns and five were killed and two wounded. There has been no news later than this to justify the belief that the comparatively cheerful situation then prevailing at Ladysmith has in any way been altered, as there has been a visible relaxing of the entire tension which existed all over the country owing to the long absence of reliable news from the beleaguered garrison.

The sorte referred to by the Ladysmith runner is probably the same as the one reported from General Joubert's camp mentioning heavy fighting between the Free Staters and the British. It is pointed out that while the position at Ladysmith may momentarily be more satisfactory there will be cause for anxiety before the place is relieved. Ominious statements are coming by mail that the British retreat from Dundee was largely due to the shortness of ammunition, and this is probably the plight at Ladysmith and elsewhere it seems to furnish ground for anxiety for the safety of the various isolated garrisons. With the Colenso bridge destroyed, it is claimed that General Buller will have more difficult transport problems to solve.

KHAMA AIDS THE BRITISH.

Fort Tuli, Rhodesia, Nov. 7., via Lorenzo, Marques, Nov. 18.—Col. Plummer has received a despatch from Palapye saying Chief Khama has sent another regiment 370 strong to Selikwe Hill of 700 men. He has also sent 150 men to the Makiutsi river.

Selikwe, or Selika, is some forty miles to the east and slightly south of Fort Tuli, which it commands. Palapye is on the Cape Bulawayo Railway, about a hundred miles from Fort Tuli.

WILL HOLD THE HILL.

Fort Tuli, Rhodesia, Nov 8, via Lorenzo Marques, Nov. 18.—Chief Khama reports from Selikwe village that the Boer forces there have joined the Boer force on the Crocodile river opposite Selikwe hill. Thursday, November 7, the Boers with a large number of armed natives and four guns, crossed the Crocodile river and proceeded to Selikwe hill, fired four shots and retired across the Crocodile river. There were no casualties. Khama is confident he can hold the hill. Bryce's store is strongly entrenched. Boers with two guns have been seen by Pilson, who reconnitered there yesterday. Jarvis, with "D" squadron, is reconnoitering east of the Boers position. All is quiet.

BRITISH GUNNERS GOOD WORK.

Lorenzo, Marques, Nov. 18.—Belated despatches from a correspondent who was with the Boers near Ladysmith up to Tuesday, Nov. 14, are arriving here after being strictly censored at Pretoria. They throw some light on the fighting already reported from other sources. They say that on Friday, Nov. 10, eight lyddite shells were fired into the Transvaal central position without doing any harm. The wooden platform of the second big gun on Bulwana Hill was damaged, but has since been repaired.

Commandant Weilbach captured a man who reported that General White had been wounded and had gone to Pietermaritzburg, leaving General French in command. This, however, does not tally with the Transvaal information. The prisoner also reported that the British forces were hiding in underground chambers in order to avoid the shells, and said there was about one thousand wounded in the hospitals. General Joubert had been indisposed, but was better. On Monday, November 13, the British forts on the north side of Ladysmith opened on the nearest Boer battery and the shells fell so quickly that the Boers were compelled to lie flat and sheltered. Later they opened fire on the British batteries, which ceased firing.

Heavy fighting occurred between the Orange Free State troops and the British south of Ladysmith during the ing of Tuesday, Nov. 14. The result is not known.

From Lombard's KKop the British batteries were busy shelling the Free Stater's position.

A Transvaal gun shelled the British batteries.

HOW KEITH-FALCONER DIED.

London, Nov. 18.—Interesting details are arriving from Cape Town from the Orange River relating to the fighting at Belmont, showing that when Col. Keith-Falconer was shot through the breast he was just going to the assistance of wounded Lieut. Bevan.

Lieut. Brooke, of the Lancers, had a marvellous escape. While sketching the Boer position his horse was shot under him. He was some distance ahead of hs troopers and had dismounted to sketch when thirty Boers opened fire. He escaped with the utmost difficulty.

MAFEKING UNINJURED.

London, Nov. 18.—An official despatch from Pretoria, dated Nov. 10, confirms the statements to the efect that the Boer bg guns had little efect at Mafeking. Reports from Cape Colony indicate that the Boer sympathizers are greatly surprised at the inability of General Joubert to capture Ladysmith.

ENGLISH HOMES DEMIMATED.

London, Nov. 18.—The military fervor which has seized hold of the nation shows no signs of abatement. This is scarcely to be wondered at when it is realized how many households of all degrees throughout the United Kingdom are affected, and how deeply the iron of war has entered into the happiness of the people.

For instance, a Mrs. Pechell had sons, officers, ordered to the Cape, and two of them are now dead.

Sir Anthony Weldon, of Kildare, when the war commenced had four sons, three brothers and five nephews in the service. The list is now one less sine Captain Weldon was killed at Dundee.

Lord George Hamilton, the Secretary of State for India, has one son and thirteen nephews in the field.

The Duke of Atholl has three sons in the war, including Lord Tullibardine, his heir, while three brothers of the Duchess of York, the Princes Adolphus, Francis and Alexander of Teck, are all bound for or are in South Africa.

Thus, it will be seen that the case of the widow of the Irish sergeant whose seven sons are serving in the ranks at the Cape, which Queen Victoria has recognized by a kindly letter and a gift, has parallels in the highest circles of society.

Distinguished Militiamen.

The calling out of the militia also takes many distinguished men from ther regular duties, including Mr. A. Akers Douglas, the First Commissioner of Works. Lord Salisbury loses his private secretary, in Viscount Newport, who belongs to the same regiment as Mr. Akers Douglas, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach also lose a secretary apiece. Titled officers without end are now called upon to do home service including the Duke of Buccleuch's three sons and the earls of [illegible] and [illegible]. The latter is now in the Unied States.

The Armored Train.

The prominent part being played by the armored train in the war has set the service critics at work furnishing its place in warfare of the future. The Engineer, whose military critic is the well-known Order Brown, says:

"We look to see some form of armored train much more generally used in the future than now. I may find full field in motor cars or it may take the form of armored screens mounted on wheels which men can push before them. Very little will shelter a prone man. But a spade or a stone will not protect an advancing one. We feel that circumstances will evenually compel us to do on land what has long since been forced on us to do at sea in the way of armor, and the present war may be the starting poin in spite of the ridicule which fell on the bullet-proof cuirass two or three years

Foolish Criticism.

Criticism of the War Office continues to appear in publications of all kinds. Even the conservative Times makes it the object of a seathing denuciaion, saying: "We hope the War Office, having learned by experience what might have been learned from cheaper sources will not omit to provide our roops with artillery heaviier and of longer range than our excellent field guns."

It appears that Ladysmih was chosen at least two years ago as an outpost in case of war, and it is pointed out hat the omission to provide it win guns of calibre equal to those of the Boers cannot be charged to the unceraintry and political conditions which immedately preceded the present hostilities. There is also considerable fear in British circles that the ammuniion of the naval guns at Ladysmith will soon give out it it is not already exhaused. Only ten lyddite shells per gun are carried in each cruiser, and it is believed that the sailors took an extra supply, secured from other ships, it is felt hey must husband their resources in order to enable them to make he artillery effective until he place is relieved.

In Search of News.

Crowds continue to frequent he War Office in search of news. It is related in this connection tha one woman who asked nervously for news of her husband was bluntly told tha there was "no news of him, except that he is dead."

Lord Salsbury, it is added, was offered special facilities for hearing news of his son, who is at Mafeking, but declined, saying he wished to be treated in the same manner as the general public.

MURDER IS THE VERDICT

Of the Jury in the Case of John Varcoe—Conclusion of Inquest

Toronto, Nov. 18.—No new facts were brought out at the inquest upon the death of J. E. Varcoe at police headquarters last night. Henry Williams, the prisoner, was in the doc kand P. C. Mackie sat beside him throughout the proceedings. The finding of a stick pin concealed in a plug of tobacco had apparently made the police more careful than ever in their watch over the prisoner.

Allan Varcoe, a brother of the deceased, was positive in his identification of Williams as the man who came into the bedroom after McIntosh rushed in and ordered the witness and his two companions to cover their heads. He did not remember seeing a revolver in Williams' hand when he knocked him out of the window. Williams smiled grimly when this evidence was offered. Noah Thomas, who also struck Williams as he rushed for the window, said that he saw a revolver lying beside him after he had fallen to the pavement. He identified as nearly as possible some of the money found on the prisoner as stolen from his trousers. He did not see a revolver in Williams' hand.

Mrs. Armstrong, Miss Armstrong, and Miss Lake, who were sleeping in the house on the morning of the murder, were also called. The evidence of Henry Spottiswood, given in the McIntosh inquest, was also read, as was that of C. H. B. Johnson, Patrol Sergt. Willis and P. C. Dickson.

The Verdict.

After a short deliberation the jury returned the following verdict—

"That John Edward Varcoe came to his death by reason of wounds produced by the bullets from revolvers fired at and upon the body of the said John Edward Varcoe by one Harry Williams and one Jos. McIntosh, alias Curtis, and that the said Harry Williams and Joseph McIntosh, on the 8th day of November, did feloniously and with malice aforethought kill and murder the said Varcoe."

In a rider which accompanied the verdict the jury highly praised P. C. Dickson No. 180.

A Royal Welcome.

London, Nov. 18.—The special preparations which are being made for fitting out the battleship Glory, now building at Birkenhead, have given rise to the belief that the Duke of York will hoist his flag on her for the special purpose of greeting the United States squadron, which is expected to visit Spithead next summer. That such a naval visit will be paid is taken for granted by the British naval officials.

Sunday Soda Case

Toronto, Nov. 18.—The Toronto druggists' Sunday selling case has reached Osgoode Hall. On Friday, Wallace Nesbitt, Q. C., moved for a certiorari to remove a conviction of a defendant (a druggist) by the Police Magistrate for the City of Toronto for selling ice cream and soda water on Sunday. The Magistrate found on the evidence that ice cream and soda water are sometimes sold as medicines, but that they were not in this case. An order was made for the issue of a certiorari. This is the first step toward squashing the conviction.

No Political Result

Berlin, Nov. 17.—An inspired article in the National Zeitung says the Emperor's trip to England will not result in any political arrangements between England and Germany with regard to the Transvaal though German opinion is interested in international developments in South Af-

AGUINALDO'S FINISH.

It begins to look as if the race of the Filipino fox was nearly run. The hounds are close on his trial. Turn and twist and double as he may, he hears their horrid music in his hears, and he begins to feel that the hunt, for him, is but over.

This is the way we take of gently intimating to a waiting world that in our opinion Aguinaldo's game is about up, that his finish is in sight, and that the capture of the Filipino leader by the pursuing forces of the boys in blue is scheduled for shortly. The despatches have lately told us of an abandoned capital, of stores of ammunition and food left for the enemy's use, of a decimated army, and a bewildered cabinet, fleeing hither and thither through the swamps of Luzon, while every and anon the spiteful crack of the rifles tells us of one more skirmish lost, a few more brown men plugged with bullets, a fresh discouragement for the little army, so hotly pressed by the victorious American forces, and a tightening of the coils which Uncle Sam is drawing about his dearly beloved and much sought after brown brother, Aguinaldo.

The war in the Philippines has never been interesting to outsiders. It has been too one sided to be exciting, and the absence of uncertainty robbed it of the interest with which more equal affairs of the kind are regarded. It was from the outset a hopeless struggle. Every battle—or rather every skirmish which the U. S. papers dignified with the name of battle—resulted the same way,, the Filipinos were always beaten, and more than that, apparently soon lost, if they ever possessed it, the power of doing damage to Uncle Sam's soldiers. They have shot execrably all through the campaigns, and got worse instead of better, by practice. These constand defeats have broken the Filipino's spirit. Now he scarcely takes time to fight preferring rather to abandon his haboriously dug trences and scurry across the rice fields, anywhere, everywhere, so long as he can escape Uncle Sam's soldiers, and the spiteful spirit of their rifles.

Thus the Filipino war draws to its somewhat pathetic termination.

It is probably better for the Filipino and the world that the fight should end as it is ending, for the white man makes a better rules than the black, but the process, it must be admitted, is in its first stages hard on the man of the sable skin. It is to be hoped, however, and expected that the brown man's lot will in the end be happier, and that his children, if not himself, will have reason to bless the day when he gave up the hopeless fight with idestiny, and bowed to the inevitible.

WAR ON THE UNIONS.

The movement inaufurated by a number of Chicago architects and contractors to break up the labor unions of the city with the professed aim of ultimately forming both employers and employed into one friendly, instead of two hostile bodies, is an interesting development of the industrial situation. The contractors claim that their welfare is threatened by the arbitrary acts of the unions in endeavoring to prevent their members from doing more than a strictly limited amount of work each day, and they threaten a general suspension of building operations, to begin Jan. 1, and last until assurances of a change of policy are given by the union officials.

A prominent member of the Central Council of Contractors is quoted as saying—"The abuses have grown to a point where they are intolerable. Several days ago a business agent of one of the unions went to a building on this West Side and ordered twenty men to quit work because they had performed too much labor in the time specified. He said he wanted the job to catch up with the men, and a lay-off would be necessary. The men were sent home for a day and a half, with pay, and it cost the contractor $120. The union claims there is not enough work for all their men, so they limit the amount of labor each man is to perform to supply the deficiency."

The contractors claim that the present state of industrial warfare is injurious alike to both employers and employed. They claim that the agitators and walking delegates in the unions are at the until a better understanding exists be- and the men who pay the bill. The outcome of the movement will be awaited with a great deal of interest.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Toronto Telegram says—Wilf. Crossley, of last year's Peterboro' hockey team, is in the city attending the College of Pharmacy. He may be seen on a Toronto seven this winter. Bert Helleghem, the clever forward of the eastern team of last season, is now at Sudbury, where he is teller of the Ontario Bank.

To the Farmers.

There is nothing that required more thorough knowledge, in order to produce good results, than farming. Almost anyone can conduct a farm, but to conduct it successfully is an entirely different matter. Farming, like any other vocation, must be thoroughly understood if it is to be well done. Besides tilling the soil there are many other things about a farm that require care and attention, and often, through inexperience or ignorance, many farmers' efforts prove vain. The Werner Company, of Akron, Ohio, is offering, in another part of this issue, a book that should be found in the home of every farmer, entitled "The Farmers' Encyclopaedia." The volume is profusely illustrated and contains 636 pages of information that cannot fail to be of interest to every farmer in the country. It covers, in plain language, all the various branches of farming, besides much other useful information for the home.

CHANDOS

A social and entertainment was held at Grace Church in the Apsley Mission on Monday Nov. 13th. Rev. A. H. Foster in charge and was one of the most successful ever held in the field. Missionary service was held in the church on Sunday the 12th, Rev. Geo. Nichols of Bridgenorth officiating. The Ladies A id Soociety of Grace Church had been busy for the past month or more getting ready an autograph quilt, they had procured 400 names for it, which were neatly written upon the quilt.

Tea was served in the church on the evening of the 13th from 5 to 7, after which a splendid programme was presented by local and outside talent music, singing reading and recitations. The Apsley church choir also assisting. Rev. Garbutt of Coe Hill acted as chairman, and none could have been better fitted for the duties. Rev. Geo. Nichols who had been in charge of this field some years ago gave an address. At the close of the entertainment Miss E. Bullied secretary of the Ladies Aid, came forward and read a well written and worded address to the Rev. A. H. Foster, and the quilt was presented to him by Mrs. Wm. Snelgrove. Proceeds of the evening were very satisfactory.

Amount collected for quilt, $52.70; tea and entertainment, $34.40; total $87.10.

KEENE

The members of the Lime Juice Club assembled in the Hall of Wisdom on Saturday night last, for the purpose of se'ecting and electing a president for the ensuing year. President Legget, after opening the meeting took the platform and spoke for two hours on mills and millers. The members became very fidgety. Minney Whale Jonas, after hiding his walking stick in Tobin Brown's stovepipe hat, shouted—"I underatood the object of this meeting was to elect a President, and I am afraid President Legget will have us all ground into flower or chop if his wind don't soon shut off." President Legget took the hint, and at once dried up on mills and left the meeting open for nominations. Methody Comrie rose to his feet and informed the brethren that it should be a man of ability and business capabilities that should be elected as President of this Club. He then nominated Minney Whale Jonas. Bruin Spiers said that it afforded him the greatest gratification to second the nomination. Lauchey Quinn rose and nominated Hosier Roach. Ponty Mack seconded the nomination. President Legget ordered Dick Skinner to prepare the ballot box. Dick at once got down to business and in ten minutes time had the ballots counted and reported as follows—Minney Whale Jonas, 640; Hosier Roach1. Positive Legget declared Minney Whale elected by a sweeping majority. Positive then took a back seat and Minney Whale moved to the front.

After Minney Whale had searched every crevice in his nose, he rose and spoke as follows—"My dear and much respected brethren! my heart throbs within me, and I cannot let this opportunity pass without divulging to you my heartfelt thanks for the great honor which you have conferred on me to-night, by electing me President of this Club. It is my desire and intention to fulfill the office efficiently, and I trust that this Club will prosper under my supervision.

He then looked at his watch and informed the brethren that the night was far advanced and asked Cautious Miller and the Mayor of the village to sing the closing ode. They rendered the ode in rather a peculiar style. Minney Whale then sounded the gavel and informed the members that a special meeting would be held on Wednesday night, for the purpose of arranging for a ball on Christmas. The lights were then extinguished and all wended their way to their respective homes, feeling highly elated over the prospects for the future.

THE MOTHER OF A SOLDIER.

The mother of a soldier—hats off to her, I say!
The mother of a soldier who has gone to face the fray;
She gave him to her country with a blessing on his head—
And she found his name this morning in the long list of the dead—
"Killed—Sergeant Thomas Watkins, while leading on the rest.
A Bible in his pocket and a portrait on his breast.

The mother of a soldier—she gave him to her land;
She saw him on the transport as he waved his sun-browned hand;
She kissed him through the tear drops and she told him to be brave;
Her prayers went night and morning with her boy upon the wave.

The mother of a soldier—her comfort and her joy,
She gave her dearest treasure when she gave her only boy;
She saw the banner waving, she heard the people cheer.
She clasped her hands and bravely looked away to hide a tear.

The mother of a soldier—Ah! cheer the hero dead,
And cheer the brave who battle 'neath the banner of their creed;
But don't for get the mothers, through all the lonely years,
That fights the bravest battles on the sunless fields of tears.

Nay, don't forget the mothers, the mothers of our men,
Who see them go and never know that they'll come back again;
That gave them to their country, to battle and to die.
Because the bugles call them and the starry banners fly.

The mother of a soldier—hats off to her I say!
Whose head is bowed in sorrow, with its tender locks of gray,
She gave without regretting, though her old heart sorely bled,
When she found his name this morning in the long list of the dead;
"Killed—Sergeant Thomas Watkins, while leading on the rest,
His dear old mother's portrait clasped upon his hero breast!"

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the heatedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuious, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 25 cents each, but with $25 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth Is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate, Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to put enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr. Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative, and no one disputed his claim, as it seemed to be the only way of recording his [illegible]

A SHOOTING AFFRAY

Jno. O'Grady Fires Four Shots at a Toronto Bailiff

WHO NARROWLY ESCAPES.

One Bullet Passes Within a Few Inches of Bailiff Small's Heart.

Five Shots Fired, But No One Hurt—Great Presence of Mind Displayed by a Police Constable—The Affair Caused Great Excitement in Toronto.

Toronto, Nov. 17.—There was wild excitement at King and Church streets at one o'clock to-day whe revolver shots rang out and Bailiff Peter Small, of the 10th Division Court, fled into Redden's hotel at the corner. One bullet went crashing through the window. P. C. Sockett ran up and found a middle-aged man brandishing a revolver. "Don't shoot," the officer cried, and adroitly closed in on the man. A wrestle for the revolver ensued, in which both men fell to the pavement. In the struggle the revolver was again discharged, but the plucky constable soon overpowered his man and lodged him in the cells at police headquarters. The prisoner registered as John O'Grady, of 302 Adelaide street west, a former hotelkeeper.

Although five revolver shots were discharged and the corner was crowded with people, no one was injured. Mr. Small had a marvellous escape. A bullet passed through his coat sleeve, where his left arm was rested against his side, but caused no greater damage than a hole in the cloth and a slight bruise. P. C. Sockett's right hand was slightly lacerated in the struggle on the pavement, but although a revolver was discharged under him he escaped any further injury. The affray created great excitement, for the street was crowded with men returning to their offices from lunch.

O'Grady is said to have met Mr. Small on Toronto street, and to have walked with him, on apparently friendly terms, down to King street, and along to Church. His drawing a revolver was quite unexpected. It is said that he fired indiscriminately. At any rate, the crowd quickly sought the shelter of doorways and telegraph poles. A citizen named Kelly, who tried to interfere, narrowly escaped death.

O'Grady accused Mr. Small of depriving him of his property. He is the owner of a hotel at the corner of Wellington and York streets, and the trouble is alledged to have arisen over a proposed transfer of the license of this place.

To Defeat McKinley.

Columbus, O., Nov. 17.—One of the most prominent democrts in Ohio is authority for the statement that a conference is to be held by the leaders of the democratic, union reform and socialistic labor parties, and the leaders of the Jones campaign, with a view of bringing about a fusion of those interests. It is hoped if the fusion can be brought about the anti-imperialists can defeat McKinley in Ohio in the presidential elections.

No Settlement in Sight.

Washington, Nov. 17.—The indications are decidedly against any early re-opening of the negotiations looking to a permanent adjustment of the Alaskan boundary question. It can be stated positively that there have been absolutely no exchanges on this subjet between the two Governments since the return to this country of the British Ambassador, Lord Pauncefote. The modus vivendi, which was adopted to define temporarily the respective rights to the two parties, is working satisfactorily, and there is said to be no reason just now for pressing forward toward toward a solution oft he permanent boundary issue. The administration feels that any agreement acceptable to Canada would be rejected by the American Senate.

Melbourne, Nov. 17.—The legislative assembly has ordered the imprisonment of the publishers of the Daily Age and the Weekly Australasian for contempt, those papers having commented on the procedure of the select committee of inquiry relative to the Ministerial Administration while the case was still under consideration.

Spain's Woes.

Madrid, Nov. 17.—The speedy downfall of the Silvela cabinet is considered certain, and the rulers of Spain, dynastic and ministerial, if they were convinced that the trouble would end they would be devoutly thankful. Just what politicians think of the situation may be judged when it is known that all the talk relative to the fromation of a new cabinet takes it for granted that that cabinet will be military. Just now it is concidered possible that Gen. Azcarraga will be next premier, and also minister of war.

Coal Famine in Russia.

Moscow, Nov. 17.—The coal supply in Russia is growing shorter daily, and a fuel famine among manufacturers is imminent. Already in Lodz, an important manufacturing town, of 315,000 inhabitants, town, seventy-four miles from Warsaw, many factories are stopping for want of coal.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which deals with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body; and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL

Annual Meeting of the Association Last Thursday.

NEW OFFICERS CHOSEN.

Hon. J. R. Stratton Again Elected as President of the Association.

A Largely Attended and Important Meeting—Encouraging Reports Received Concerning the Work Carried on During Past Year

Want of space prevented our report of the Trent Waterway Association's annual meeting appearing in yesterday's issue. The meeting was held in the Town Council Chamber, with the President, Hon. J. R. Stratton, in the chair, and a representative attendance present from the districts interested in the completion of the canal.

Among those occupying seats in the chamber were—Messrs. W. J. Chirpaw, Victoria Road; Dr. J. Grant, Victoria Road; S. J. Fox, M. P. P., Lindsay; M. B. Morrison, M. P. P., Mayor of Trenton; John A. Holgate, Foxboro; James English, Warden county of Hastings; R. Burgess, Warden county of Victoria; Duncan Graham, M. P., North Ontario; E. Hawthorne, Warden county of Peterborough; Alderman J. B. McWilliams, A. P. Poussette, Q. C.; T. E. Bradburn, S. R. Armstrong, secretary; Robert Shaw, Harvey; Peterborough County Council; Peter Hamilton, County Councillor Jas. Forster, North Monaghan; County Councillor E. A. Peck, Ashburnham.

Mr. Stratton in calling the meeting to order, explained that the main object in bringing the members together was for the purpose of electing officers, and also for the receiving of reports concerning the work of the past year. He drew attention to the fact that the attendance at the meetings was gradually increasing each year, and congratulated the members on the growing interest which was being shown in the work. Continuing, Mr. Stratton said he was in a position give the meeting some reliable information regarding the future of the Trent Waterway, which would, he was sure, be gratifying not only to the members of the Association, but also to all residents of the town and district. It would be perhaps of interest to know that the Department of Railways and Canals has from July 1st, '96, to November, '99, expended $1,077,333. Very nearly all the work was done upon contracts which had been let recently, they having only been made previous to the elections of 1896. Mr. Stratton added that he was able to inform them that it was the purpose of the Government to complete the balance of the section between Simcoe and Balsam Lake, and it was estimated that something like $900,000 would be required to do this. Prior to the last session of Parliament the Government came to the conclusion that it would be well to take up and carry out with reasonable despatch the completion of the southern division of the canal from Peterborough down and at the conclusion of the last session of Parliament the Minister of Railways and Canals gave instructions, with the approval of his colleagues, for the immediate survey of the section at the southern end of the work with a view to at once inviting tenders and entering into a contract. Specifications of what may be called the Trenton section, were immediately prepared, but some delay arose owing to the necessity of further surveys and engineering information on the subject. These specifications are now in the printers' hands, and full reports will, it is anticipated, be handed to the Minister of Railways and Canals before the end of the month. The plans will be ready in ten days, when tenders will be immediately invited, and the work proceeded with. Mr. Stratton felt he could safely say that all who were interested in this enterprise might rest assured that there is no disposition on the Department of Railways and Canals or on the part of the Minister, to delay the earliest possible progress of the work for which the Department is now making the necessary preparations.

The president then read a most encouraging letter which he had received from Hon. Mr. Blair, Minister of Railways and Canals.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong, secretary-treasurer, submitted the financial statement, which was published some months ago, as audited by Mayor Davis and Warden Hawthorne. The minutes of the last meeting were also read and confirmed.

The election of officers came next in the order of business. Mr. Stratton announced that he thought that as the work for the ensuing year would be largely centred around Trenton, that the president of the Association should reside in that town. He would not therefore stand for office again this year, but would ask the members to choose a presiding officer from Trenton.

Mr. M. B. Morrison, Mayor of Trenton, stated that he had never been in favor of changing horses whilst crossing a stream. It had been his pleasure to nominate Mr. J. R. Stratton for the office of president last year, and whilst in the chair that gentleman had done more towards securing the completion of the work than any one else had ever done. A huge mistake would be made if there was a change made in the President, and it gave him great pleasure to again nominate Mr. Stratton as presiding officer. He had been delighted to hear the statement made by Mr. Stratton, concerning the progress made in the work recently. The Association's time had formerly been taken up in trying to convince others of the merits of the scheme, but this was all over now, and all that remained was to urge the Government to a speedy completion of the work. He thought all the progress made was due to the work of the Association. He could remember when at the meetings, there was difficulty in getting a mover and seconder, to the resolutions, and it was very pleasing to look around and see so many representatives in attendance.

Mr. James English, Warden of Hastings county, seconded Mr. J. R. Stratton's nomination.

The complete list of officers was re-elected as follows—

President—Hon. J. R. Stratton, M. P. P., Peterborough.

1st Vice President—M. B. Morrison, M. P. P., Mayor of Trenton.

2nd Vice President—W. T. C. Boyd, of Bobcaygeon.

Secretary-Treasurer—S. R. Armstrong, Town Clerk, Peterborough.

Warden Bryans, of Victoria County, spoke of the recent advance of 25 per cent. in railway rates, and voiced his pleasure at seeing the canal approaching its completion.

M. B. Morrison, M. P. P., brought up the subject of increasing the draft of the canal. He thought that instead of a six foot draft, there should be a draft of eight feet in the canal. As the new work was to be undertaken at once, the Government's attention should be drawn to this point. In talking with the Engineer lately, that official stated that although the canal was only being excavated to a depth of six feet, yet all the locks but one had an eight foot draft. It would be only a small matter if in the new work the canal was excavated to a depth of eight feet instead of six.

Mr. A. P. Poussette thought that it would be a mistake to urge on the Government the deepening of the canal before it was finished. There was some error, he thought, in the statement that the locks had all an eight foot draft but one. He did not know of any which were over six feet deep. It would be of no advantage to excavate the new sections to a depth of eight feet when the rest of the canal was only six feet deep.

The matter was left in the hands of the officers.

On money matters being touched upon, Mr. Morrison stated that Trenton would do its part.

Mr. Bryans, Warden of Victoria, stated that Victoria County had already put up $100 towards the project, but he thought that they could be counted on to assist still further. He promised to lay the matter before the County Council when they met.

Mr. Chirpaw, of Victoria Road, asked that the Association take some action in respect to a dyke which was being constructed to raise the water in Mitchell's Lake. It would be a great advantage to the village to have this dyke nearer than the point proposed by the Government.

Mr. Duncan Graham, M. P. P., stated that it would be an advantage to Victoria Road Village to have the dyke constructed, as asked by Mr. Chirpaw, and at the same time it would not hurt anybody else.

Dr. Grant, of Victoria Road, spoke in reference to the matter, pointing out that the site advocated for the dyke made a good shipping point for the village, whereas if constructed in the location now proposed, it would be of no advantage to anyone, being removed from any central point.

Moved by Mr. Chirpaw and Dr. Grant,—"That this meeting having heard the explanations of the representatives from Victoria Road regarding a site for the dyke on the Trent Waterway Canal at Victoria Road, respectfully requests that the Minister of Railways and Canals, if possible, meet the representations which have been already made to the Department on the subject."—Carried.

It was moved by Mr. A. P. Poussette and Mr. Morrison, that the officers of the Association be authorized to appeal to the various municipalities in the district interested for funds.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. John A. Holgate, of Foxboro, and Warden Hawthorne,—"That having heard the letter read from Hon. A. G. Blair, Minister of Railways and Canals, to the president of the Association this Association desires to give expression to the pleasure it feels in knowing the steps the Government is taking to complete the Trent Waterway, and to express the hope that the plans will be vigorously prosecuted, and the work carried to an early completion."—Carried.

The Association then adjourned.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

SWEETEST WORDS OF PRAISE.

It is very comfortin',
When your hair is gettin' thin;
And the crow feet in your eyes have come to stay;
Smoothin' back each silver strand,
While you meet her lovin' look and hear her say—
"My dear, it seem as tho'
Every year you live you grow
Handsomer than in the olden day";
Then you look up at your wife
And you think in all your life
You never heard a sweeter word of praise.

But the tear drops will arise
To your dim old fadin' eyes,
And you kiss the gentle hand, still white and small;
While you try to tell her how
You loved her then—love her now,
But blame me if the words will come at all;
For just then there comes to you
The trials she's gone thro',
And borne without a murmur for your sake;
You can only bow your head,
At the lovin' things she said,
While your poor old heart will only ache and ache.

But she knows what ails you then,
And she kisses you again
While you hear her gently whisper, sweet and low,
"Life has brought more hopes than fears,
We have known more smiles than tears,
And the years seem ever brighter as they go."
Yes, 'tis comfortin', you know,
When your step is gettin' slow
And your slidin' down life's hill a'mighty fast,
Just to feel her little hand
Smoothin' back each silver strand,
While she tells you that she'll love you to the last.

How He Misunderstood.

There came loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" asked the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore?" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

They Keep one Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, eyeing his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the barreteros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the tanateros are well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep it down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the other eye, previously open and somewhat blinded by the daylight, perceives nothing

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the greatest returns resolved an extra strong with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was secured from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go!' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."

CURTAIN RAISERS.

A new comedy called "Wheels Within Wheels" is expected to go the rounds.

Robert Drouet will play John Storm in "The Christian" with Miss Allen next season.

"Annie Rooney" is undergoing a revival in Paris to the temporary eclipsing of Dreyfus.

Richard Mansfield is reputed to have taken out a life insurance policy for $100,000 recently.

David Belasco has completed an original play which will be produced early in the season with a specially selected company.

An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth" will be the feature of Frederick Warde's repertory next season.

It is unofficially announced that Rudyard Kipling is to write the fairy play to be produced at the London Lyceum next season.

Some German statistician has discovered that stage dancing is conducive to longevity. Taglioni lived to be 80 and Fanny Elssler to be 74.

Rose Coghlan has been re-engaged for her original role of "Mlle. Fifi" for next season, the piece to open its tour in August in Chicago.

Emma Calve's much talked of monument represents her as Ophelia, and the sculptor has promised to exhibit it at the Paris exposition.

Minnie Seligman will appear in the vaudeville houses in a one act play called "Therese," which has been done in Europe by Sarah Bernhardt.

In a play called "Wine, Women and Song," recently produced at the Princess theater, London, two demimondaines, armed with butchers' knives, fight to the death in a beautiful setting profusely decorated with flowers.

George Bernard Shaw submitted his new play, "Cæsar and Cleopatra," to Richard Mansfield, but as Shaw had required a 56-year-old baldheaded Cæsar to make love to a 16-year-old Cleopatra the manuscript was returned.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

After a good soaking shower is the best time for hand weeding.

A good plan is to keep the growing orchard in cultivation until it comes into bearing well and then seed to clover.

Increased sunlight among the trees brings increased growth and blossom and decreases the tendency to mold and rot.

Peach, cherry and pear trees will bear very little forcing, and on this account wood ashes are better for them than ground bone.

Fruits, especially the apple, are largely controlled in character by soil and climate. Get varieties that are adapted to your locality.

Scraping the moss and old dead bark off the mature trees in the orchard and washing the trunks with some alkaline liquid can always be recommended.—Exchange.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Steevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

Mrs. Hornbill—I don't wonder, and me with this same old dress for the last two seasons!

TAKING THE CITADEL.

In war when a town is taken by storm there is no use in merely capturing the outworks or lower fortifications: As long as the enemy holds the highest stronghold the town is not conquered.

In warring against disease there is no use in simply overcoming the minor symptoms. There are plenty of mere stimulating preparations largely composed of alcohol, which give a false and temporary exhilaration followed by relapse, but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a true and radical remedy. It contains no alcohol. It does not inebriate or create a craving for intoxicating stimulants. It does more than overcome the outer symptoms of disease. It attacks it in its highest stronghold and routs it absolutely and completely from the very citadel of life. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery" that he may make a little larger profit.

"I feel it my duty to write and tell you what Dr. Pierce's medicines have done for me," says Miss Emma Lee, of Williford, Sharp Co., Ark., in a friendly communication to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. "I was suffering severely and tried several doctors' remedies but received only very little relief. I had bronchitis, catarrh, and also womb disease. I took eight bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Favorite Prescription.' As soon as I had taken the first bottle I could see that the medicine was helping me. I also used the local treatment you suggested.

"My sister says your medicine did her more good than anything she ever took. She was down in bed and could not walk until after she had taken your medicine, and now she goes where she pleases and helps to do her work."

Every suffering man or woman should write for a free copy of Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser. It will be sent paper-bound for the bare cost of customs and mailing, 31 one-cent stamps; or in heavy, handsome cloth-binding for 50 stamps.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

A Little Mistake

An amusing story is told of a local minister who is inclined to be somewhat absent-minded. While walking one day he encountered a young lady whose face seemed to be familiar to him. Taking her to be one of his parishioner's daughters, and not wishing to pass her without speaking, he stepped forward, and, cordially shaking her hand, entered into conversation. After comparing notes about the weather he had at last to confess; "Well, I know your face quite well, but I cannot recall where I have seen you before." "Oh, please, sir, I'm your new parlor-maid!" was the reply.

A HEAVY DOCKET.

Police Magistrate Dumble has Many Cases Before Him.

The Police Court on Saturday was crowded, there being a number of important cases to be disposed of.

Ira McNutt, Edward McNutt and Hubble appeared pursuant to remand, on a charge of stealing scrape iron from George Stevens. E B Stone appeared on behalf of the three prisoners. County Crown Attorney Wood announced that he desired to withdraw the charges laid against Hubble and Edward McNutt provided the two prisoners paid the costs that had been incurred. This was agreed to by Mr Stone and in the case of Ira McNutt, no evidence was offered.

The case against Con. Ryan for stealing a buffalo robe from Sid Bennet, of Otonabee was dismissed.

A local hotelkeeper was fined for violation of the Ontario Liquor License Act.

William Guy was fined, including costs, $11, for having committed an assault on a man named Fanning.

Tommy Conners, a sixteen-year-old youth, was up on a charge of being drunk. "Are you not ashamed of yourself?" asked the magistrate, to which Tommy replied, "I am." He was allowed to go this time.

Mr. Smith's Opinion.

The Bobcaygeon Independent is not in favor of banquets where the ladies are present and the men do all the eating and drinking. Under the head of "Peterborough," our contemporary says: "Tomorrow night, Thursday, we are to have our great banquet to the Hon J R Stratton, and it is to be the greatest event as ever was. Every man is to take two ladies, and the dear girls are to sit up in the gallery, and see the animals feed and hear the lions roar." Continuing the paper says: "What is to be done with our town Council. It is not very hopeful when they can't build a bit of pavement, without a judicial investigation. If we had a Council that could manage the town affairs as well as the ordinary business man manage his own our Council would take over the street railway and run it to a success. Talking of street railways, if nothing is done towards extending the street cars to Chemong, there is a proposition to put on a line of automobiles next summer. The idea is a good one and it is believed would be a paying novelty."

A Row About Nothing.

The row which has been raised over a few old worn-out tunics, which Sergt.-Major Peters disposed of and which are practically valueless, is not creditable to those who are attempting to make a mountain out mole hill. The Sergt.-Major naturally supposed the clothing, which was cast-off, to be worthless, and desiring to get it out of the way, disposed of it, believing that he was justified in so doing. He should no doubt have spoken to the Colonel before so doing, but his not having done so should hardly be considered a serious matter. Sergt.-Major Peters is an efficient drill instructor and a responsible and reputable citizen, with a good clear record. He is the last man in the world that would do a dishonest act, and the present attempt to make him appear as having committed a serious offence will, we believe, not succeed.

A Close Call.

As the Lakefield train was coming down Saturday morning Mrs Bolton and her son, who live near the Red Mills, narrowly escaped being killed or seriously injured. As the train drew near the crossing at Nassau the two drove down in a buggy. They evidently intended to cross in front of the locomotive. The locomotive and vehicle came to the crossing just at the same time. The driver turned the horse half way around and a projecting part of the engine struck the front wheel of the buggy, breaking the axle and otherwise injuring the vehicle. The occupants were not injured to any extent but Mrs Bolton received quite a shock and was so prostrated that she had to be put on the train and brought to town to some friends.

He Came to Complain.

Lindsay Post:—As many of our readers know, Rev S J Shorey, of Peterborough, is not only a sportsman, but a very good shot, however, he failed to get a deer this season, and Rev J W Macmillan, of this town, who did get one, naturally feels somewhat elated and inclined to poke fun at his clerical brother. However, Mr Shorey will not be without venison, as his young son who accompanied him to the Sinclair camp, killed two fine deer inside of a minute. It is to be hoped that Lindsay's popular pastor duly realizes the serious disadvantage he will have to labor under as compared with Rev Mr Shorey in case his luck changes, and is prepared to adopt the proper remedy

CASE THROWN OUT OF COURT.

How Justice Was Dispensed in Peterboro' Half a Century Ago

In the good old days, away back in the forties, when Peterborough was a back-woods town no bigger than Lindsay, the only police court in the burg was presided over by Squire Henthorn. An old timer dropped into the Times sanctum yesterday and related an incident in connection with Squire Henthorn's court that has never been in print. A case was being tried one day that was very important, and several hours of listening to the reading of depositions and arguments of counsel, pro and con, and pro and con again, had so nearly entangled the court in a labyrinth of perplexing questions of law and fact that it doubted its ability to blaze its way out. The court whispered to the leading lawyer at the bar who was sitting by as a spectator, and asked him what he thought ought to be done with the case.

"I think it ought to be thrown out of court," was the prompt and emphatic reply.

"That settled it.

"Mr. Dennistoun," said the magistrate, "pass up them papers."

"The papers which made quite a large bundle were handed the magistrate.

"Now. Mr. Dennistoun, said he, deliberately, "open that window.

The obliging lawyer opened the window and the case was thrown out of court.

The feud that followed lasted for fifteen years.

A Illustrated Lecture.

Rev. F. O'Sullivan will deliver a lecture on Friday evening, on Venice, Loretto and other places of interest in nothern Italy. The lecture will be illustrated by very select stereopticon views, kindly lent to the society for the occasion by Dr O'Brien. Mr Roy, will manipulate the slides and introduce some comic features at the conclusion. The entertainment will be both interesting and instructive.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Engineer Rust, of Toronto, was in Lindsay on Saturday giving the town advice as regards the waterworks, which the corporation proposes to purchase.

A High Tea will be held by the ladies of All Saints' church on the evening of November 30. It will be followed by a lecture on "John Bunyan," by Provost Welch of Toronto.

A reception will be tendered the non-commissioned officers of the 57th Battalion this evening at the officers' quarters by Rev. J. C. Davidson, Chaplain of the regiment.

The fittings for the catch basins have arrived and will be put in at once, thus preventing the escape of the disagreeable odors which have so long polluted the atmosphere in localities where the basins are situated.

Rev. Mr. Moore preached anniversary sermons at Fenlon Falls yesterday and will give a platform address this evening. Rev. R. H. Leitch, of Fenelon Falls, occupied the pulpit of the Mark street church.

Rev. Dr. Cade, of Millbrook, occupied the pulpit of the Charlotte street church yesterday. Rev. Mr. Crossley preaching in Millbrook.

She asked the parson to guess her age,
A wicked trick, forsooth!
The good man dare not tell a lie,
Nor dare he tell the truth.

Superintendent Hay has a gang of men at work putting in catch basins at the corner of George and McDonnel streets.

Rev. Geo. Warren, B. A., of Lakefield, officiated at St. John's church yesterday, morning and evening, exchanging pulpits with Rev. J. C. Davidson.

Lindsay Post—Twenty deer were brought down by the north train this morning, eleven going to Toronto, one to Campbellford, one to Montreal and two to Stouffville. The slaughter of the innocent was enormous this season.

PERSONAL.

Miss Hattie Eastland, Apsley, is visiting friends in Peterborough and Ashburnham.

Mr. and Mrs. John Manning have removed from Water street to 280 Hunter street, where Mrs. Manning will receive on on the second and fourth Thursdays of each month.

ROARING EARS

Caused by Drinking Coffee.

"I was twenty years old before I learned to like coffee, but about that age I was occupied where I felt the need of a stimulant of some sort, and took up coffee in arnest.

"When I tried leaving off coffee, sick headache invariably followed every breakfast without coffee, so I stuck to it, but other troubles set in. A serious catarrhal condition set in and grew worse until I began to lose sleep and the ears began that peculiar roaring sound, which continued steadily. I finally lost the use of one ear altogether, and the other one became very bad.

"I am satisfied that coffee was the cause of the nervous troubles that showed in the loss of my hearing, for when I left it off and took up Postum Food Coffee, my hearing began to improve, and my general condition rapidly changed for the better. I feel less 'on a strain all the time.' That terrible pulsation has practically left my ears; I sleep very much better; bowels are never constipated now as they were while I was using coffee. I am rapidly getting back to where I was seven years ago. You can imagine that I esteem Postum Food Coffee very highly indeed." Chas. Worrall, 422 Lawrence-st., Topeka, Kan.

Postum is a natural food drink, strong in the elements that build up the nervous system throughout the body. It would richly pay any one who is troubled with coffee drinking, to leave off coffee and take Postum in its place. Sold by all grocers.

Little Charlie Cochrane.

Little Charlie Norris Cochrane, who was so badly burned in Omemee last August, and who on the 8th November, underwent an operation of skin-grafting at the children's hospital, Toronto, (the skin being taken from the arms of 20 volunteer students to cover the sore spot), was sitting up in bed on Wednesday afternoon, the 15th, listening with interest to a letter his mother was reading to him. He was in the "Edward Mitchell" cot, and though very thin and pale, his pretty brown curly hair (which had not been cut since he was burned, and his great black eyes, making his wan face appear even paler), he was very, much better. The foreign skin had at once adhered to his body and the operation of dressing is not now nearly as painful as heretofore. The grafting is a perfect success, and the pluck and forbearance of the little fellow has aided not a little.

Some Good Advice

"Yes," said the man in the waiting-room at the C.P.R. station, "above all other qualities I admire honesty. Your clever men are more often unscrupulous than not. Deeds of daring are invaribly prompted by a lucky impulse and the thirst for fame, while your brave man is never without his share of conceit. Philanthropy and pomposity, too, should in many cases be spelt the same way. No, my friend, there is nothing that will stand the rough wear and tear of this life like honesty, and my constant watchword to my little sons here is. "Be honest, and you can snap your fingers at the world and its verdict."

Then he went to the ticket office and procured from station agent Bamford two half tickets for the little sons—aged sixteen and seventeen respectively."

An Able Bodied Fraud

There is at present in the city Rev. R. Hatchett, whose credentials show him to be General Agent of the North British African Methodist Church, and his address is 227 Robert st., Hamilton. Mr. Hatchett's mission in Belleville is a double one, says the Intelligencer. He is engaged in soliciting subscription in aid of the above church and at the same time exposing a former colored gentleman who visited the city on the 22nd of last September. The latter person, Mr. Hatchett says, was a fraud, and had neither license to preach nor solicit subscriptions. He was a man of bad character, among other crimes of which he is suspected being that of bigamy. Frauds of this kind do much harm, as when a deserving person does make his appearance he is often viewed with suspicion by those who have been taken in on a former occasion. The fellow is well known to the people of Peterborough, many of whom gave him subscriptions a few months ago.

Forgot the Baby

"John, have you got the basket?"
"Yes, Molly."
"An' my gray shawl?"
"Safe an' sound!"
"An' Maria's ban' box with her new hat in it?"
"It's here."
"An' the bolt o' caliker?"
"You're settin' on it."
"Well, for the lan's sake, where's the baby?"

He looked in the basket, the bandbox, and the gray shawl, then said, helplessly:

"Hit's my opinion, Molly, we left him in Creesman's dry goods store."

And she grabbed the lines and geehawed around, and drove back to town by way of the Otonabee bridge.

QUEEN GOES TO ITALY.

Her Majesty Will Not Sojourn in Unfriendly France

New York, Nov. 20.—The London correspondent of the Herald says—The Queen is going to Italy for her holidays. Thereby hangs quite a large political question. Her Majesty is kept very accurately informed about every item concerning the war. She is a diligent reader of the papers, and has had her attention drawn to thep ersistent anti-English attitude of France and the French press.

It is an open secret that England had made every preparation for war at the time of the Fashoda incident. The country was wound up. Sir Edward Monson made his famous speech. England's challenge was nott hen accepted, but to-day, when France imagines that England is in difficulties, she encourages the Boers, and thus incomp slight measure prolongs the resistence.

This England willne ver forget. The general opinion here is that France is sowing the seedsof a future war witht his country.

The Queen, who all her life has studied English popular sentiment, sees now that a stay in France is impossible. So Italy is chosen. She rents an entire hotel for next August at Bordighera, abandons unfriendly France and takes up her residance in friendly Italy. It is a small thing, apparently, but English feeling is shown by the approving wy in which her choice has been received.

The feeling of England towards France is just as strained as that of America was towards Germany furing the Phillipine blocade. England is just as ready to hit out now as admiral Dewey was then Chicago, Nov. 20.—A Record special from Rome says—King Humbert and the Queen of Italy intend to personally welcome Queen Victoria when she arrives at Bordighera Springs. Her Majesty will on this occasion travel as Queen of England, and not under the title Countess of Balmoral, as usual.

Nearly Proved Fatal.

Exeter, Ont., Nov. 20.—What might have proved a fatal accident occurred here Saturday evening. A boy named Flynne and a companion named Brentnal were out shooting with a rifle and while returning home the Bretnal boy told Flynne that he could not hit the fence With that Flynne put the gun to his shoulder and pulled the trigger and the ball hit young Brentual just under the cheek bone. It plowed its way through the boy's face, coming out on the other side of the nose. The doctor thinks Brentnal will recover.

Three Years on Dry Bread

London, Nov. 20.—The West Ham relieving officer was inquiring recently into one of the most pathetic stories of poverty ever known in the district. The case was that of a Mr. and Mrs. Manning, an old couple, between the ages of seventy and eighty, living close to the Brickfields church, Stratford, and the Rev. Tom Warren at the guardians' meeting stated that he knew for a fact that the old couple for three years had lived on nothing but dry bread. With the little relief they got, after they had paid the rent, there was only 3 1-2d. a day to provide food for the two, and they had endured all this hardship rather than go into the workhouse. The board decided to grant the old couple 5s. per week.

Triple Alliance to Stand.

Berlin, Nov. 18.—The semi-official Cologne Gazette, in a leading editirial to-day says—Germany has long entertained friendly relations with Great Britain, and has considerably profited thereby. But these relations in no wise interfere with Germany's status with regard to the Triple Alliance, or with Russia or France.

Germany's policy has been to retain a free hand in every direction, and to strive for peace with honor throughout Europe. While Germany's interests will not suffer thereby, the Emperor's forthcoming journey to England is to be subservient to this purpose alone.

THE KAISER IS WELCOMED.

He Lands at Portsmouth and Receives Signal Great Greeting

Portsmouth, Eng. Nov. 20.—The German Imperial yacht Hohenzollern entered the harbor at 10.05 a.m., to-day, admst the salutes of the guns of the warships, and forts.

The Emperor and Empress and their two sons landed at 10.30, and were welcomed by the Duke of Connaught, who wore the uniform of the German Hussar regiment of which he is honorary colonel, and by various court dignitaries

Escorted by a British Squadron.

When the Hohenzollern loomed in sight, escorted by the German battleship Kaiser Friederich III., and a flotilla of eight British torpedo-boat destroyers, which met the German ships outside Spithead, the British Admiral's flagship and eigt other warships, gaily bedecked (manned yards, and fired a royal salute, which was returned by the Kaiser Friederrich III. Emperor William wore the uniform of a British admiral, and the two young Princes wore simple sailor-boy suits.

The Duke of Connaught, accompanied by Admiral Seymour, Gen. Sir Baker Russell, a number of gorgeously-attired court functionaries, and the members of the German Embassy, boarded the Hohenzollern, and warm greetings were exchanged with the Emperor, the Empress and the Princes. The jetty was crowded wth privileged spectators, and bunting and German and British flags were displayed everywhere. The bands played German and British national airs.

The Civic Welcome.

When the Royal special train drew up the Imperial party landed. The Empress was the recipient of a handsome boquet. The civiil authorities were then introduced to the Emperor, who later inspected the troops and sailors forming the guard of honor. Their Majesties and Royal Highnesses took the train for Windsor at 11.30 amid salutes from the warships, bands playing and cheers from the crowd.

The Imperal suite includes Count Von Eulenburg, Count Von Buelow, Gen. Von Plessen, Admiral Von Senderbibran, Gen. Von. Rasch, Count Von Gen. Von Schell, Lord Churchill, Lord-in-Waiting to the Queen, and the Dowager Lady Churchill.

Appointment Cancelled.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—The War Office has refused to sanction the appointment of Major Dobell, son of Hon. R. R. Dobell, as a special service officer attached to the Canadian Contingent for South Arica. Major Dobell is with his regiment at Hong Kong.

Nothing is known here of the statement that the Battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment, now en route to South Africa, will not be sent to the front, and the militia authorities discredit it. Such a matter would rest with General Buller, and it is thought that no decision will be made till he has seen the men compriising the contingent.

Elections in Manitoba.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 20.—The election campaign is rather quiet to-day, but half a dozen meetings will be held to night.

The letter of President Mellen, of the Northern Pacific, showing up Greenway's conduct, is the principal topic of conversation.

Biggest in the World.

London, Nov. 20.—An egg of the Aepyornis maximus, an extinct bird known by Marco Polo as the reek, was sold yesterday at Mr. J. C. Stevens' auction rooms. The only place where such eggs have been found is Madagascar, and the present specimen was discovered there. Although in capacity the egg is equal to six of those of the ostrich, the bird itself, the skeleton of which may be seen in the British Museum, was not phenomenally large, though very thick and heavy. Only some twenty specimens of the egg, which measures more than a foot in length, and nearly a yard in circumference, are known to be in existence, so that it is rarer than the egg of the great auk.

GEN. JOUBERT HAS DIVIDED HIS FORCES

And the Relief of Ladysmith Has Almost Been Accomplished by the Boers Themselves.

NAVAL GUNS HAVE DONE SOME GOOD WORK.

Major Thorneycroft Engages the Boers at Estcourt With Little Result—A Despatch Says Hundreds of Boers Were Killed on Wednesday—Further Particulars of Boer Defeat.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The relief of Ladysmith has almost been accomplished, and by the Boers themselves. It is clear that General Joubert is now making an attempt to surro-und and isolate Estcourt in the same way that he has isolated Ladysmith. Such an attempt can only have the effect of splitting the Boer forces in two and weakening the army before Ladysmith to such an extent that it is no longer to be feared. If General Joubert could not in a month capture General White's position with the whole of his force, how can he expect todo so after detaching a force for the investment of Estcourt even allowing for reinforcements which may have reached the Boers.

It appears that there are now two towns in Natal which are besieged by the Boers—Ladysmith and Estcourt. The report of the sorties made by Major Thorneycroft to the south of Estcourt this morning is an indication that the Boers are endeavoringto isolate the place by the capture and destruction of the bridge over the bushman's river. This manoeuvre, however, comes to late in the day to be of any service, and can only place Joubert's men between Ladysmith and Estcourt between two fires, though iit must not be forgotten that they have the main road to the Orange Free State in their rear.

MAJOR THORNEYCROFT'S SORTIE

London, Nov. 20.—The present week according to despatches from the front ought to see a change in the defensive tactics hitherto maintained by the British in South Africa. It is said that the task alloted to General Clery, that of relieving Ladysmith, will tax his general-ship to the utmost. The Boers are developing a great deal of strength in the neighborhood of Estcourt, and General Joubert is reported to be moving southward himself in order to direct the movement to repel the British advance, after, it would seem attempting to isolate Estcourt. This latter movement is already in progress. The Boers practically surround the town. Another small Boer force was discovered at Wiillow Grange south of Estcourt Sunday evening.

Major Thorneycroft, with a detachment of infantry made a sortie and engaged the Boers, but with no mateerial result.

The so-called Boer attempt to rush Estcourt on Saturday was apparently merely a reconnaisance. It resulted in the Boers obtaining the information which they desired, namely, that Estcourt is fairly strongly held, an dhas naval guns in position. The Boers then withdrew out of range, but remained at points commanding the exits from the town.

General Clery is lamentably deficient in cavalry and artillery, though attempts are being made to replace the former by a Uitlander mounted inantry, of which about 1,500 have started for the front.

The popular anticipations here regarding the relief of Kimberley appear too sanguine. The British force is not yet ready, and when it starts it will have a dangerous road to follow, every foot of which will probably be contested if the British attempt a direct advance. So it is possible that instead of rushing directly for Kimberley, the British will advance across the frontier in the direction of Bloemfontein, which may thus be threatened This would probably draw off General Cronje's forces and enable the railroad to be restored.

From the presence of General Buller near General Methuen at Orange River, it is anticipated that the main advance will be made on the west side. But unless General Gatacre is able to advance simultaneous and push back the Boers who are occupying so many points of the South Orange River, the British line of communication will be seriously threatened.

BATTLE ON WEDNESDAY.

London, Nov. 20.—A special from Estcourt, dated Nov. 20, says a report has reached there of a battle at Ladysmith Wednesday, Nov. 15, lasting from daybreak until 2 in the afternoon. Many Boers are said to have been killed and many are reported to have been taken prisoners. The British losses are reported to be much less.

Another battle is said to have occurred Thursday. It is described as the heaviest yet fought. The Boer dead number hundreds while the British losses were comparatively small.

BASUTOS ARE QUIET.

Maseru, Monday, Nov. 13.—Since the interview between Sir Godfrey Lagden, British resident commissioner in Basutoland, and the Basuto chiefs, the natives are more quiet. The attitude of Chief Joel, who is said to be about to join the Boers, is due to intrigues of Field Cornet Raumenbach.

Sir Godfrey Lagden and Chief Lerothodi are in perfect agreement as to the importance of quietly defeating Field Cornet Raumenbach's intrigues.

MORE TRANSPORTS ARRIVE.

London, Nov. 20.—General Buller's orders to his officers on the subject of their equipment are taken to mean that the officers are to carry rifles like the troops.

It is reported to-day that the Boers have attacked Kuruman and sustained heavy loss, but it is hard to conjecture why the Boers should waste ammunition on a village far out on the plains, defended by 200 police.

No Boer Invasion.

It is further asserted that the Boers have no serious intentions of invading Cape Colony, but intend to concentrate their scattered forces with the view of opposing the British advance across the southern border of the Orange Free State. The presence of the Boers in so many of the towns in Cape Colony has caused Sir Alfred Milner, the Governor, to proclaim martial law in those or, to proclaim martial law in those places. The British forces have retreated from these points and are being concentrated on the Orange river.

The Irish Transvaal Committee has appealed for funds to enable it to send an ambulance to the Irish brigade in the Boer service. The appeal says: "The Irishmen now fighting side by side with the Boers have lessened the disgrace brought on Ireland by the Irishmen who are so unfortunate as to be forced by necessities to fight by the side of the English."

The appeal is signed by Miss Maude Conne, Messrs. W. Redmond, M. D. Sullivan and others.

More Transports Arrive.

The British Admiralty reports the arrival at Cape Colony to-day of the transport Glengyle, with a battery of horse artillery, an ammunition column, a cavalry brigade and a hospital corps the Britton with the Second Somerset Light Infantry; the Siberian, with the Enniskillen Dragoons and the German with the first rifle brigade, a field hospital and a detachment of the Royal Engineers. The transports Cephalonia and Pavonia have been ordered to proceed to Durban.

THE QUEEN'S PRESENT.

London, Nov. 20.—At the Marquis of Lansdowne's suggestion the Queen has deciedd thta her Christmas present to the troops in South Africa is to take the form of a tin of chocolate for each man.

THURSDAY'S BATTLE.

Durban, Natal, Nov. 19.—The Times of Natal publishes the following, dated Nov 15, from its special correspondent at Ladysmith—

The enemy made a determined attack on Thursday, November 9. Apparently all the Boer forces participated. Their artillery opened at 4 a. m., pouring in shell thick and fast upon the British positions, although with no great effect. They adopted the unusual tactics of advancing under cover of their guns to positions on the ridges and kopjes adjacent to those occupied by the British troops on the left of our camp. Continuing their advance the Boers crept up, using every available bit of cover. Our infantry opened with a steady, warm and accurate fire, which sent back the enemy, notwithstanding a display of tenacity of purpose equal to their desperate stands on previous occasions. The Boer attack was most elaborate on all sides of the town.

The Main Attack.

The main attack, however, was made between the Free State and Newcastle railway lines by a column composed chiefly of Johannesburg volunteers. The King's Royal Rifle corps made a splendid defence. The Boers were repulsed, but soon rallied and returned to the attack. Again the British fire, which was very hot, forced them to retire. They had made a deep trench in front of the British lines, and while withdrawing for their horses they left this unguarded, whereupon the King's Rifles, advancing at double quick, occupied the trench.

This smart movement was not seen by the enemy, who soon returned with their horses. Carefully reserving their fire, the King's Rifles allowed the Boers to advance almost to the edge of the trench, and then poured volley after volley into the astounded Boers, who turned and fled from an awful hail of bullets bolting across the open, where the artillery of the British poured in a terrible and effective shell fire. The enemy lost heavily.

Mortar in Action.

Meanwhile another section of the Boers had brought a mortar into action firing heavy shells. Our guns soon silenced this weapon, the enemy's artillery fleeing headlong. The Boers then advanced in force with a view of repairing the mortar, but our artillery shelled and scattered them right and left. The fighting was all over at 11 o'clock.

At Caeso's camp, which protects the town on the southwest, the Manchester regiment held the position. Descending under cover of the British guns for some distance on the further side of the hill they detected several hundred Boers hiding in the ditch out of the way of the British shells. They poured volley after volley into the enemy, scattering them widely and inflicting a heavy loss.

The Boers were driven back at every point, with a loss estimated at 800 men."

A Second Attack.

Nothing important occurred until Tuesday, November 14, when a strong force, chiefly cavalry and artillery, reconnoitering, came upon the enemy near the Colenso road and drove them back to their main positions. Our shell fire was most effective and is believed to have inflicted considerable damage. Our own loss was one man. The same day a Boer shell killed a trooper of the Natal Mounted Rifles, who was sleeping in his tent. All our men are fit, well and in good spirits. It is reported that the lyddite is terrifying the Boers, who have to be driven to their gun positions by revolvers pointed at their heads.

Ladysmith is able to hold out for some months. On the other hand, it is reported that dysentery is making havoc in the enemy's camp.

MOVIG ON ESTCOURT.

London, Nov. 20.—The War Office posted the following telegram yesterday from General Sir Redvers Buller to the Marquis of Lansdowne—

"Cape Town, Nov. 18, 9.30 a. m.—The following is from the general commanding at Pietermaritzburg—"To-day at 8 a. m., the officer commanding our northern outposts reported that the enemy's mounted patrols were advancing across the whole country from Gourton road to Ulandi, moving on Estcourt. My force stood to arms. The outposts reported various bodies, from 500 to 700 strong, advancing on Estcourt. Our outposts fired on the enemy, and one of the naval guns fired a shell at 3,000 yards range, the shell bursting close to the enemy, who hurriedly retired. At 12 o'clock reports were received from three pickets that a large number of Boers were in sight on a hill above Leslie's homestead. The troops have returned to camp."

PREPARING FOR AN ADVANCE.

London, Nov. 19.—A special despatch from Orange River camp, dated November 15, afternoon, says—

A brigade of the Scots Guards arrived to-day by rail from Cape Town, and marched to their quarters looking perfectly fit. They were loudly cheered.

Other troops under General Methuen are rapidly pushing forward the preparations for the advance. Last night the Northumberland Fusiliers made a long night march in the brilliand moonlight. All the troops are being exercised daily.

General Methuen has decided that only four newspaper correspondents shall accompany the forward movement, which may now take place at any moment. No baggage, tents or servants will be allowed.

THE RUSH FAILED.

Estcourt, Natal, Nov. 18, noon.—For several days it has been known that the Boers have been creeping towards Estcourt and had boasted that they would be here in the morning. They were met upon their arrival with a reception that they little expected. At tano' clock the Dublin Fusiliers took up their position, and without waiting any time opened fire by volleys at long range on the advancing enemy who were crossing the railway from the northwest of the town.

A loud report and a whizzing overhead told the tale of the bluejackets' watchfulness. A big puff of smoke indicated that their aim was good, the shell bursting in the midst of the Boers, several of whose horses were observed galloping about riderless

Boers Astonished.

The Boers doubled back helter-skelter. On advantageous points of the surrounding hills the Boer guns were posted, getting ready to cover the advance of their firing line. Their astonishment must have been great, as they speedily retired. One shot caused them to withdraw out of sight. They evidently did not dream that the British had a long range gun here, as they were coming on with the utmost confidence, evidently expecting to be in Estcourt within 15 minutes after crossing the railway.

The bluejackets abruptly arrested their progress and deserve credit for the accuracy with which they judged the range. General Hildyard and his staff were beside the naval guns.

All is quiet again.

BOMBARDMENT OF KIMBERLEY.

Kimberley, Nov. 11.—Via Runner to Orange River.—The Boers bombarded Kimberley again at 5.15 o'clock this morning, shelling the town briskly until 6.15 from three positions. Subsequently they maintained a desultory fire until 7.15 o'clock. One shell killed a poor old Kaffir woman in the street, and another fell on the roof of a barn, partially wrecking the building. Six shells were fired against the waterworks, but fell in the reservoir. Several artillerymen in the fort there had close shaves.

Our guns replied at long range, and two shells at least are believed to have found their mark, as the fire of the Boers in that direction was effectually silenced.

Several of the enemy's shells fell in the native compound, and the inmates immediately rushed to pick them up, and several landed on the mined floors, but did no damage. The bombardment freshened from ten o'clock till noon, the fire being directed at Otto's kopje, whence our patrol at dawn had fired upon a Boer detachment, knocking down six of their horses. Our casualties were one policeman mortally wounded and a Lighthorseman slightly wounded. The patrol fired cooly and very steadily until the Boers disappeared. A second patrol engaged the enemy, but, meeting a superior force, was compelled to retire, losing only two horses. The Boers fired quite 300 shells to-day. The cases were dated from 1891 to 1896. The enemy have at least eight guns.

The prisoners they recently captured and conveyed to Bloemfontein had their arms pinned behind them, and were tied to the trek-chain of an oxen waggon, remaining thus throughout the entire night, until their removal next day.

DEATH OF SIR WM. DAWSON.

Ex-Principal of McGill Passed Away on Sunday

Montreal, Nov. 19.—Sir John William Dawson, for many years the revered principle of McGill University, died at his residence in this city at 12.30 this morning. He had been in poor physical health for several years and suffered several paralytic strokes, which incapacitated him physically, although he retained to the last his intellectual faculties. Sir William Dawson was a scientist and educationist of world-wide repute. His work in both spheres of labor will leave an influence probably greater than any other Canadian. He was born in Pictou, N. S., on October 13, 1820, and was educated at Edinburgh University, where he took the M. A. degree at the age of 22. Returning to Canada he was engaged in geological and other scientific work until 1850, when he was appointed Superintendent of Education for Nova Scotia. His appointment to the principalship of McGill University in 1855 marks the beginning of an epoch in Canada's intellectual development. The fortunes of McGill were then at a low ebb, and Principal Dawson had an extensive work before him. His influence, however, soon began to make itself felt, and the position of the university steadily improved, until the institution, at his retirement a few years ago, was recognized as having one of the most efficient scientific faculties in the world. There can be no doubt that this result was largely due to the vast energy and administrative ability of the principal.

For many years Sir William Dawson was one of the most prominent members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. He was elected president of that body in 1886. The American Association testified to its appreciation of his scientific labors by electing him to the presidency in 1883. He was also the author of several works of scientific interest, which have proved a very real contribution to the world's knowledge.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.

A Scaffold Collapses and Two Men Fell 30 Feet

Toronto, Nov. 20.—At 11 o'clock this morning, a scaffold collapsed at the residence of Chester D. Massey, corner of Jarvis and Wellesley streets,w here some buildings operations are in progress and two workmen, Timothy Martin, 37 Henderson avenue, and William Mason, 345 Wilton avenue, were precipitated, not only 20 feet to the level of the earth, but to the bottom of a 10-foot drain as well. Mr. Martin's head unfortunately struck a plank, and he was instantly killed. Mr. Mason was severely shaken up, but his injuries are not very serious, and he was taken home.

The scaffold which fell was the work of the two men. They projected supports from some windows and placed horizontal planks thereon. They then trusted themselves to the affair with the above result.

Deceased was 60 years of age and leaves a widow and children.

Coroner Johnston has issued a warrant for an inquest.

DANCED THROUGH THE SKIES.

Away Down in Alabama the Meteors Were Visible.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 20.—Phenomena supposed to be part of the tricentenary meteoric disturbance were observed here last night. Ten meteors were seen, all of which were in the Nubulae form resembling comets. They first appeared as patches of light, and at times would glow a firey red and the fade away repeating this a number of times before they finally disappeared. During the lurid period the central body could be easily seen, the light radiating throughout the entire mass. These bodies appeared to be moving the agitation being easily distinguished with the naked eye. The entire zenith was overcast although outside the area the sky was clear.

Great crowds gathered at the street corners and many were appalled at the strange sight. A number of negroes resorted to prayer as a means of protection from the stars which they feared would reach the earth

Proof Against Earthquake.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Chicago engineers are designing an earthquake-proof steel palace for the Crown Prince of Japan, which is to mark the advent of American steel construction in the Mikado's land, and the Imperial Government has appropriated $3,000,000 for its erection. Foundations are being laid with a view to rearing the frame work in February.

Remarkable Campaigning.

Manila, Nov. 20.—Only fragmentary reports reach Manila of the operations north, which, when the story shall be known, will be seen to have been the most remarkable campaigning of the Philippine war.

The Grand Central Block.

The question of what to do with the old Grand Central Hotel property is now under consideration by the managers of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Co., who recently purchased the property from Mr J S Baswell. The company are loath to turn it into stores, as there are upwards of 20 vacant in town at the present time, and they will not rent it for an hotel. The matter will be settled when Senator Cox next visits Peterborough, which will be next month.

Then again it might be said that a trust in broom-corn is something new on the market.

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 14, 1899

THE POLITICAL GAME.

Some Conservatives organs continue to vigorously thumb the Laurier government for the uncertainty which preceded its decision to send a Canadian contingent to South Africa. This is an illustration of party tactics which would hardly invite notice but for the amusingly complete evidence it affords of partisan tendency to whack at the other side without any regard to the record of your own side.

Of course, had there been no Liberal delay in offering Canadian aid to Britain, some Conservatives organs would have roasted the Liberals for going too fast. This would have been only the ordinary political happening, because it is the self-imposed duty of some party papers to prove that everything the other party does is either wrong in principle, or wrongly carried out. This does not usually excite surprise or comment. But the present case is exceptionally durious because of Sir Charles Tupper's own regard in the matter.

Less than two years ago, the Conservative leader protested to the Council of the Imperial Federation League because it was in favor of recommending that the colonies should contribute to the defence of the empire. He wrote and spoke strongly opposing that idea. When, therefore, the Boer war began, and the question of Canadian aid to the empire was presented point blank to a Liberal cabinet, the members of that cabinet might reasonably have felt convinced that whatever other pros and cons there might be, one thing they certainly could rely upon, namely that Sir Charles Tupper would oppose Canadian action or expense. He had said so most emphatically.

Evidently, then, the Liberal cabinet could fairly say in discussing the advisability of Canadian aid, "We are not sure about our own party largely favoring it, and we are sure the Conservative leaders are against it, and will seize opportunity to attack us for it, because Sir Charles Tupper, their chief, is on record as hotly opposed to such action."

But lo and behold, the Conservative organs are on a hue and cry after the Liberal cabinet for ever having hesitated so much as a day, and in articles and cartoons the Montreal Star is picturing Sir Charles Tupper as the great Imperial champion who forced the Liberal cabinet to move when it didn't want to.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

In the Crimean war, more than twenty thousand British soldiers perished from battle or disease. The tale of dead so far in the Boer war is 243. The Transvaal price is low yet.

Reports of war being imminent between Russia and Japan, and that Russia is advancing on Afghanistan indicate that the rigid censorship in South Africa is driving newspaper enterprise to other fields.

SIGHT TO ONE BORN BLIND.

The Surprise of a Woman Who Was First Able to See at the Age of 29.

A few days ago Miss Alberta McKinnie looked out of the windows of the "suggestion room" at the Eye and Ear Infirmary and burst into tears. Other patients have looked from the windows of the infirmary and shed tears caused by suffering. But Miss McKinnie wept for pure joy, and she praised God and Dr. Holt alternatively. Small wonder that she did, for upon her has been wrought a truly modern miracle. Blind since birth, the achievements of modern science have given the sight that for twenty-nine years have been denied her.

Miss McKinnie belongs in Rockland, and she was born blind. Over each eye a congenital cataract obscured the vision. She lived with relatives who clothed and fed her. One day a stranger saw Miss McKinnie and looked at her eyes. He told her that he believed if she would go to the Eye and Ear Infirmary an operation might be performed that would enable her to see. The neighbors scoffed. It was ridiculous. But hope found lodgement in Miss McKinnie's breast, and her one thought was to come to Portland. The Rev. Mr. Woodman of R[illegible] interested himself in her, and she was sent here for treatment.

It is a delicate and peculiar operation that Dr. Holt performed upon Miss McKinnie when he removed two congenial cataracts. It is an operation that is usually unsatisfactory. A white substance, which was about the color of milk and the consistency of butter, was spread over each pupil. It could not be removed by cutting away like a hard substance. Instead it had to be stirred up, so to speak, and then the doctor trusted in a great measure to remove it.

For fourteen weeks the patient has been at the infirmary. The operation has been performed by easy stages for the purpose of watching and studying each change. Little by little the milky cataracts disappeared until now but a small white speck remains on each eye, and it is thought that these will disappear in time. In all probability another slight operation will be performed to correct a slight cross-ed effect that appears in the restored organs.

When the final operation was performed the eye was bandaged and carefully kept from the light for several days. When they were strong enough to be fitted with glasses it was a difficult task to find just the kind she needed, but it was finally accomplished. Dr. Little placed them on Miss McKinnie and led her to the window for the first time.

It was almost like being born into a new world for Miss McKinnie. Of course a good many things she had a general idea of through hearing people talk about them.

Direct opposite the infirmary a man was walking about on the flat roof of a house. It was the first object her eyes rested upon. "What is it?" asked Dr. Little. "It must be a man," she answered. So on, one by one, different objects were pointed out and she was asked to tell what they were. A man with a pail went by. She said she though that it must be a pail because she had felt of one while she was blind. Just then a dog went by in the street. She stared in astonishment, and then cried aloud—"Oh, is that a dog? I never imagined it looked like that." Trees were a mystery to her. Their spreading limbs and autumn-tinted foliage held her spellbound. She had never seen colors before. Electric cars were a wonderful thing as was the electric light. She could not understand the power that was back of them.

When asked what her feelings were when she first found out that she could see, she replied—"Well, I don't know as I can tell you. My eyes seemed to be swimming in water and I thought I was looking at a lake. This mist slowly cleared away, and then I saw the face of Dr. Holt. Oh, it was the first face I had ever seen, and he is the best man in the world! I shall bless him until my dying day."

When asked if she had been out, she said—

"Oh, yes, several times. I can't describe to you my sensations. I have seen so much that is beautiful and I have so much more to see. I am learning to read now and have got so I can pick quite a good deal out of a newspaper. I have read some by means of the raised letters provided for blind folks, so it hasn't been so hard to learn the letters in print. If I could stay here forever I would be perfectly happy."

While similar operations have been performed, it is seldom that they result so successfully as this one. To give an idea of just what her sight now is, it may be said that ten-tenths represents the normal or perfect vision. Miss McKinnie can see four-tenths. With the glasses that have been fitted to her eyes he will be able to see better than many persons who have such affections as near-sightedness, &c. She will be able to read, and even now she says she can almost thread a needle. Her eyes are new to her, so to speak, and as soon as she gets used to them she will use them much better. One peculiar thing that can be noticed about Miss McKinnie is the change of the expression of her face. It is well known that blind people have expressionless faces as a rule, particularly those blind from birth. It was so in Miss McKinnie case. Why should it be otherwise? What could she know of the beauties or humors that produce the various expressions in the faces of those of us who can see? She did not know what it was to laugh, but she does now, and so, little by little, each new thing that she sees produces some new emotion that causes the hitherto impassive countenance to light up with all the emotions of other mortals.

A Popularity That Increases With Mighty Strides.

Diamond Dyes First in All Points That Make Perfection.

Notwithstanding the fact that imitation and crude package dyes and soap-grease dyes are before the public seeking recognition, the fame and popularity of the Diamond Dyes increases with mighty strides.

Those who have the misfortune to try any of the inferior dyes sold by some dealers know well how deceptive they prove. The users are utterly disheartened and disappointed. They work with these common dyes show muddy and dull colors, and anger is kindled because valuable garments and materials are spoiled.

The Diamond Dyes, simple and easy to use, have a standard of excellence that no others can approach. They give true, uniform and honest results when used in the mansion or cottage. Bright, clear brilliant colors are always obtained on all kinds of goods—all wool, all cotton or mixed goods—when the plain directions are followed.

Do not be decieved by any dealer when he offers you something as good as the Diamond Dyes. There are no other dyes in the world that can equal the "Diamond"; no others that can so successfully make old things new.

An Interesting Discovery.

Professor Groff, the Egyptologist, writes from Ghizeh about Pharaonic mummies at the Ghizeh museum, confirming the traditions that the scenes described in the first chapters of the Book of Exodus took place under the reign of Rameses II and his son, Merenptah. The Pharoh's daughter of the bible was Princess Bent Anta, and the great magician of that time Hamus, another son of Rameses II. The mummies of the latter had been discovered, but it was thought that of Hamus was missing. Mr. Groff now has indentified one of the mummies as that of the prince and magician Hamus and verified the writing on the shroud as "Ra-Ha-mus."

"After having opened the case in which the mummy is kept," he says, "and carefully removing the outer cloth covering, there appeared written on the shroud, just over the breast of the mummy, 'His majesty commanded in the seventh year, third month of the season of planting, sixth day, to be put in order the mummy of Prince Hamus.' This not proves that the object of my research was correct, that the name is not Rahamus, as heretofore supposed, but Hamus, that of the great magician with whom I had already identified the mummy."

Thus, with one exception, all the mummies of the principal royal persons spoken of in the first chapters of Exodus—Rameses II, the Pharoh of the Exodus, Hamus, the great magician, are still extent at Ghizeh. There still lacks the mummy of Princess Bent Anta, Pharoh's daughter, the foster-mother of Moses. Certain indications on her sarcophagus might lead one to suppose the mummy had been destroyed, but it is probable in some tomb in the valley near Thebes, hidden with other princesses and queens.

THE PETERBOROUGH CLUB.

By the Times Football Poet with sundry apologies.

Say, whither go these fellows
  With hair so very long,
Their muscles indicating
  That they are very strong?
Their suits are thickly padded,
  With pride their faces glow,
Some objects queer they carry—
  Say, whither do they go?

These chaps with bulging muscles
  And Paderewski hair,
With pride of large dimensions
  In clothing that they wear—
Why, they're the season's heroes,
  Who bravely strive for fame,
And proufly they are going
  To play a football game.

Whence come these tattered fellows
  With hair so badly torn,
While some, all cut and battered,
  Are by their comrades borne?
And here and there is limping
  A chap with bandaged shin,
And some have both eyes blackened—
  Where have these victims been?

They've not been in a battle,
  Although it looks that way;
Their wounds are not inflicted
  By men in deadly fray.
Ah, no! these tattered fellows,
  Some cut, some bruised, some lame,
Are hero who've been playing
  A Rugby football game.

They don't regard the bruises,
  They never shrink at mire;
For laurels they are striving,
  To glory they aspire.
They're now the season's heroes,
  These chaps of grit and brawn,
So call the ambulances
  And let the game go on.

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

War Predicted

London, Nov. 17.—A prominent diplomat here asserts his belief that war is absolutely certain between Japan and Russia, and that before the end of 1900 the Japanese flag will be flying over Port Arthur.

WHY RUSSIA IS NEUTRAL

Japan Holds the Balance, and is Ready to Fight With England Against Russia.

JAPANFSD FLEET IS STRONGER THAN RUSSIAN.

The Mikado Has a Perfect Understanding With the British Cabinet, and His Subjects Hate the Czar Most Bitterly.

Debt of Gratitude to Britain.

London, Nov. 18.—For the neutrality of Russia in the present crisis, despite the virulent attacks of the Russian press upon England, and despite the open invitations which French journals are issuing to their good ally for a coalation against, and treacherous assault upon England, we have not to go far to find an explanation.

It is often overlooked by our good enemies on the continent that no coalation against the British Empire could be formed which would not instantly bring into the field on our side one or more powers who could never allow our navy to be destroyed. These powers are perfectly well aware that the smashing of England would be merely the preliminary to an attack upon their own vital interests. They are bound to us by no paper alliances but it may be stated with some confidence that they have a perfect understanding with the British Government. One of the most important of these powers is Japan.

England Saved Her.

We saved her once in 1895, and she knows it. We saved her from Russia, France and Germany, and she remembers them and their action. "The heavy Russian battleships," says Mr. Lafcadio Hearn, who knows the far east and at that time was resident in Japan, "were stripped for fighting, and these alone could possibly have overpowered the Japanese fleet, though the victory would have been a costly one. But Russian action was suddenly checked by the sinster declaration of English sympatiy with Japan. Within a few weeks England could bring int oAsiatic waters a fleet capable of crushing, in one short battle, all the ironclads assembled by the combination of France, Germany and Russia."

But if Japan remembers what we then did for her, she has never forgotten the conduct of Russia. She had hoped to regenerate China, for her lynx-eyed statesmen saw perfectly clearly what was coming; saw, too, that the only hope of holding back the monster power of the north and curbing its inordinate ambitions lay in a strong China allied with Japan.

Turned Out By Russia.

She was firt contemptuously pitched out of Port Arthur, because her presence there would be dangerous to "the balance of power in China," and then she saw the State which had ejected her seize this price less possession for its own use. No wonder that Japan burnt and still burns with fury; no wonder that, as a Japanese captain once said to me, "On the day that your fleet steams out against the Russians prepared for battle, you will find our fleet close at hand and ready."

Japan would have fought, even in 1895, weak as she then was, against three of the strongest European powers had not her statesmen kept in check the fierce pugnacity of the nation. Men killed themselves for rage at the news of surrender. The navy and army, covered with glory in the war with China, would have fought to the last had the fighting men had their way, but they were told that the war was only postponed, not abandoned.

Since then with redoubled vigor Japan has armed. She is now building up a navy which will give her a good place among the world powers. She is developing the army with all possible speed. She never falters, never hesitates; she knows that her national existence depends upon her armed strength, and that at the first favorable opportunity when England's hands are tied she will be attacked.

Will Show Heroism.

In the hour of death, in the day of battle, she means to show all the heroism of her noble race. She has adopted civilization as she has adopted rifles and battleships, because it is necessary to her existence, and she has been content to pay a bitter price for it.

On the other side, Russia has vastly developed her navy and is building the great Trans-Siberian railway, which, Russia fondly imagines, will place the Far East at her feet. She has trebled in a decade her outlay upon ships and guns and seamen and though in part this increase is directed against England, it is also in part directed against Japan, the new obstacle that has arisen in the Russian path to world-dominion.

When we remember that Japan as an Oriental power is still cruelly poor, the list of ships she is building will show the greatness of her self-sacrifice and the concentration of the national will upon the master-aim of securing command of the sea against the Muscovite adversary. She has now three of the largest battleships, four powerful armored cruisers, three smaller cruisers, six destroyers, and twenty-three torpedo boats on the stocks, completing or projected. She is doubling her strength of enlisted men and officers.

A Strong Navy.

Even as she stands to-day her fleet is equal in naval strength to the Russian squadron in the Far East.

The Japanese battleship Shikishima, a brand new vessel, on her way out, is faster, bigger, and better armed than any of the Russian ships; the Yashima and Fuji are also new and very powerful.

The Russians are superior in armored cruisers, but they are vastly behind in modern proteted cruisers, where the Japanese are very strong. Such a vessel as the Takasago, with two 8-inch and ten 4.7 inch quick firers, is a match for any of the Russian armored cruisers, except perhaps the huge Rurik and Rossia. But the But the Tokiwa and Asama could perfectly grapple with these two monsters. They are built to do it.

Japan, then, to-day has nothing to fear from the Russian fleet in Asiatic waters. She looks to England to prevent France playing the part of Russia's jackal and bringing up the four French ships which are in the Far East to fight Russia's battle's. She may look confidently; we will see fair play. As between Japan and any combination of European powers England thus holds the balance.

Paine's Celery Compound
Saved His Life Years Ago

HAS NOT BEEN ILL A SINGLE DAY SINCE HE WAS CURED.

If there are doubters who in the past have questioned the efficacy of Paine's Celery Compound in saving life, they must, after carefully reading Mr. Kilbride's second letter, come to the conclusion that the great medicine is worthy to closer thought and attention than they were disposed to give it weeks or months ago.

Mr. P. L. Kilbridge, postmaster of Inverness, P. E. I., is no idle theorist or speculator, neither has his important testimony been unduly obtained. This second letter, vouching for a permanent and lasting cure, is allowed to be made public for the advantage and weal of thousands of sufferers who are anxiously looking for new life and freedom from the power of disease. Mr. Kilbride says—

"Nearly six years ago Paine's Celery Compound cured me—in fact, saved my life. At this time I am still feeling well and have not been ill a single day since I used your famous Compound. I truly owe my present health and strength to Paine's Celery Compound; it saved me from insanity and the grave. I shall never forget the awful state I was in before I used your grand life restorer. Now I can sleep and eat well, for which I thank God and your wondrous curing medicine. I have answered over two hundred and fifty letters written to me by other sufferers after my first testimonial letter was published. These letters the United States.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

THE GENERAL'S SCHEME

How Hutton Proposes to Rapidly Muster Our Troops in Case of Emergency

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—At the closing session of the meeting of the district officers commanding Major-General Hutton gave a comprehensive description of his plans for mobilization in case of war.

In his last annual report the general commented upon the impossibility of framing any form of administration which can be applicable to mobilization for war unless the existing small units of varying size are increased in numerical strength and made up to a uniform establishment. Regiments of cavalry, batteries of artillery and battalions of infantry must necessarily be of uniform strength. This change might be carried out gradually, and existing battalions, weak and varying in size as they are, might at first be combined into provisional regiments without interfering with their present identity. The units thus organized could then be combined into brigades and divisions. The War Office manuals, lists of stores, mobilization tables, etc., could then beutilized.

An Important Point.

In carrying out this plan two things must be kept in sight, the general said; the regimental sentiment of the existing units and the necessity of the organization being so adapted that large and important increases can be made in times of emergency.

By this plan two small companies of infantry are formed into a larger single company, who will thus upon amalgamation possess a double number of officers and a double number of non-commissioned officers over and above the establishment llaid down as necessary in the War Office schedules. This extra staff of officers and non-commissioned officers thus available will, it is proposed, be retained at the headquarters of each of the battalions forming the provisional regiment, and will there raise by volunteer enlistment or by ballot, as directed, the second battalions to raise the provisional reserve infantry regiment.

The principle would be applied in a similar way to cavalry. An active militia force which at present provides similar system in the case of the cavalry will give at the headquarters of each regiment nearly all the officers and all the staff of non-commissioned officers required for the formation of a provisionally reserve cavalry regiment. It will be observed, therefore, that, carrying out this principle, the active milita force, which at present provides a total strength of, on a peace footing, 35,000 men, would be increased to a war establishment of approximately 50,000 men. By means of the additional cadre of officers and non-commissioned officers allotted to the provisional reserve regiment an additional 50,000 men could be raised from the population without very serious difficulty.

The general will submit the scheme in his report for this year.

MURDER IS THE VERDICT

Of the Jury in the Case of John Varcoe—Conclusion of Inquest

Toronto, Nov. 18.—No new facts were brought out at the inquest upon the death of J. E. Varcoe at police headquarters last night. Henry Williams, the prisoner, was in the doc kand P. C. Mackie sat beside him throughout the proceedings. The finding of a stick pin concealed in a plug of tobacco had apparently made the police more careful than ever in their watch over the prisoner.

Allan Varcoe, a brother of the deceased, was positive in his identification of Williams as the man who came into the bedroom after McIntosh rushed in and ordered the witness and his two companions to cover their heads. He did not remember seeing a revolver in Williams' hand when he knocked him out of the window. Williams smiled grimly when this evidence was offered. Noah Thomas, who also struck Williams as he rushed for the window, said that he saw a revolver lying beside him after he had fallen to the pavement. He identified as nearly as possible some of the money found on the prisoner as stolen from his trousers. He did not see a revolver in Williams' hand.

Mrs. Armstrong, Miss Armstrong, and Miss Lake, who were sleeping in the house on the morning of the murder, were also called. The evidence of Henry Spottiswood, given in the McIntosh inquest, was also read, as was that of C. H. B. Johnson, Patrol Sergt. Willis and P. C. Dickson.

The Verdict.

After a short deliberation the jury returned the following verdict—

"That John Edward Varcoe came to his death by reason of wounds produced by the bullets from revolvers fired at and upon the body of the said John Edward Varcoe by one Harry Williams and one Jos. McIntosh, alias Curtis, and that the said Harry Williams and Joseph McIntosh, on the 9th day of November, did feloniously and will malice aforethought kill and murder the said Varcoe."

In a rider which accompanied the verdict the jury highly praised P. C. Dickson No. 190.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the graphophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A new interesting use of a graphophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Sunday Soda Case

Toronto, Nov. 18.—The Toronto druggists' Sunday selling case has reached Osgoode Hall. On Friday, Wallace Nesbitt, Q. C., moved for a certiorari to remove a conviction of a defendant (a druggist) by the Police Magistrate for the City of Toronto for selling ice cream and soda water on Sunday. The Magistrate found on the evidence that ice cream and soda water are sometimes sold as medicines, but that they were not in this case. An order was made for the issue of a certiorari. This is the first step toward quashing the conviction.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

A Field Hospital Corps

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—Next week Major-General Hutton will visit Torono and with representatives of Torono University, the Medical colleges and the School of Pharmacy, discuss the practicability of organizing from the students a field hospital company and a bearer company of 45 officers and men each. The General proposes that officers shall be chosen from the professoriate of the colleges. At presen the bearer company at Halifax is the only one in Canada. No field hospital is yet in existence, but both Torono and Montreal are shortly to have such organizations.

The Queen Failing

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Horace Townsend, cabling from London to the Record, says—"I learn on trustworthy authority that great apprehension is felt in court circles over the Queen's health. Her strength seems gradually failing. She is quite unable to conduct business with that keenness and energy which she has until quite lately displayed. Her late visit to Bristol seems to have overtaxed her strength, and her weakness and frailty were pitiably noticeable on her return to Windsor."

Died in the Woods

Bobcaygeon, Nov. 18.—Wm. Henderson, who resides in the Township of South Guilford, went out shooting, but failing to return, a search party was formed. As there was about an inch of snow on the ground his tracks were easily followed, and about a mile from his house his dead body was discovered in the woods. He had evidently died from fatigue and exposure. He leaves a wife and six children. The hunting parties in the neighborhood interested themselves, and the Gartshore party made a subscription of $25 and gave it to the widow.

A Royal Welcome.

London, Nov. 18.—The special preparations which are being made for fitting out the battleship Glory, now building at Birkenhead, have given rise to the belief that the Duke of York will hoist his flag on her for the special purpose of greeting the United States squadron, which is expected to visit Spithead next summer. That such a naval visit will be paid is taken for granted by the British naval officials.

SLAVS THREATEN ALL EUROPE.

Dark Shadow of a Race That is Increasing Rapidly in Numbers

Europe has less reason to fear being overgrown by the Mongolian than by the Slavanic race. In its various branches this race is increasing more rapidly than that of any other on the continent. At present they are confined for the most part to Russia. The Russian empire now numbers 130,000,000, and, though these include Germans in the extreme west and Mongols in the extreme east, yet the mass are pure Slavs, presenting thus a homogeneity rare in history. But in addition to Russia we have Slavonic offshoots over a large European area which render the future of much more than half Europe certainly Slavonic. The troubles in Austria have brought reminders of the Slav kingdom of Bohemia, but it is not often in Bohemia only that the German is face to face with the Slav; he is so in Galicia, in Carinthia and Carniola, while the Magyar is surrounded by an ever increasing population in the land of his birth. In the Balkan peninsula it is the case of whether Slav or German shall inherit the lands made desolate by the Turk, and few who have studied the question in the light of recent history can doubt that it will be the Slav.

It is not necessary to quote that hackneyed saying of Napoleon—"Cossack or republican"—it is more to the point to say that, whatever the future political forms of Europe may be, her actual population will be largely if not predominatly Slavonic, and that this fact may mean a different Europe from that known in history. For where, from the point of view of numbers, is the counter-balancing element to the Slav to be found? France is stationary and very nearly so are Spain and Portugal.

Germany is full, and can only maintain herself in comfort by reason of the American outlet for her surplus. Austria is actually a ground for Slav, as against German increase. Italy, like Germany, sends her surplus over the Atlantic. The great future of English-speaking people is not in Europe, but in America and the Southern seas. The Norse people are hemmed in by barren lands and are probably increasing faster in the Northwest of the United States than at home. Now, if we set against these facts the actual growth of Russia herself, the increase of Slavs in Central Europe, and the probable future of the Slavs in the Balkan peninsula, we cannot fail to see that, within a measurable period, the Slavonic element in European society will predominate in the balance.

What effect will this radical reconstruction of Europe exert on mankind? It will be a long time before we shall realize that if we want to find the great seats of the historic peoples of Europe we shall have to look beyond Europe, to Teutonic North America, to Lation South America, to Teutonic Australasia. Yet this will, so far as one can see, certainly be the case within another century, assuming the present general drift of things to continue.

TIRE PUNCTURES.

In Turkey they call the bicycle the "devil's chariot."—New York Telegram.

It is not considered good form for a red headed girl to ride a white bicycle. This is important news and should be remembered.—Kansas City Times.

The bicycle rider is not hard hearted. He sincerely regrets collisions with pedestrians, though his regret is not as keen as it used to be when wheels were higher in price.—Kansas City Journal.

Of course the Boston Globe editor is writing of the Boston maiden when he says, "In the case of the average bicycle girl distance lends enchantment to the view."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Arab chieftains and other high moguls of the race are eager to get any old bicycle they can lay their hands on. They learn to ride quickly and are proud and happy when mounted on what they call the "horse of the devil."

Briggs—Appearances, you know, are often deceptive.

Griggs—Yes. A person can never tell just how much it is going to cost to keep them up.

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grizzly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lochnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a fold where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Cocoanut oil thickens and darkens the eyebrows.

A raw egg swallowed will detach a fishbone in the throat.

A good cure for corns is to rub them night and morning with a piece of ordinary sandpaper. If this method is persevered in, great relief is at once obtained, and the corns will gradually disappear.

"A good stout toothbrush, plenty of water and some antiseptic dentifrice applied morning and night," says one who has given much thought in the interests of antiseptic purity, "will afford a greater safeguard against many diseases than most people are aware."

THE NEW SPAIN.

About the worst that can be said of Spain now is that it is the Washington Baseball club of nations.—Chicago News.

Nothing seems to be said about what Spain is going to do at the Paris exposition. It might at least make a display of manana.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

Now that we are friends with Spain once more, she may give us the contract of building her new navy. She has reason to know that we build a fairly good article of warship.—St. Louis Republic.

VINEGAR, THEN LEAD.

They Settled the Trouble at the Carbonville Postoffice.

"I think my most exciting official experience," said Captain J. R. Stone, formerly United States postal inspector, "was at the town of Carbonville, Colo., in 1879. It was a star route post, and there was much complaint about the nonreceipt of mail, so I went over to investigate.

"The postmaster was a man named Wilson, who kept a general store, and the postoffice consisted of a soap box on the end of his counter. When mail arrived, it was dumped in, and every fellow helped himself, an arrangement that worked well enough until a chap known as Black Hills Pete came to town. Pete disturbed the entire system. When he didn't get a letter himself, he would tear up several others on the principle that misery loves company, and, being a notorious desperado, nobody dared interfere. I got the facts, and as the mail came in that evening I took a seat in the corner and awaited developments, first ordering the box removed.

"A little after dark the miners from camp began to assemble, and presently in came Black Hills Pete. He was a big brute of a fellow, and I saw at once there was going to be trouble. 'Where's that letter box?' he demanded of Wilson. 'I've ordered him not to use it any more,' I said, getting up. 'Who the blank blank are you?' roared Peter. 'I'm the inspector,' I replied. 'Well, you get me that box quick,' he retorted, and, seeing him reach toward his pocket, I made a grab for my gun; but, as bad luck would have it, the confounded thing caught in the holster.

"In a twinkling he had me covered, but before he could turn loose a quavering voice called out: 'Pete! Oh, Pete!' The desperado glared around, and there stood Wilson holding a large tin squirt gun used for drawing liquors. The sight was so ludicrous that the bully burst into a guffaw, and as he did so Wilson let drive the piston and hurled about a quart of the strongest kind of vinegar squarely into his face. The stuff blinded him, and before he could recover himself the storekeeper had two bullets in his shoulder.

"That's the true story of the strangest fight that ever occurred in the west. Pete recovered, but before he could be arrested was spirited away by friends to New Mexico. His right name was Luther Coleman, and there is a warrant now standing against him for destroying United States mail matter. After the episode I have narrated there was no further trouble at the Carbonville postoffice."—New Orleans

Where the Pot of Gold is Buried.

How many women are fretting and struggling along on a very little money when a good sized yard or adjoining patch of ground is going to waste! Yet that very piece of ground may contain all sorts of possibilities—clothes, furniture, books, medicines, luxuries and even necessities otherwise impossible.

Clear, plow, fertilize and plant. This done, the great beginning is made, and perseverance and attention will secure the rest. Onions, tomatoes, cabbages, celery, a small poultry farm, a violet or rose farm—any one of these may add several hundred dollars to one's purse every year. Small fruits, hops, tuberoses and grapes are also very profitable. With some intelligence a blooming garden can always be made a paying one. Make it a principle to have no more waste in the garden than in the kitchen.

If there is only a very small place and just enough raised for one's own family, try, after the table is supplied, to prepare what vegetables and fruits are left over for sale for winter use. There is always a demand for good homemade canning and preserving. Do not let a valuable scrap of ground be idle.—Annette Halliday-Antona in Woman's Home Companion.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (I, 267).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how the mournful crocodile

With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
—"2 Henry VI.," iii. [illegible]
—"Poet's Lore."

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 25 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians, probably through the Phœnicians.

Bone dust for raspberries and blackberries may be simply scattered broadcast over the ground, as the necessary cultivation will work it sufficiently in with the soil.

While peach seedlings are usually healthier and last longer than budded trees, one is never sure what kind of fruit a seedling will produce when it comes into bearing.

I have taken no medicine since and have had no symptoms of my former trouble."—Mrs. E. A. Bender, Keene, Coshocton Co., Ohio.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

A House Raided.

The police raided a house of ill-fame on Stewart street this morning about [illegible] o'clock, and gathered in four women and put them in the cells. They will come up before the magistrate to-day. The police had only been in the house a few minutes when a couple of well-known young men called, but taking in the situation at a glance, hurriedly decamped.

MR. DUMBLE'S KINDERGARTEN.

A Number of Youngsters Up for Various Offences.

Yesterday was a sort of kindergarten day at the police court, and judging from the manner in which Magistrate Dumble is fining boys for throwing stones, breaking windows, and committing other such violations of the law, the nuisance in this line will soon be terminated.

Michael O'Brien, a boy of about fifteen years of age was charged with assaulting William McCutchen and he was fined $2

Harold Gibbs, "Reddie" Nichols and Jack O'Donnell, three youngsters, were charged with disorderly conduct on Thursday last. Mr. Wolstenholm was the complainant, and told of the trouble he has had of late with the boys, who are in the habit of ringing his door bell, shoving iin the door, etc. They were all let go wth a warning.

The quartette composed of H. Blewett, C. Foy, Frank Scriber and Claude Sherwood were next ranged up on a charge of damage to the property of James O'Connor by breaking windows. T. Hurley prosecuted. Blewett pleaded guilty and said he broke one pane. He, Scriber and Sherwood were each fined $5. Foy got off. Mr. Stone appeared for Sherwood and protested against the size of the fine for a first offence but the magistrate stated that the damagiing of vacant houses was becoming an intolerable nuisance and that if fines of $5 did not stop it he would raise the price to $50. Douglas Byers was the chief witness for the prosecution and made himself so unpopular that he was afraid to leave the court room to go home afterwards.

Martin Flaherty was charged by Timothy Cairs with assault. Cairns is a one-leged man. Flaherty pleaded provocation in blaspheming by Cairns but the latter denied the slightest but the latter denied the slightest form of incivility. Each denied everything the other said. Flaherty was asked to contribute $5, which he did. Both work on the Chamberlain farm in Monaghan

Mrs. Wm. McMasters adorned the prisioner's box. She was charged with keeping a house of ill-repute. She pleaded not guilty and the case was enlarged till Wednesday morning, she being allowed out on bail given by her husband. E. B. Stone was present for the defence.

A charge against John Donahue of wilful damage to property was withdrawn on payment of costs amounting to $3.10.

An Apology.

The Manager of the Whitcher Dramatic Company, playing this week in the Opera House begs to offer an apology to the audience that was present at last night's performance, for the manner in which one of the specialties was put on by parties recently engaged, this being their first—and positively last—appearance with the company. The performers were engaged by letter and showed excellent testimonials from former troupes with which they were alleged to have travelled with; they only arrived in town yesterday, too late for rehearsal and in consequence performed last night in a manner which offended some of the audience. The manager at the time was in Mr. Bradburn's private office and did not see the exhibition or the curtain would certainly have been rung down. He feels very sorry for what occurred, and begs to assure the citizens of Peterborough, that the offenders will not again appear with his company, and that they may depend that future performances will be free from anything that would offend the most fastidious, and reiterates his regret for the deplorable occurrence at last night's performance.

The Hockey Club.

The hockey club will meet this evening at the rink for organization. There is every prospect of putting on a strong team this season. A large attendance is requested.

Required Amount Subscribed.

Rev. D. O. Crossley, of Charlotte street Methodist church, was in Millbrook Sunday, where he took charge of the service at the Methodist church there in their efforts to raise $1,400 towards paying off the church debt. The congregations were the largest that have been in the church for a long time and over the required amount was subscribed.

PERSONAL.

Miss Josephine Pursley, Mount Pleasant, is a guest at the residence of her uncle, Mr. John Young, of Douro.

Mr. Wm. O'Brien, the popular clerk of Douro, was in town yesterday and gave the Times a call.

Mr. Walter Phelan left yesterday at noon for Pittsburg, where he intends residing for some time.

Mr. George Halpin, of Toronto, is visiting at the residence of his parents, Hunter street.

Mrs. A. E. Ames, of Toronto, has been visiting Mrs. A. L. Davis and returned home yesterday.

Miss Maud Elliott, of Toronto, is in town renewing old acquaintances. She is the guest of Miss Eva Whiten.

Mr. A. Harnett, of Renfrew, father of Mrs. C. H. McAllister, has contributed $5,000 to the Presbyterian century fund.

A SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR.

The Maple Leaf Cheese Factory's Annual Ball.

The annual ball under the auspices of the management of the Maple Leaf cheese factory was held on Thursday night last, and eclipsed anything of the kind that has ever been held in connection with this popular factory.

For a number of years this has been an annual event given by the manager of the fatory, Mr. George Brooks, and the affair is looked forward to by the people of that neighborhood with anticipated success. The attendance this year was indeed a record breaker, there having been over one hundred and twenty couple present. They included people from Peterborough, Warsaw, Lakefield and many and many other places. Dancing was kept up until three o'clock the following morning. Excellent music was supplied by Mr. M. D. Sullivan, of Douro and Mr. Peter Dougherty and Miss Dougherty, of Otonabee. The dancing took place in the cheese factory, and the supper, which was quite in keeping with the rest of the affair, was served in Mr. Brooks' house. The floor manager was Mr. Michael Allan, of Douro, assisted by Mr. Turcotte, of town.

The thanks of the company is tendered Mr. James Welch for the manner in which he catered to the comfort of the guests, and to his assistants, Michael Mahoney and Martin Leahy.

BAD HEART—DIZZY HEAD.

Life Was a Living Death, but Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart Relieved in Thirty Minutes.

"I was so troubled with heart disease that I could not stand on a chair without growing dizzy. Going up stairs, or being suddenly startled, brought on violent palpitation and suffocation. Had pains about the heart. Tried many remedies and physicians without relief. I took two bottles of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart and, although two years ago, I have not felt the slightest return of the trouble. I think it is the greatest of remedies." Mrs. W. R. Collyer, 22 Pacific avenue, Toronto. Sold by Ormond & Walsh and H. S. McDonald.

At the Opera House.

Whitcher's Dramatic Company opened a week's engagement at the Opera House last night to a fair audience. The Company put up a good clean show, and deserve patronage. The beautiful moral drama, entitled "Passion Slave," in which the characters were well substituted throughout was presented. The singing and dancing of Petite Gracie Whitcher won the applause of the audience. There will be a complete change of programme nightly. Admission, 10c., 15c., and 25c.

A Narrow Escape.

On Sunday morning a three-year-old daughter of Mr Parker, who is employed on the canal and lives on Robinson street, Ashburnham, had a narrow escape from death by poisoning. The little one got up in the morning and in going about the house got hold of a wine glass full of laudanum. She quenched her thirst with it and then went to her mother and made the remark "Oh, mama, I've had such a lovely drink." Instantly the thought of the laudanum flashed across the mother's mind and she quickly sent a young man who was boarding in the house for Dr Brown. The child was kept awake until he arrived and then antidotes were given and other means taken to prevent the poison taking effect. The child was kept with much trouble until the danger was past. The drug had been bought on Saturday for a teething infant and only a couple of drops had been used out of it. There was enough laudanum in the glass to kill a half dozen people.

The Civic Investigation.

The civic investigation will be resumed on Thursday morning next before His Honour Judge Weller, in the County Council Chamber. Argument will be heard, touching several points and the evidence of contractors, Richard Sheehy and Harry Evans has yet to be taken. Then will follow the arguments of the different counsel, after which His Honor will take the matter into most serious consideration.

KRUGER'S GRANDSON.

Man Claiming Relationship With Oom Paul in Town.

While a couple of North-Enders were meandering homewards on Monday night, they stumbled over a man who was laying cuddled up to the edge of the sidewalk.

"Get up, you poor devil, or you will freeze," shouted one of the citizens, as he shook the prostrated man.

It was some times before the rudely awakened stranger could collect his thoughts, but he soon assumed an air of confidence that alarmed the sergeant.

"Do you know, sir, that I am a man of some military rank?" asked the unknown.

The two good Samaritans had not expected such a reply and stepped back and took a respectful pose.

"I hope I caused you no hard feelings," one of them said, "but I am confident that you have mistaken the number."

"Sir, I am a colonel in South African Republic's forces and you have wounded my feelings deeply. Look at me and behold one of the missing grandsons of Oom Paul, president of the Transvaal. There were fifty-two of us. Forty-eight are fighting the English, but I, one of the four unaccounted for members of the family am here because I lost my railroad ticket."

The appearance of the man would have aided him before a jury in proving his connection with Kruger. His face was smooth shaven except from a wreath of whiskers that extended below his chin. He had the large nose and other facial characteristic of the famous fighter.

The patriotic soul of the citizens was stirred. They gave him a quarter to buy breakfast and told him to go to Mr Ham Burnham for further sympathy and assistance.

TWO MEAN TOWNS.

How a Couple of Knights of the Grip do Some Talking.

They were seated in the rear parlor of the Snowden House, and were talking about bad towns. The genial proprietor had just polished off Mr Con Young, the popular mill owner of Young's Point, at a game of pedro for the cigars, and had planted his feet on a chair opposite as he leaned back to enjoy a smoke.

"The meanest place I ever was in," said the man who travels for a liquor house, "is down in Nova Scotia. Say, do you know what happened while I was stopping there once? A man had fallen through a hole in a sidewalk and sustained injuries tha resulted in the loss of his right arm. He sued the city for damages and the case was tried before a jury which the papers said was composed of representative citizens. Well, what do you suppose they did to him? Brought in a verdict in favor of the city, holding that inasmuch he was left-handed his injury didn't amount to anything.

"Yes," the cigar man said, "that's a pretty mean town, I admit, but I know of a worse one. This place is in Ontario. An acquaintance of mine was injured some time ago in pretty much the same way the man you mentioned got hurt. He fell on a bad sidewalk a lost one of his legs. He sued the city and didn't get anything—I never heard just why, but probably because the jurors didn't believe he needed more than one leg in his business, seeing that he was a barber and couldn't hone a razor or shave a man with his foot, anyway. But wait, I havn't come to the point at which the real meanness developed. Being a poor man, he couldn't afford to buy a cork leg, so he had to get along with a wooden peg, one day when he was crossing the principal street this peg in some way got wedged between a couple of paving stones right in the middle of the street car track. It took them nearly an hour to get him loose, and what do you suppose happened then? Blamed if they didn't go and fine him $10 and for obstructing traffic!"

PUCK CHASERS MEET.

ANNUAL MEETING OF PETERBORO'S HOCKEY CLUB.

Secretary's Report for the Past Season—New Officers Elected for Ensuing Year—Presentation to Mr. [illegible]—The Colts to Meet

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Hockey Club was held last night in the rink. In the absence of President R. J. Fife, Mr. H. H. Kenner was elected to preside. Judging from the size of the meeting and the enthusiasm displayed hockey will boom here this year.

Secretary Treasurer's Report.

Secretary F. D. Kerr present his report as follows.

Last year was an eventful one in the history of hockey in Peterborough, and demonstrates the fact that Peterborough has a splendid lot of hockey men, well qualified to hold a position on any hockey The interest taken in the seniors was also extended to the Colts, both teams doing splendidly. It is the earnest hope of all well wishers that the coming year will be even more successful and result in securing first place both for the Seniors and the Colts. The entry of the junior series excites interest in the club and helps to develop players who are not young enough for the Colts or experienced enough for the senior team.

Mr. W. A. Buchanan and Mr. A. A. Hollingshead attended the annual meeting of the O. H. A., when Mr. Lionel King was again elected a member of the Executive Committee.

During the season our senior team played seven matches, five being played on home ice and two on foreign ice. Strange to say that both of the games that were lost were played on the home rink. The Juniors played two games, one in Peterborough and one in Norwood.

The Colts played eight games, winning six out of the eight. Four were played on foreign ice and four at home. The games lost were in Kingston against the Frontenacs and against the St. George's, in Toronto. During the year seven-out-of-town games were played as compared with two in the preceding season. thus entailing a very large amount in travelling and hotel expenses. The large sum of $167.00 was spent on railway expenses as compared with $60.20 in the preceding year and a hotel bill of $56.56, as compared with $22 in the preceding year. $368 was paid to visiting teams as compared with $179.55 in 1898. Among other enterprises conducted by the club was the running of an excursion to Toronto in connection with the Varsity game, but owing to lack of patronage a loss of $12.96 was sustained. You will observe that the Rink Company was paid $350.74 by me, in addition to the sum of $50 paid directly by Mr. Hollingshead as manager of the Colts, or the very large sum of $300.74 for hockey privileges for the year now closed.

Notwithstanding the large amounts expended in connection with the games, I am happy to report that receipts and expenditures happily meet and that the club starts this year with a clean sheet, as all accounts have been paid.

Amount received, $1,841.47; amount paid out, for which proper vouchers have been kept, $1,841.47. I have prepared a short statement of receipts and expenditures which will be found below.

The prospects for the coming year are most encouraging, and with the support of the citizens generally and with energetic and honest hard practice on the part of the players, Peterborough should have a most successful season of hockey.

I cannot close my report without mentioning that during the year one of our best players was removed by the sad death of Stanley Bradd. He was a player in whom every member of the club took pride, not only on account of his splendid playing, but also on account of his sportsmanlike and gentlemanly conduct both on the ice and elsewhere.

Rev. V. Clementi, who has been a warm friend of the club and who has been the Chaplain for a lengthy period, has also passed away during the year.

In conclusion I desire to thank the members of the club for their kind assistance and support.

Yours truly,
F. D. Kerr,
Sec.-Treas. P. H. C.

Peterborough, Nov. 21st, 1899.

The report was adopted.

Officers Elected.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year;

Patrons and Patronesses—Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Fife, Mr. and Mrs. C. McGill, Mr and Mrs. G. W. Hatton, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. McAllister.

Honary President,—Dr. R. King.

Chaplin,—Rev. W. L. Armitage.

President,—Mr. A. H. Stratton.

First Vice President,—Mr. C. F. McGill.

Second Vice President,—Mr. F. D. Kerr.

Executive Committee,—Messrs. F. Matthews, W. J. English, Gus. Gough, Firguson and Dickson Davidson.

Delegates to the O.H.A.,—Messrs. F. Dickson and F. D. Kerr.

Captain,—Mr. A. A. Hollingshead.

Team Committee,—Messrs. A. A. Hollingshead, J. McCabe and R. H. Kenner.

Mr. R. Glover was elected captain of the Intermediate team.

Resolution.

A resolution was passed endorsing the candidature of Mr. Lionel King for the Vice-Presidency of the O.H.A.

Vote of Thanks.

On motion of Mr. Kenner a vote of thanks was tendered the retiring officers for their services during the past season. A vote of thanks was also tendered Mr. MacIntosh, caretaker of the rink for many kind services and to the three local newspapers.

Presentation.

The Hockey Club presented Mr. Jim McCabe with a handsome pair of Persian Lamb guantlets as a mark of their appreciation of his services as trainer last season.

It was decided to enter three teams in the O.H.A. as was done last season.

The Colts to Meet.

After consultation it was agreed that the Colts' Hockey team should meet at the Oriental Hotel next Monday evening to consult with Mr. Captain Hollingshead as to the composition of the team.

The meeting adjourned until called by the President.

HOBART IS DEAD.

The Vice-President of the United States Passed Away.

Patterson, N. J., Nov. 21.—Vice-President Hobart died 8.30 a.m.

Mr Hobart was eminently successful, both in business and politics, and had a reputation as a man of affairs and as one of the shrewdest business men in the country. He was born in 1844 at Long branch, N. J. His ancestors on his father's side were English, and on his mother's side Dutch. Thirty-three years ago he was graduated from Rutgers' College, and began teaching school. Three months later he upon the study of law, and in 1869 he was admitted to the bar. Mr Hobart made his way rapidly at the bar of his native State, and his bent led him early into politics.

Captain and Mate Drowned.

St. Thomas, Nov. 20.—The schooner Maple Leaf was brought into Port Stanley harbor last night by the tug Snowstorm. She was found tossing in the waves abreast of New Glasgow, a complete wreck above decks. Her captain, Ralph Robson, of Leamington who is her owner, and his brother John Robson, of Leamington, also, were both drowned, and the two surviving members of the crew, David Adams and J. A. McIntosh, had a terrible experience. The storm struck them some 25 miles north of Cleveland, on Friday night. Captain Robson was engaged to be married on Wednesday to Miss Clara Foster, of Leamington.

Assuming the Holland submarine boat is a success, unlike some fighters all its accomplishments won't be on the surface.

MOVEMENT OF BRITISH THE TROOPS A MYSTERY.

Of the Thirty, Thousand Men Landed, Ten Thousand Have Been Forwarded to Relieve White, Where Are the Rest?

TROOPSHIPS CONTINUE TO REACH THE CAPE.

Boer Force to Break Camp and Withdraw From Investment of Ladysmith—Boers Are Driven Back at Estcourt, Where the British Made a Sortie.

London, Nov. 21.—The censorial screw is being adjusted more tightly these days than since the war with the Boers began. It is evident that General Buller is making some move on the border of the Orange Free State which demands for its success the utmost secrecy. This accounts for the almost dearth of news regarding that quarter. During the present month about thirty transports bearing men, guns, horses and munitions of war have landed close upon 30,000 men on the shores of Africa. Ten thousand of these have been forwarded to Durban, and the British public have been informed of the fact, probably to rehabilitate confidence in the ability of General White to hold Natal, by pointing out that large reinforcements were being forwarded to him. But what has become of the remaining troops? Nobody knows. The veldt and the karoo of Cape Colony have swallowed these 20,000 men so completely as to suggest that the censorship must be an extremely rigid one.

Reasoning by interference, however, it is probable that the bulk of these troops are stationed along the border of the Orange Free State at certain strategic points, such as Queenstown, Naauwpoort Junction, De Aar Junction and Orange River, and that they are effectually performing the task of holding back the Boers from the interior of Cape Colony, at the same time making preparations for the great raid over the Orange River which General Buller will make sooner or later.

But what is Lord Methuen doing at the Orange River bridge? It is stated that he has with him about 10,000 men, or the whole of an army division, but nobody seems to have any idea as to his intentions. So closely guarded is news of movements that it may even be that his division is now on the march. There are two theories regarding the plan to be followed by General Buller. One is that Methuen's division will make a forced march to the relief of Kimberley, and another that he will make a dash over the border and appear at Bloemfontein, the capital of the Orange Free State, and surprise it before the commandos engaged at Kimberley, Mafeking and other places along the border can assemble for the defence of their capital. This would be a splendid stroke for inspiring confidence in the hesitating Cape Dutchmen and would be a blow at the morale of the Boer forces, striking misgivings into the minds of the Free State burghers. If the garrisons of Kimberley and Mafeking are strong enough to hold out while this move is being accomplished, of which General Buller is doubtless aware, there is every reason to think that this course will be followed. After all it would be a good means of relieving both the beleaguered towns, seeing that the Boers would be compelled to fall back from them to protect their capital and rear.

The information that Ladysmith is well provided with ammunition sets at rest all those croakings as to the inability of the naval guns to reply continuously to the Boer artillery, which has been so common of late. As was stated in this despatch yesterday, the move upon Estcourt has relieved the tension at Ladysmith by sharing it with the former place, so that General White's chances are better than ever and those of the Boers approaching low ebb.

MORE BATTLES REPORTED

London, Nov. 21.—Latest direct news from Ladysmith, dated Thursday, Nov. 16, and Friday, Nov. 17, strangely cnoflicts with the reiterated reports of "tremendous battle and great British victories" Wednesday and Thursday. Neither of the two messages referred to mention any great engagements or Boer defeats. On the contrary, both distinctly state that beyond a false alarm on Tuesday evening and a little increased shelling Thurdaay and Friday, causing little damage, everything was perfectly quiet and the garrison was chafing under its enforced inactivity.

Nevertheless the special despatches from Estcourt to-day enlarge on the reported battles and insist that the Boers received a more terrible lesson Wednesday than in any previous fight. According to these circumstantial accounts the Boers determined to attempt to reach the north end of Ladysmith with a large force but were unable to make headway against the well sustained fire of the British riflemen and Maxims. Later a British force worked around the Boer flank, causing the latter to withdraw under a deadly fusilade with exceedingly heavy losses. Large numbers of dead are said to have been counted on the field, many were wounded and a number of prisoners captured. The British losses are reported to have been trival.

Of course reliable despatches corroborative of the above may have been censored or captured with the native runners. But these tales are so flattering to the British that they have a distinct flavor of being belated accounts from Kaffir sources of affairs previously reported.

Plenty of Ammunition.

The despatches from Ladysmith reporting that there is an ample supiy of ammunition there have seemingly set at rest a point on which there was much diversity of opinion.

Apparently the British commander at Ladysmith believes General Joubert has gone south, leaving only a force sufficient to prevent the garrison from sallying out, and there is a disposition in some quarters to think General Joubert possibly initiated the story with the object of inducing General White to make a serious attack or relax his precautions so as to permit the Boers to seize ground vital to the defense of the town.

A report from Durban, however, says there are rumors there that the Boers are preparing to break camp and withdraw from the investment of Ladysmith.

But it is said elsewhere that the investing force continues to receive reinforcements and fresh supplies of stores daily.

In view of the publicity allowed by the military authorities to be given to the alleged intention of the British to advance via Belmont to relieve Kimberley, it is said that it may be regarded as probable that an advance from De Aar will really be effected and that the route will not be so well advertised.

RAILWAY WORK IN NATAL.

London, Nov. 21.—A representative of Reuter's Agency called yesterday upon Sir Walter Peace, Agent-General for the Colony of Natal, to inquire what facilities there were at the disposal of the military authorities for the landing of stores and troops in Natal, and for forwarding them to the front, some doubt having been expressed as to Natal's capabilities to deal with the emergency. Sir Walter Peace, in reply, stated that there need be no anxiety on that score, as at the present time there was an average depth of twenty feet at low water in the entrance channel to the inner bay, and many of the transports which arrived from India and elsewhere were enabled to go straight to the wharf and discharge all the troops and stores as easily as they could in a London dock. This condition was likely to continue owing to the great improvements which had been mae to the harbor and there was now nearly a mile of wharfage at which vessels could discharge direct from steamer to railway track. Sir Walter proceeded to say that early in August he went to Glasgow, and impressed upon Messrs. Dubs & Co., in view of the threatening aspect of affairs in South Africa, the necessity of their giving precedence to the construction of a number of locomotives which they had on order for the Natal Government over other work, Consequently, he had been enabled to ship one of an enlarged type of locomotive by the mail steamer Norman on September 23. This had already been delivered in Natal, and three others are now being delivered there by the Clan Chisholm." Ten more would be despatched during the next six weeks, and another ten early next year.

Iron Bridge Work.

For the last three months he, Sir Walter, had been shipping a large quantity of iron bridge work in spans ranging from 100 feet long down to the smallest size used on the permanent way. He had shipped during the same period scores of railway carriages and wagons, each of the latter being built to carry 29 tons of goods, and further shipments were going forward every week. Further, he was just beginning to ship 4,000 tons of steel rails of the heavy type used on the Natal main line, which was a chair road, with rails weighing 78 pounds to the yard. Sleepers for this permanent way were now in course of shipment from Western Australia. There must have been some splendid work done by the port and railway authorities in Natal in landing the troops, horses, and stores which recently arrived there, and especially in landing the big guns and forwarding them with the Natal bridge in time to help Sir George White last week. When the last mail left Durban on October 18 there were 75 of the larger locomotives under steam, besides all the smaller engines on local lines, and the military authorities were being supplied with eight to ten special trains daily from Durban to the front.

The evacuation of Dundee had entailed the stoppage of the coal supplies thence, but he, the Agent-General, had, fortunately, been able to purchase cargoes of coal, which were on their way out to St. Vincent for orders. Thus a plentiful supply had been secured to replenish the existing stock in the colony when required. A number of carriages with lavatory accommodation had been fitted up to form a hospital train for the conveyance of the wounded. It would thus be seen that Natal was doing her part well.

BULLET-MAKING STOPPED.

London, Nov. 21.—The breaking of a main shaft in a crowded workshop at Woolwich arsenal stopped the manufacture of small-arm ammunition for South Africa, and temporarily threw 300 men and boys out of employment, The breakage is said to have been caused by extra strain thrown on the machinery in the Royal Laboratory, the demand for ammunition having increased the output by 1,000,000 rounds a week.

The employes rushed from the building when the shaft snapped, thirty lads who had been working directly beneath it being saved by intervening steel brackets, which caught the falling metal. The heavy revolving driving belts, thus released, would have killed anyone near them, while bullets flew all over the shop, injuring several machines run by smaller shafts before the engine could be stopped. Two days were required to make good the damage.

NATIVES PROVE TRAITORS.

Cape Town, Nov. 21.—A native from Herschel, Cape Colony, reports that the Boers left the camp at Aliwal North in temporary charge of native followers who bolted taking with them a number of horses and rifles.

A Queenstown, Cape Colony, despatch dated Friday, November 17, says communication is constantly interrupted by Boer incursions, but is restored as soon as interrupted.

TO INFLUENCE THE POPE.

New York, Nov. 21.—The correspondent of the Berlin Tageblatt in Rome learns on good authority in Vatican circles that an influential group tried to influence the Pope against the British policy in South Africa. The Herald's European edition makes this announcement and adds; "The Pope declines to follow their counsel because England has never given the Church any ground for complaint and because an anti-British policy would check the movement in England in favor of good relations with the vaticans and affect a number of conversions to Catholicism."

MORE TROOPS TO ARRIVE.

London, Nov. 21.—The transport City of Cambridge, with the Second Battalion of the Scottish Rifles, 1010 men, arrived at Durban to-day.

GENERAL GALACR'S ADVICE.

Cape Town, Nov. 20.—General Galacre, commanding the British column assembling at Queenstown, Cape Colony, told the troops there to-day that the regulars should watch and learn from the irregulars, who were acquainted with the country and the habits of the Boers. Once the forward movement should be begun there could be no question of stopping it, and he asked all to do their best, adding;

"I wil never ask you to do anything I am not willing to do myself."

Reports from the northern portion of the colony are more reassuring, but there is distinct danger of the Dutch actively espousing the cause of the Boers, who now effectually bar three lines of entry into the Free State. Most of the students of the Burghersdorp Theological Seminary joined the invaders after the latter occupied the town.

Proclamations issued at Bloemfontein Tuesday, Nov. 14, declare that the whole of Griqualand West, except Kimberley and Mafeking, are annexed to the Free State. The proclamations are signed by C. H. Wessels, President of the Volksraad.

BOER COMMANDANT KILLED.

Durban, Nov. 20.—Seven hundred Boers took up a strong position on the highlands thirteen miles south of Estcourt on Sunday, occupying Turner's farm, northeast of the Mooi river, Major Thorneycroft, with a detachment of mounted infantry and the Estcourt Carbineers, engaged the Boers, of whom three were killed, including their commandant. The Boers withdrew, taking two hundred head of cattle captured at Turner's farm. The main Boer force south of Estcourt is reported to have retired.

A FEW HARMLESS SHELLS.

London Nov. 21—5 a. m.—The reports of heavy fighting at Ladysmith last Wednesday have not been confirmed. On the contrary, the most reliable advices from Estcourt indicate that there was nothing more than a desultory cannonade. Probably the rumor of a serious engagement grew out of the fact that the Boers threw a few harmless shells last Tuesday night, leading to the supposition that an attack was imminent. Nothing, however, happened on Wednesday.

Beyond the fact that the Boers are daily receiving fresh reinforcements and supplies there is practically nothing new from the front.

The Boer invasion of Cape Colony continues steadily and rapidly. There are [illegible] Boers at Colesburg, and news has reached East London that Lady Grey, near Aliwal North, has been deserted by the British and is now in the hands of the enemy.

A Pretoria despatch announces the arrival there among the British prisoners of Major Haldane, Lieut. Brockie and Lt. Halloway.

The War Office semi-officially asserts that all news received from Africa has been published with the exception of demands for the renewal of stores, war material and the like. There is an unconfirmed rumor that more troops have been ordered from India to the Cape.

Ten Ships Ashore.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 20.—According to reports brought in to day, ten ships are ashore in the Straits of Magellan. The steamship Kurdistan reported six and the Heedless reported four. Owing to the heavy weather and the treacherous formation of the coast line, neither vessel dare approach, and the names of the wrecked steamships or fate of the crews could not be learned. The wrecks stretched for several miles. The crews of the wrecked vessels may have been devoured by cannibals. The Kurdistan was disabled in the Straits once, and the crew were obligated to give battle to the man-eaters.

The 20 year old daughter of Mr. Wm. Farmer, of London, committed suicide by taking poison after a quarrel with her father.

The County Crown Attorney has advised an inquest on the body of Pet er Patterson, killed in the London, Ont., Packing Company's establishment.

A large meeting of Ottawa gentlemen of both political parties has decided to banquet Hon. F. R. Latchford on the evening of Tuesday, Dec. 12.

Deputy Game Wardens and hunters from Muskoka and Parry Sound district report that most of the deer secured this year were shot in the water. They also report open violation of the close season fishing laws on Moon River.

Motorman Freeman Talbot has been arrested at London on a charge of having caused grievous bodily harm to Colonel Leys. Talbot was in charge of a car which collided with the buggy in which Colonel Leys and Mr. W. H. Chittick were sitting.

QUEBEC ITEMS.

The trial of Mr. William Weir, charged with furnishing the Government with a false statement of the affairs of La Banque Ville Marie, has commenced in Montreal.

The Elder-Dempster & Company's steam ship Merrimac is still unheard of, and the anxiety for the safety of the crew, ship and cargo is daily growing more acute

DOWN BY THE SEA.

Liberals of Pictou county will banquet Hon. W. S. Fielding at New Glasgow on November 28.

Trinity church, at St. John, N. B., was entered by safe-crackers, who blew open the safe in the vestry and stole $45. They also did a lot of damage to the church property.

OVER THE BORDER.

An unknown man threw himself into the Niagara river at Niagara Falls, N Y., on Monday and went over the cataract.

At Joplin, Mo., Miss Laura Heifley, a pretty young woman of 19, was arrested and placed in gaol, charged with stealing a team of horses from Southwest City in Missouri.

At Topeka, Kansas, Elizabeth Hagerman, 79 years of age, has been granted a divorce from her husband, 81 years old. In her petition Mrs. Hagerman declared it was impossible for her to live happily with her husband, because he chews tobacco.

Francois Bock, of Providence, R. I., a jeweler; John Trehon, and Stewart George Taylor, of the Cunarder, Etruria, have been arrested by New York officials on a charge of smuggling pearls. Fifty boxes of pearls were taken from the baggage of Bock, who came over on the steamship. The seizure is valued at $50,000.

RUGBY CHAMPIONSHIP.

A Splendid Game Will be Seen Next Saturday in Peterborough

The finest game of football ever played in Peterborough will doubtless be seen next Saturday when the local teams meets the Westmounts of Montreal in the struggle for the Intermediate championship of Canada. The town team has made a splendid record this year, having won every game except that against the Irishmen and carrying off the championship of Ontario. In the games against the veteran teams of Ottawa and Hamilton the boys showed the possession the highest degree of pluck and stamina and their victories have made the town known for football all over the country. When it is considered that this is the first year they have had a team in the league their record is one to be specially proud of and the boys are deserving of all the support and assistance that the citizens can give.

The Westmount team has also had a fine record this year. After defeating all the teams in Montreal in their series they were drawn against the Quebec City men and after a desperate struggle won the game and thereby the championship of Quebec by one point. They are a fine lot of young fellows and will give our boys the very hardest kind of a game.

The final match for the championship of Canada was to have been played in Toronto last Saturday but the Westmount boys were unable to stand the very heavy expense of such a trip This gave the Peterborough team the championship by default but the boys preferred to win it by playing and offered the Montreal men another chance by playing in Peterborough next Saturday and are giving the whole of the gate receipts to help defray the travelling expenses of the visitors. This most sportsmanlike conduct of the local men deserves to be highly commended and the sport-loving people of the town should contribute handsomely to pay the large expense to which the town team will be put. The boys have been under heavy expense all season and the rainy weather on the days of their matches has cut down the receipts. It is not often that a local club reaches so high a position in any sport and as the game will be a particularly good one there will doubtless be a large turnout of spectators.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 14, 1899

A MYSTERY OF DELAGOA BAY.

Again a British war ship in Delagoa Bay, the Portuguese anchorage in East Africa, containing the best harbor in all the continent—has fired a shot across the bows of an interloping vessel. The other day it proved to be a British ship which received the more or less gentle reminder because she did "hold up her head and look pleasant," as requested. This time it is a Frenchman. A "Little" Englander at 'ome is heard expostulating very strongly against "suchconduct as those." He wants to know on what principle of international obligation England is doing what he emphatically terms "police duty" in the territory of a foreign power, and thinks it isn't right. He is the same excitable genius, however, who wrung his hands in blank amazement and despair that time the Premier left for Cimiez while a German fleet was spinning up the coast of China to take over some new property. Whatever is be about? Here are great doings, and England without a Premier! Of course all matters had been arranged long before and Lord Salisbury knew exactly what would happen in given places at given times.

What will happen in regard to Delagoa Bay, is in all likelihood as follows—By an arrangement last year between England, Germany and Portugal, all the Portuguese possessions in Africa will at such time as the Portuguese Government may choose to part with them, if not sooner, be partitioned between the two former Powers. So long as peace prevailed there was no reason why England should hurry matters in respect to Delagoa Bay. Let the fruit fall when it should ripen, which would be when the Portuguese Treasury was empty in the presence of too clamorous creditors. But peace has not prevailed. It is a war condition that England has to confront in South Africa, bordering upon the Portuguese possessions on the East coast. The port of Lorenzo Marquez, the good harbor above referred to, is the terminus of the railroad to Pretoria, the Transvaal capital. Is the little Englander such a numbskull as not, reasoning from the known to the unknown, to divine, ratiocinate concerning, and evolve the meaning of the shots sent across the bows of passing ships which neglect or refuse to heave to in Delagoa Bay in presence of the British ships of war. It means that England is there and in virtual, if not actual possession, of that position of vantage. The port warden acting in the name of Portugal is virtually if not in reality a British official. Should it be determined to send a brigade, a division, or an army corps into the heart of the Transvaal itself, in pursuance of military necessity or etiquette, the way is here open. If Natal can be defended, the Boers driven back, and the war ended so as to avoid sending soldiers into a farming country where the people are so filled with mistrust and jealousy of one another not to mention foreigners, that they live apart and are only seven to the square mile, that will be well. But whatever happens in the British Provinces to the southward, there is always this menace to be held over the Boers head, that of his country being struck not through Laing's Nek, Nicholson's Nek, or across the mountains, but right immediately in its geographical midriff, by rapid movement of soldiers and marines, and the quick-firing and accurate guns which are not only available from the Powerful, as at Durban, but from every one of the war ships now doing "police duty" in Delagoa Bay. Without any disparagement of the ability of Gen. Sir George White to hold at Ladysmith under the strongest Boer assault, it may be possible that the Boers are hesitating as to whether it would be profitable to find themselves in possession of Pietermaritzburg, even if they could attain it, with the certainty that Pretoria, their own capital, would be either in ruins or in the hands of the English by so easy a side stroke.

Douro Council Meeting.

Council met pursuant to adjournment. Members all present. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

Moved by Mr. Maloney, seconded by Mr. Condon—That John M. Walsh be allowed to erect a wire fence along the southern boundary of his lot, No. 6, concession 7; the fence to be either of Page or Braid wire, cost not to exceed 60 cents per rod, Council to pay one half the cost.

Moved by Mr. Maloney, and seconded by Mr Jory—That James Condon be appointed a commissioner to expend the sum of $6 in repairing line of road between cons 7 and 8 in front of lots 11, also to procure 200 feet of cedar plank for culvert between cons 4 and 5, in front of lots 6.

Moved by Mr. Jorey and seconded by Mr. Quinn—That Thos. E. Jory be a commissioner to build a culvert on line of road between cons 5 and 6 opposite lots 20, cost not to exceed $4.

By-laws passed—By-Law No. 549, fixing upon the place at which the nomination and election shall be held for the year 1900, and appointing D. R. officers. For Polling Subdivision No. 1 at the Pine Grove Cheese Factory, G. J. Galvin, D. R. officer. In Polling Subdivision No. 2, at John Topey's house, William Condon D. R. officer. In Polling Dis., No. 3, at the Town Hall, Thos. O'Brien, D. R. officer. In No. 4 at Thomas Tobin's house, Stewart Brown, D. R. officer.

The Reeve and Councillor Condon were in favor of appointing R. H. Little D. R. officer in No. 1. In favor of Mr. Galvin, Maloney, Jory and Quinn.

On motion the Reeve and Clerk were appointed to assist the Treasurer in preparing his financial statement for the current year.

Charity—Roack Waz, $5; Mrs. Norah McMahon and Mrs. Ellen Leahy $3 each.

Orders on Treasurer—Repairing roads, portion of Board of Health expenses and salaries, sessional allowances, commissions, Salaries & Auditors Act, $295.50.

Council adjourned to Dec. 15 next, then to meet at 10 o'clock a.m.

THE SOLDIERS OF THE QUEEN.

Britons once did loyally declaim
About the way we ruled the waves—
Ev'ry Briton's song was just the same,
When singing of our soldier briaves.
All the world heard it, wondered why we sang,
And some have learned the reason why;
But we're forgetting it, and we're letting it
Fade away and gradually die.
So when we say that England's master,
Remember who has made her so—

Refrain.

It's the Soldiers of the Queen, my lads,
Who've been, my lads—who're seen, my lads,
In the fight for England's glory, lads,
When we've had to show them what we mean.
And when we say we've always won,
And when they ask us how it's done,
We'll proudly point to every one
Of England's Soldiers of the Queen.

War clouds gather over ev'ry land,
Our flag is threatened east and west;
Nations that we've shaken by the hand
Our bold resources try to test.
They thought they found us sleeping—thought us unprepared,
Because we have our party wars;
But Englishmen unite when they're called to fight
The battle for Old England's common cause.
So when we say that England's master,
Remember who has made her so—
Refrain—Soldiers of the Queen &c.

Now we're roused we've buckled on our swords,
We've done with diplomatic lingo;
We'll do deeds to follow on our words,
We'll show we've something more than "jingo."
And though Old England's laws do not her sons compel
To military duties do,
We'll play them at their game—and show them all the same,
An Englishman can be a soldier too.
So when we say that England's master,
Remember who has made her so—
Refrain—Soldiers of the Queen, &c.

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis [illegible] Treas., after securing the Jim. Hill claim ajoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. H. Stowell reports on this cropping $16 50 in gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Tom. Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorized me to place a small amount of this stock at 3½cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Hill are less than 800 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.00 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3½ cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

SIGHT TO ONE BORN BLIND.

The Surprise of a Woman Who Was First Able to See at the Age of 29.

A few days ago Miss Alberta McKinnie looked out of the windows of the "suggestion room" at the Eye and Ear Infirmary and burst into tears. Other patients have looked from the windows of the infirmary and shed tears caused by suffering. But Miss McKinnie wept for pure joy, and she praised God and Dr. Holt alternatively. Small wonder that she did, for upon her has been wrought a truly modern miracle. Blind since birth, the achievements of modern science have given the sight that for twenty-nine years have been denied her.

Miss McKinnie belongs in Rockland, and she was born blind. Over each eye a congenital cataract obscured the vision. She lived with relatives who clothed and fed her. One day a stranger saw Miss McKinnie and looked at her eyes. He told her that he believed if she would go to the Eye and Ear Infirmary an operation might be performed that would enable her to see. The neighbors scoffed. It was ridiculous. But hope found lodgement in Miss McKinnie's breast, and her one thought was to come to Portalnd. The Rev. Mr. Woodman of Rockland interested himself in her, and she was sent here for treatment.

It is a delicate and peculiar operation that Dr. Holt performed upon Miss McKinnie when he removed two congenial cataracts. It is an operation that is usually unsatisfactory. A white substance, which was about the color of milk and the consistency of butter, was spread over each pupil. It could not be removed by cutting away like a hard substance. Instead it had to be stirred up, so to speak, and then the doctor trusted in a great measure to remove it.

For fourteen weeks the patient has been at the infirmary. The operation has been performed by easy stages for the purpose of watching and studying each change. Little by little the milky cataracts disappeared until now but a small white speck remains on each eye, and it is thought that these will disappear in time. In all probability another slight operation will be performed to correct a slight crossed effect that appears in the restored organs.

When the final operation was performed the eye was bandaged and carefully kept from the light for several days. When they were strong enough to be fitted with glasses it was a difficult task to find just the kind she needed, but it was finally accomplished. Dr. Little placed them on Miss McKinnie and led her to the window for the first time.

It was almost like being born into a new world for Miss McKinnie. Of course a good many things she had a general idea of through hearing people talk about them.

Direct opposite the infirmary a man was walking about on the flat roof of a house. It was the first object her eyes rested upon. "What is it?" asked Dr. Little. "It must be a man," she answered. So on, one by one, different objects were pointed out and she was asked to tell what they were. A man with a pail went by. She said she though that it must be a pail because she had felt of one while she was blind. Just then a dog went by in the street. She stared in astonishment, and then cried aloud—"Oh, is that a dog? I never imagined it looked like that." Trees were a mystery to her. Their spreading limbs and autumn-tinted foliage held her spellbound. She had never seen colors before. Electric cars were a wonderful thing as was the electric light. She could not understand the power that was back of them.

When asked what her feelings were when she first found out that she could see she replied—"Well, I don't know as I can tell you. My eyes seemed to be swimming in water and I thought I was looking at a lake. This mist slowly cleared away, and then I saw the face of Dr. Holt. Oh, it was the first face I had ever seen, and he is the best man in the world! I shall bless him until my dying day."

When asked if she had been out, she said—

"Oh, yes, several times. I can't describe to you my sensations. I have seen so much that is beautiful and I have so much more to see. I am learning to read now and have got so I can pick quite a good deal out of a newspaper. I have read some by means of the raised letters provided for blind folks, so it hasn't been so hard to learn the letters in print. If I could stay here forever I would be perfectly happy."

While similar operations have been performed, it is seldom that they result so successfully as this one. To give an idea of just what her sight now is, it may be said that ten-tenths represents the normal or perfect vision. Miss McKinnie can see four-tenths. With the glasses that have been fitted to her eyes she will be able to see better than many persons who have such affections as near-sightedness, &c. She will be able to read, and even now she says she can almost thread a needle. Her eyes are new to her, so to speak, and as soon as she gets used to them she will use them much better. One peculiar thing that can be noticed about Miss McKinnie is the change of the expression of her face. It is well known that blind people have expressionless faces as a rule, particularly those blind from birth. It was so in Miss McKinnie case. Why should it be otherwise? What could she know of the beauties or humors that produce the various expressions in the faces of those of us who can see? She did not know what it was to laugh, but she does now, and so, little by little, each new thing that she sees produces some new emotion that causes the hitherto impassive countenance to light up with all the emotions of other mortals.

QUEEN GOES TO ITALY.

Her Majesty Will Not Sojourn in Unfriendly France

New York, Nov. 20.—The London correspondent of the Herald says—The Queen is going to Italy for her holidays. Thereby hangs quite a large political question. Her Majesty is kept very accurately informed about every item concerning the war. She is a diligent reader of the papers, and has had her attention drawn to the persistent anti-English attitude of France and the French press.

It is an open secret that England had made every preparation for war at the time of the Fashoda incident. The country was wound up. Sir Edward Monson made his famous speech. England's challenge was not hen accepted, but to-day, when France imagines that England is in difficulties, she encourages the Boers, and thus in some slight measure prolongs the resistance.

This England willne ver forget. The general opinion here is that France is sowing the seeds of a future war with this country.

The Queen, who all her life has studied English popular sentiment, sees now that a stay in France is impossible. So Italy is chosen. She rents an entire hotel for next August at Bordighera, abandons unfriendly France and takes up her residence in friendly Italy. It is a small thing, apparently, but English feeling is shown by the approving wy in which her choice has been received.

The feeling of England towards France is just as strained as that of America was towards Germany furing the Phillipine blocade. England is just as ready to hit out now as admiral Dewey was then Chicago, Nov. 20.—A Record special from Rome says—King Humbert and the Queen of Italy intend to personally welcome Queen Victoria when she arrives at Bordighera Springs. Her Majesty will on this occasion travel as Queen of England and not under the title Countess of Balmoral, as usual.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. A FATAL ACCIDENT.

A Scaffold Collapses and Two Men Fell 20 Feet

Toronto, Nov. 20.—At 11 o'clock this morning, a scaffold collapsed at the residence of Chester D. Massey, corner of Jarvis and Wellesley streets, where some buildings operations are in progress and two workmen, Timothy Martin, 37 Henderson avenue, and William Mason, 315 Wilton avenue, were precipitated, not only 20 feet to the level of the earth, but to the bottom of a 10-foot drain as well. Mr. Martin's head accidentally struck a plank, and he was instantly killed. Mr. Mason was severely shaken up, but his injuries are not very serious, and he was taken home.

The scaffold which fell was the work of the two men. They projected supports from some windows and placed horizontal planks thereon. They then trusted themselves to the affair with the above result.

Deceased was 60 years of age and leaves a widow and children.

Coroner Johnston has issued a warrant for an inquest.

Three Years on Dry Bread

London, Nov. 20.—The West Ham relieving officer was inquiring recently into one of the most pathetic stories of poverty ever known in the district. The case was that of a Mr. and Mrs. Manning, an old couple, between the ages of seventy and eighty, living close to the Brickfields church, Stratford, and the Rev. Tom Warren at the guardians' meeting stated that he knew for a fact that the old couple for three years had lived on nothing but dry bread. With the little relief they got, after they had paid the rent, there was only 3 1-2d. a day to provide food for the two, and they had endured all this hardship rather than go into the workhouse. The board decided to grant the old couple 5s. per week.

E. A. SMITH, Capitalist, Lowell, Mass.

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment. This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

A new comedy called "Wheels Within Wheels" is expected to go the rounds.

Robert Drouet will play John Storm in "The Christian" with Miss Allen next season.

"Annie Rooney" is undergoing a revival in Paris to the temporary eclipsing of Dreyfus.

Richard Mansfield is reputed to have taken out a life insurance policy for $100,000 recently.

David Belasco has completed an original play which will be produced early in the season with a specially selected company.

An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth" will be the feature of Frederick Warde's repertory next season.

It is unofficially announced that Rudyard Kipling is to write the fairy play to be produced at the London Lyceum next season.

Some German statistician has discovered that stage dancing is conducive to longevity. Taglioni lived to be 80 and Fanny Elssler to be 74.

Rose Coghlan has been re-engaged for her original role of "Mlle. Fifi" for next season, the piece to open its tour in August in Chicago.

Emma Calve's much talked of monument represents her as Ophelia, and the sculptor has promised to exhibit it at the Paris exposition.

Minnie Seligman will appear in the vaudeville houses in a one act play called "Therese," which has been done in Europe by Sarah Bernhardt.

In a play called "Wine, Women and Song," recently produced at the Princess theater, London, two demimondaines, armed with butchers' knives, fight to the death in a beautiful setting profusely decorated with flowers.

George Bernard Shaw submitted his new play, "Cæsar and Cleopatra," to Richard Mansfield, but as Shaw had required a 54-year-old baldheaded Cæsar to make love to a 16-year-old Cleopatra the manuscript was returned.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

Proof Against Earthquake.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Chicago engineers are designing an earthquake-proof steel palace for the Crown Prince of Japan, which is to mark the advent of American steel construction in the Mikado's land, and the Imperial Government has appropriated $3,000,000 for its erection. Foundations are being laid with a view to rearing the frame work in February.

Remarkable Campaigning.

Manila, Nov. 20.—Only fragmentary reports reach Manila of the operations north, which, when the story shall be known, will be seen to have been the most remarkable campaigning of the Philippine war.

The Grand Central Block.

The question of what to do with the old Grand Central Hotel property is now under consideration by the managers of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Co., who recently purchased the property from Mr J S Beswell. The company are loath to turn it into stores, as there are upwards of 20 vacant in town at the present time, and they will not rent it for a hotel. The matter will be settled when Senator Cox next visits Peterborough, which will be next month.

DEATH OF SIR WM. DAWSON.

Ex-Principal of McGill Passed Away on Sunday

Montreal, Nov. 19.—Sir John William Dawson, for many years the revered principle of McGill University, died at his residence in this city at 12.30 this morning. He had been in poor physical health for several years and suffered several paralytic strokes, which incapacitated him physically, although he retained to the last his intellectual faculties. Sir William Dawson was a scientist and educationist of world-wide repute. His work in both spheres of labor will leave an influence probably greater than any other Canadian. He was born in Pictou, N. S., on October 13, 1820, and was educated at Edinburgh University, where he took the M. A. degree at the age of 22. Returning to Canada he was engaged in geological and other scientific work until 1850, when he was appointed Superintendent of Education for Nova Scotia. His appointment to the principalship of McGill University in 1855 marked the beginning of an epoch in Canada's intellectual development. The fortunes of McGill were then at a low ebb, and Principal Dawson had an extensive work before him. His influence, however, soon began to make itself felt, and the position of the university steadily improved, until the institution, at his retirement a few years ago, was recognized as having one of the most efficient scientific faculties in the world. There can be no doubt that this result was largely due to the vast energy and administrative ability of the principal.

For many years Sir William Dawson was one of the most prominent members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. He was elected president of that body in 1886. The American Association testified to its appreciation of his scientific labors by electing him to the presidency in 1882. He was also the author of several works of scientific interest, which have proved a very real contribution to the world's knowledge.

Nearly Proved Fatal.

Exeter, Ont., Nov. 20.—What might have proved a fatal accident occurred here Saturday evening. A boy named Flynne and a companion named Brentnal were out shooting with a rifle and while returning home the Bretnal boy told Flynne that he could not hit the fence. With that Flynne put the gun to his shoulder and pulled the trigger and the ball hit young Brentnal just under the cheek bone. It plowed its way through the boy's face, coming out on the other side of the nose. The doctor thinks Brentnal will recover.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

Mrs. Hornbill—I don't wonder, and me with this same old dress for the last two seasons!

Triple Alliance to Stand.

Berlin, Nov. 18.—The semi-official Cologne Gazette, in a leading editirial to-day says—Germany has long entertained friendly relations with Great Britain, and has considerably profited thereby. But these relations in no wise interfere with Germany's status with regard to the Triple Alliance, or with Russia or France.

Germany's policy has been to retain a free hand in every direction, and to strive for peace with honor throughout Europe. While Germany's interests will not suffer thereby, the Emperor's borthcoming journey to England is to be subservient to this purpose alone.

Appointment Cancelled.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—The War Office has refused to sanction the appointment of Major Dobell, son of Hon. R. R. Dobell, as a special service officer attached to the Canadian Contingent for South Aric. Major Dobell is with his regiment at Hong Kong.

Nothing is known here of the statement that the Battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment, now en route to South Africa, will not be sent to the front, and the militia authorities discredit it. Such a matter would rest with General Buller, and it is thought that no decision will be made till he has seen the men compriising the contingent.

Elections in Manitoba.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 20.—The election campaign is rather quiet to-day, but half a dozen meetings will be held to-night.

The letter of President Mellen, of the Northern Pacific, showing up Greenway's conduct, is the principal topic of conversation.

THE KAISER IS WELCOMED.

He Lands at Portsmouth and Receives Significant Greeting

Portsmouth, Eng. Nov. 20.—The German Imperial yacht Hohenzollern entered the harbor at 10.05 a.m., today, admist the salutes of the guns of the warships and forts.

The Emperor and Empress and their two sons landed at 10.30, and were welcomed by the Duke of Connaught, who wore the uniform of the German Hussar regiment of which he is honorary colonel, and by various court dignitaries.

Escorted by a British Squadron.

When the Hohenzollern loomed in sight, escorted by the German battleship Kaiser Friederich III., and a flotilla of eight British torpedo-boat destroyers, which met the German ships outside Spithead, the British Admiral's flagship and eight other warships, gaily bedecked manned yards, and fired a royal salute, which was returned by the Kaiser Friederrich III. Emperor William wore the uniform of a British admiral, and the two young Princes wore simple sailor-boy suits.

The Duke of Connaught, accompanied by Admiral Seymour, Gen. Sir Baker Russell, a number of gorgeously-attired court functionaries, and the members of the German Embassy, boarded the Hohenzollern, and warm greetings were exchanged with the Emperor, the Empress and the Princes. The jetty was crowded wth privileged spectators, and bunting and German and British flags were displayed everywhere. The bands played German and British national airs.

The Civic Welcome.

When the Royal special train drew up the Imperial party landed. The Empress was the recipient of a handsome boquet. The civiil authorities were then introduced to the Emperor, who later inspected the troops and sailors forming the guard of honor. Their Majesties and Royal Highnesses took the train for Windsor at 11.30 amid salutes from the warships, bands playing and cheers from the crowd.

The Imperal suite includes Count Von Eulenburg, Count Von Buelow, Gen. Von Plessen, Admiral Von Senderbibran, Gen. Von. Rsach, Count Von Gen. Von Schell, Lord Churchill, Lord-in-Waiting to the Queen, and the Dowager Lady Churchill.

DANCED THROUGH THE SKIES.

Away Down in Alabama the Meteors Were Visible.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 20.—Phenomena supposed to be part of the tricentenary meteoric disturbance were observed here last night. Ten meteors were seen, all of which were in the Nubulae form resembling comets. They first appeared as patches of light, and at times would glow a firey red and the fade away repeating this a number of times before they finally disappeared. During the lurid period the central body could be easily seen, the light radiating throughout the entire mass. These bodies appeared to be moving the agitation being easily distinguished with the naked eye. The entire zenith was overcast although outside the area the sky was clear.

Great crowds gathered at the street corners and many were appalled at the strange sight. A number of negroes resorted to prayer as a means of protection from the stars which they feared would reach the earth

ON THE TROLLEY.

The red is melting in the river,
  The red is dying in the sky,
The evening star begins to quiver,
  Belated birds go darting by—
Come, let us follow, follow, follow,
  And find how fine it is to fly.

By pine woods where when noon was sunny
  The air with spicy balsams flowed,
By gardens full of sweets and honey
  Where summer long the rose has glowed,
By weary wife and loitering lover,
  Come, flash along the river road.

The forest wall across the river
  Darkens within the curling tide,
The fragrant winds about us shiver,
  We rock, we race, we rush, we ride,
Thrilled with the sweep of airy motion
  And glad because the world is wide!

The night soars up the purple spaces,
  The whirling winds divide the deep,
Strange gleams are on familiar places,
  Swift lightnings underneath us leap,
As forward flying, flying, flying,
  Upon the thunderbolt we sweep!

Biggest in the World.

London, Nov. 20.—An egg of the Aepyornis maximus, an extinct bird known by Marco Polo as the rock, was sold yesterday at Mr. J. C. Stevens' auction rooms. The only place where such egs have been found is Madagascar, and the present specimen was discovered there. Although in capacity the egg is equal to six of those of the ostrich, the bird itself, the skeleton of which may be seen in the British Museum, was not phenomenally large, though very thick and heavy. Only some twenty specimens of the egg, which measures more than a foot in length, and nearly a yard in circumference, are known to be in existence, so that it is rarer than the egg of the great auk.

They Keep Moving.

The religion of a Bedouin tribe seems to be to "move onward." Having once begun the nomadic life, it becomes almost necessary for them to keep it up. In the first place, they don't want to settle down, and they wouldn't have any place to stop if they wanted to. Sometimes it becomes expedient that they make great haste in these long journeys. Wandering around over the plains are other tribes whose only occupation is "moving on." There is frequently enmity between two of these Arabian families, and should one pursue the other it behooves the pursued to hasten onward with all the speed their animals are capable of. Or it may be that the springs of water are so widely separated that hard travel is necessary to make the distance from one to the other in a day.

When either of these contingencies arises, they cook and eat while on the march. They don't eat much. Two or three dinners such as American boys and girls are used to every day and something extra for Sundays and company are supposed not to agree with Bedouin children's stomachs. When on the road, bread is their chief food. This is baked while riding. One woman will mix the coarse flour which is carried in a sack on the back of her camel, another will roll and shape the dough, which is brought to her in small quantities, and a third will make a fire in an earthen vessel and attend to the baking. Women or boys on foot run along from one cook to the other and carry the material, and when the feast is ready they distribute it among the various members of the tribe.

Proofs of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heerd so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

Kansas is a state of long obituaries and neglected graves.—Atchison Globe.

What between J. Sterling Morton's new party and Senator Thurston's poetry, the state of Nebraska has our profound sympathy.—Denver News.

New York has established a state college of forestry. One of its labors will be to replant the tracts denuded of pine and other valuable conifers. It set out a large area this spring and is rearing 3,000,000 seedling pines for future use.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

EUGENE FIELD AND TABOR.

How the Humorist Made Life a Burden For the Millionaire.

"Up to middle age the late Senator Tabor's life was one of great hardship," said a former resident of the Silver State, "and when he suddenly became fabulously rich he plunged into luxuries like a starving man wading into a banquet. One of his early freaks was the purchase of several magnificent lace nightrobes which cost $100 apiece and which he kept locked up in a safe during the day. Eugene Field was editor of the Denver Tribune at the time, and those lace nightrobes made him simply hysterical. He wrote column upon column about them, describing the garments in detail, with numerous diagrams depicting sections fore and aft. The diagrams were hideous affairs, which Field carved out himself with a penknife on the back of old wood type. He used to describe how Tabor would forget the combination of the safe and sit up shivering and naked, half the night trying to remember the right figures.

"Altogether he kept Denver in a roar for weeks and made Tabor so wild that one day he rushed into his office, snatched the unfortunate nightrobes out of their compartment and tore them to threads. 'There, now!' he exclaimed, wiping his forehead and kicking the tattered fragments into a corner. 'I hope that fool will be satisfied. I'll be hanged if I ain't going to get a gunny sack,' he continued, 'cut some holes in the end for my head and arms, and then sleep in it for the rest of my life!'

"When Tabor was appointed to the senate to fill an unexpired term of exactly 29 days, Field broke loose again and had all kinds of fun with the old man. He declared that Tabor opposed the tariff bill on the ground that it encouraged lawlessness in the west. 'I don't know this tariff bill,' he reported the senator as saying in a speech, 'but we have entirely too many of 'em out where I live. There's Wild Bill and Pecos Bill and Billy the Kid—all no good. If you let Tariff Bill have everything to do with the custom house he is liable to steal the Atlantic ocean.' Many of the honest frontier folk took these flights of fancy seriously, and drove Tabor nearly distracted by long letters of remonstrance, urging him to read up and get posted, so as not to disgrace the state.

"At the expiration of the senator's brief term he circulated an autograph album among his fellow members, and the incident tickled Field immensely. He gave what purported to be a copy of the 'sentiments' inscribed in the volume by the different statesmen—such things as 'When this you see, remember me, Roscoe Conkling,' and 'Sure as the moss grows 'round a stump you are my darling sugar lump—I mean chump—George F. Hoar,' and similar nonsense, all of which maddened his victim.

"I think 'Gene Field was the only man Tabor never forgave, for in spite of his gaunt, forbidding exterior, the miner magnate was as tender hearted as a girl. He was really full of sterling qualities, and in his proper sphere he would have been anything but grotesque. One thing is sure—if every fellow he helped in secret would have joined his funeral procession he would have gone to his grave like an emperor of old."

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally see served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Cultivate the young orchard thoroughly early in the season.

In selecting trees, take those with smooth, healthy looking bark.

Ground bone is good for small fruit plants, grapevines and bearing apple orchards.

The deeper the culture the larger the reserve of moisture for the roots in time of drought. To secure quick growth prepare the soil deeply.

I WANT YER MA DARLIN'.

When de banjo's a-strummin' and de darkies a-hummin', Den I want yer, ma honey, yes, I do!
I'm a thinkin' ob yer daily, Dress'd so sweet and also gayly, And my heart is forever true to you!
I'm a-thinkin' ob yer sadly, Co's I love yer mighty madly, And I don't know what to do!
So come back to please me, Don't try for to tease me, Co's I want yer, ma honey, yes, I do!

Refrain.

I want yer, ma honey, yes, I want yer mighty badly; I'm a longin' for yer daily, Co's I love yer mighty madly!
So come back to please me, Don't try for to tease me, Co's I want yer, ma honey, yes I want yer, want yer, want yer; Co's I want yer, ma honey, yes, I do!

When de stars am a-gleamin' And de birds am a-dreamin', Den I want yer, ma honey, yes, I do!
For I love yer ev'ry minute, And nobody else is in it, And my heart is forever true to you!
Den don't linger longer, Co's my love is growin' stronger, And I don't know what to do!
So come back, my lady, My love and my baby, Co's I want yer, ma honey, yes, I do!

I want yer, ma honey, yes, I want yer ev'ry minute, I'm a-thinkin' ob yer daily, And nobody else is in it!
So come back, my lady, My love and my baby, Co's I want yer, ma honey, yes, I want yer, want yer, want yer;
Cos I want 'yer, ma honey, yes, I do!

IN THE SHADOW OF THE PINES.

We wander'd in the shadow of the pines, my love and I, As the wind was blowing freshly from the sea;
But a sudden fitful darkness stolle a-cross the summer sky, And a shawor came between my love and me.
Some hasty words were spoken, and then almost unawares, Hasty answers to unthinking anger led.
And our heart-sick, bitter longing, and our weepings and our prayers Ne'er can make those false and cruel words unsaid.

Refrain.

Come back to me, sweet-heart, and love me as before,
Come back, back to me, sweet-heart, and leave me never more—
In life's dull pathway, The sun no longer shines,
Come love and meet me, In the shadow of the pines.

You took the ring I gave you, nor cast a glance at me, As you held the jewel'd trinklet in your hand;
And then you turn'd and toss'd it in the waters of the sea, Where the waves were splashing idly on the sand.
You went your way, un-heeding the tears I could not hide, You went your way and not a word was said.
But my stubborn heart was breaking, underneath its mask of pride, And the pine trees sobb'd in pity over head.
Refrain—Come back to me, sweet-heart.

I wake from bitter dreaming but to call aloud you name; I sleep again to dream of you once more;
And my stubborn pride has left me, I admit I was to blame; Forgive me dear and love as the before.
For the future is o'er shadowed with the darkness of despair, In the sky of life, love's sun no longer shines.
And I'd give the whole world gladly, once again to meet you there, Reunited in the shadow of the pines.
Refrain—Come back to me, sweet-heart.

"RORY DARLIN.'"

Oh! rise up, Rory darlin', for there's knockin' at the door!
We must leave the little cabin that we built in days of yore;
For the place is ours no longer, we must go, dear, you and I,
And who can tell us, Rory dear, where we to-night shall lie!
We must go, dear, we must go, dear, for they're knockin' at the door,
There's no room for us in Ireland, the place is ours no more!

There's a country that they tell of far away across the sea,
Where they say there's luck and fortune in store for you and me;
In store for you and me;
But the richest country, arlin', and the luckiest spot on earth
Can ne'er be like ould Ireland, the place that gave us birth!
We must go, dear, we must go, dear, there's a stranger at the door,
There's no room for us in Ireland, the land is ours no more!

But if there's no room over there, and forth again we're cast,
There's another country left us that will take us in at last;
'Tis up yonder, Rory darlin'! where the stars are shin' fair,
And there'll be no weary roamin' when we once are safe in there.
Let's be goin', Rory, darlin', let the world be as it will,
Our hearts are with ould Ireland and Heaven's above us still!

Now th etrusts have made a corner on broom-corn in the States. Anything evidently to raise some extra dust.

THE RETIRED BURGLAR.

Circumstances in Which He Left a House Empty-Handed.

"I stopped one night, on the way to the house I was going to," said the retired burglar, "at a little house on the road that I could clean out in a minute, and make whatever I got there just so much clean gain. This house stood close to the road, though this was in a country neighborhood, and it looked sort of unkept; I don't mean slack, or uncared for, but as though there wasn't anybody to keep it up as it ought to be; walks swept, and all that, but things badly more or less out of repair.

"When I got inside and saw how poor they really were, I must say it made me feel kind o' mean and ashamed to think I'd come in at all; and it didn't take me very long to wake up and come to myself and make up my mind that there wasn't anything there that I wanted, but then I thought I'd go upstairs and take a look around there. This wasn't with a view to carrying anything off; I think it was just the professional instinct that led me to inspect the premises, to look around, you know. I went on up the stairs, anyway—narrow stairs, with just the simplest sort of railing up the side. There was a light coming from somewhere, out onto the stairway, and when I got up high enough to see I could see where it came from through a door partly open in a room at the front of the house.

"When I got up to where I could look through the crack of that door inside the room, I saw in there, sitting in a chair, holding a candle in her hand, a woman, fast asleep. She'd come up from downstairs I don't know when, it might have been two hours before, but not longer, judging by the candle, completely tired out, and she'd set down in this chair for just a minute to rest herself and gone to sleep. Seeing her accounted easy for the looks of the place. Tidy—she must have it so; that was her nature. Lacking repairs—there wasn't any man about to make 'em; now, I remember there wasn't any man's hats or coats, or anything hanging up around downstairs, husband dead maybe, or gone somewhere, or something, anyhow, she was there alone, as far as the work was concerned—there was children, I saw there traps downstairs—and it was a tremendous task for her, more'n she could do, and often stacking up against it all day long and half the night, she'd creep up here finally to go to bed; and set down, to rest herself just a minute, and go right to sleep.

"She was sitting here to-night back in the chair, head dropped forward, and holding the candle on her lap. The candlestick was tipped a little, as she held it loosely, and so the candle leaned a little to one side and the grease had all run down on that side and made a bunch over the rim around the top of the socket, and there was a rat standing with his hind feet on the bottom of the candlestick and his fore feet up against that bunch, eating the tallow.

"Well, say, when I came to see that woman sitting there like that, it was easy for me to make up my mind, if I'd had any doubt about it before, which I hadn', and I just made noise enough to scare that rat away, and wake her up and then I skipped out.

A SERMON FOR MEN.

The man who earns his living with his brains cannot afford to neglect his body. The body is the furnace and boiler that furnishes steam to the brain. If the furnace is permitted to get clogged with clinkers, the boiler will make no steam, and the delicate machinery of the brain will slow down and come to a dead stop.

When a man finds that his ideas do not come as freely as they once did, he needn't worry about his mental machinery, but he had better look to his body. His stomach and intestines are clogged with the clinkers of indigestion. His blood is impure, and does not receive the proper elements to put vim and speed into the machinery of the brain. If he neglects this condition he will suffer from headaches, sleeplessness, loss of appetite, confusion of ideas, despondency and lack of energy. Eventually he will break down with nervous exhaustion or prostration. There is a remedy that will promptly put a man right under these conditions. It is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures indigestion, fills the blood with the vital elements of life, tones the nerves, and makes the brain bright, clear and active. It cures all nerve and brain troubles due to insufficient or improper nourishment. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is for sale by all good medicine dealers, and only an unscrupulous dealer will try to induce a customer to take some worthless remedy, alleged to be "just as good."

Mr. Ned Nelson, the celebrated Irish Comedian and Mimic, of 577 Royden Street, Camden, N. J., writes: "We fulfilled an engagement of twelve weeks and the constant traveling gave me a bad touch of that dreaded disease called dyspepsia. I had tried everything possible to cure it till last week while playing at B. F. Keeth's Bijou Theater, Philadelphia, in the Nelson Trio, a professional friend of mine advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I tried it, and, thank God, with good results."

Constipation is promptly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. All medicine dealers.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

General Buller will Fight.

The cold weather is here for us to fight: but Kidd the shoe man is here, to sell ladies 6 button overgaiters at 20c a pair; 10 button 50c. This will help you fight the cold at half price. Sale of boots and shoes to be continued during the week.

Barns Burned.

The barns and stables of Mr. John Lancashire, situated about six miles in Otonabee were destroyed by fire on Monday night. The barn contained the entire season's crop which, of course, was also destroyed. There was, we are informed, some insurance on the property.

FLEECE LINED SHIRTS AND DRAWERS.

Men's heavy fleece lined, winter weight, Shirts and Drawers, sizes 32 to 46 will be sold on Saturday only at the Port Hope Knitting Works for 39c. This is the greatest bargain of the season. Ask for trading stamps.

The Missing Uniforms

An article in our issue of Monday last does injustice to Col. Bell and the officers of the 57 Battalion. The articles of clothing which had been stolen, have nearly all been recovered, and steps have been taken to prevent any possibility of such a thing again occuring. Had the commanding officer acted as any ordinary man would have done under the circumstances there would doubtless have been a term of imprisonment meted out to the guilty ones. That this is not done is due to the extreme good nature of the commanding officer. Those who have still articles of clothing in their possession in the back country are requested to return the same at once.

COAL IS UP FOR GOOD.

The Railways Cannot Provide Cars to Distribute it.

There is likely to be a coal famine in Canada this season. Mr McClennan of the People's Coal Company, told the Times that it was impossible to secure cars in which to haul it. Not only this, but there has not been as much coal taken out of the mines as in other seasons.

According to Mr McClennan, Peterborough will be rather badly off. Nine thousand tons are required for local consumption, not half of which is in sight.

Bituminous coal also is not so plentiful. The cause is attributed by coal dealers to the prosperity which swept over both Canada and the United States and stirred up mills and factories which had been idle for years. In addition to this unprecedented era of prosperity found the railroads unprepared for it.

When a demand for an increase in the carrying capacity of the railroads came there was an insufficient number of cars in which to carry the coal. Freight rates were increased and price was forced upward. Besides the insufficient supply of cars, the railroads have not a sufficient number of sidings on which to load these cars.

The situation then, as it now appears is this: Although there may be a sufficient quantity of coal mined, both hard and soft, the present high prices will prevail just so long as the railroads are unable to cope with the problem of transporting it.

New Readers.

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The selections ar from the works of Mr John Imrie, Toronto, and are up to date. For sale at Times Bookstore.

A MORNING WEDDING.

Marriage of Mr. Nelson Graham and Miss Sarah Murphy at St. Peter's.

An interesting event took place yesterday morning at St. Peter's cathedral when Mr Nelson Graham, of the Canadian General Electric works, was united in matrimony with Miss Sarah Murphy, daughter of Mr Simon Murphy, of Lake street. The bride is a cousin of the Rev Father Murphy, of the Paulist Fathers, New York.

The ceremony was performed at eight o'clock by Rev Father Jos O'Sullivan. A number of the friends of the young people were present Miss Minnie O'Brien was bridesmaid and Mr Arthur Tait, of Toronto, attended the groom. Both bride and bridesmaid were very handsomely attired.

Mr and Mrs Graham left for a wedding trip to Toronto and western points carrying with them the hearty good wishes of many friends. The Times extends congratulations.

BACK FROM THE WAR.

Harry Stenson who was at Manilla Has Returned.

The Kootenanian, of Kalso, B. C., contains the following reference to Mr Harry Stenson, son of Mr J T Stenson of town:

That Kalso's citizens are enthusiastic in welcoming home war veterans, no matter what countries' flag they fought for, so long as it was not the one under whose protection we live, was well demonstrated last night when Harry Stenson returned from the far-away Philippine Islands.

Despite a disagreeable rain that was falling, a long time before the steamer International was due, hundreds of people of both sexes, representing all nations and conditions were at the wharf waiting to extend a hearty welcome to the young man who fought for the principle that civilized nations in this day and age should be in the ascendency.

On the arrival of the boat dynamite was exploded, anvils fired while the din of the fire-crackers added to the noisy demonstration. Mr Stenson was the guest of honour of the city and in the hands of his friends.

Harry Stenson left Kalso about two years ago. He enlisted in company A, First Washington, and has spent about one year in the Philippines. It is his intention to remain in Kaslo. He is a brother of Robert Stenson, for several years manager of Green Bros.' mercantile business.

BEFORE THE BEAK.

A Number of Small Cases at the Police Court.

The small boy is now having his innings. Yesterday John Blodgett and Fred Hunter were charged with having destroyed a fence, the property of J. J. Lundy, on hallowe'en. They were fined $2 each and $4 costs.

George Blodgett, a little fellow, was up for not going to school. His excuse was that he didn't like the teacher, but it would not go with the Magistrate and he we given another chance and cautioned.

John Miller, another youngster who is not fond of school, and had no excuse to offer for staying away, was also cautioned. He is required to bring a note from his teacher to the police station each day, to the effect that he has been at school.

Dan Cushion and Robert Chambers were fined $2 each for being drunk and disorderly yesterday afternoon.

PUT UP $100.

Four Women Put up $25 Each at the Police Court.

The police raided a house on Stewart street on Monday night, kept by a Mrs McDonald. The keeper and two inmates were arrested, and appeared before Magistrate Dumble yesterday. A Mrs Green, who figured on one or more previous occasions, in the Police Court, was also run in, charged with vagrancy.

The quartette were remanded until Monday, and were admitted to bail. They each put up $25 in cash as a guarantee that they will appear when called on. The town, we venture to predict, is $100 ahead.

Unfortunate Accident.

A runaway attended by painful consequences took place in Ashburnham yesterday. Mr Gibson, driver of Patterson's biscuit waggon, went into Mr W Collins' grocery leaving his horses standing in front of the door with his little son on the seat. The team took fright and ran up Elizabeth street to Brown and up Brown street to Douro street, where they collided with another waggon and the Gibson lad was thrown out and had his leg broken. The waggon was damaged somewhat but the horses were not hurt. Dr Brown attended to the boy's injury.

Well Done St. Joseph's.

On Sunday last St. Joseph's R. C church, Douro, gave the splendid offering of $325 towards the building fund of the House of Providence. His Lordship O'Connor, who is beloved by his parishoners everywhere, has undertaken the formidable task of providing the funds for the work, and the noble response made by the people of Douro to his Lordship's appeal, is certainly very gratifying to those who are in charge of this great and good work.

REPUBLIC MINES.

Republic, Washington, is proving to be the most phenomenal camp in the world. In two years has produced the Great Republic and Mountain Lion Mines considered the equals of the celebrated Le Roi at Rossland, B.C.

The Green Cheese claim is situated in the centre of the Republican camp. Engineer's report shows that there are three ledges running through the claim. Assays have been obtained as high as 162.50.

The Whitcher Dramatic Co

A very pretty drama was presented by the Whitcher Dramatic Company at the opera house last night, entitled "Rose Garland," and greeted with a fair audience. The production was very mirth-provoking at times and drew loud applause from those present. Little Gracie Whitcher as Rose Garland carried off high honors and appeared a prime favorite with the audience. The company is a strictly first class one, all the members doing credit to the roles assigned them. Particular mention may be made of W. H. Langdon, as Jethro Garland; J. N. Machan, as the artist, and Elsie Graham as Emma Watson. Baby Rossie in her pleasing specialty was deservedly applauded. The company give a good show and deserve the support of all theatre-goers. To-morrow the company will be further strengthened by the presence of Miss Handy, who has not appeared here before. "The Shadows of a Great City" will be presented to-night.

The special devotional services in St. Luke's church began yesterday morning with a celebration of the holy communion at nine o'clock, when there was a good attendance. Yesterday evening there was service in the church at 8 o'clock with an address by Rev. C. H. Shortt, of Toronto.

It would appear that the strategic aim of the Boers is Pietermaritzburg. If the aim is good as in other ways it is likely to hit it shortly.

LIKE POISON

Coffee Acts on Some People.

"Being forced to give up coffee, I did it in a half hearted way, drinking cocoa in the morning, but soon became tired of that and longed for the real Java.

"Finally I tried Postum Food Coffee, and since that time have drank it to the exclusion of every other beverage. You can imagine I like it.

"Last summer I was in a place where nothing but Java coffee was served on the breakfast table, and I re-commenced the use of it.

"In two or three weeks I began to suffer from dizziness and explosive noises in my head.

"One evening after walking about half a mile I became dizzy and could hardly get back home, where I fell exhausted on the bed. I knew what the trouble was, and insisted upon having Postum instead of the old fashioned coffee, and got well in short order.

"I have always thought it worth while to warn the cook, wherever I happen to be, to make the Postum properly, that is, by boiling it long enough. Please do not print my name."

This lady lives in Pasadena, Cal., and the name will be given on application to the Postum Co., at Battle Creek, Mich.

A MAMMOTH TRANSPORT

The Kildonan Castle Pours Out 3,000 Soldiers Upon the Shores of Africa.

GEN. BULLER HAS NOW SIXTY THOUSAND MEN.

Graphic Description of the Departure from England of the Minature Fortress Who Beats the Record of British Troopships in Carrying of Large Numbers.

London, Nov. 22.—The British transport Kildonan Castle, with 3,000 men, their kits, weapons, machine guns, ammunition, balloons, pontoon, wagons, etc., arrived at Cape Town this morning. Almost 45,000 of General Buller's army corps have now arrived, raising the force at his disposal to about 60,000 men. The transport Nubia with the first battalion of the Scots Guards, has sailed from Cape Town for Durban. The transport Carinthia arrived at Cape Town yesterday.

The London Daily Mail gives the following graphic account of the departure of the Kildonan—Three thousand officers and men, the largest body of troops which has ever embarked on any one boat, sailed on Saturday, November 4, from Southampton on board the Kildonan Castle, the greatest troopship which has ever put out from any port in the world.

It was a memorable sight, memorable not only because the scent was remarkable as a spectacle, but because the embarkation was the very essence of organization—a marvel of neatness and despatch scarcely to be believed. To begin with, it was the Kildonan Castle's maiden voyage, and yet the ship has a history worthy of record. She was only launched in August last, at Glasgow, and was not to have been handed over to the Castle line till February next. On October 3, however, she was requisitioned by the Government, and since that date in less than a month, in fact, she has been converted from a model passenger ship into a model troopship, a revolution brought about by 3,000 workmen, toiling night and day.

A Great Undertaking.

The undertaking below must have been like clearing a forest. The multitude of saloons, cabins, state rooms, and passages, each of them fitted with costly and multitudinous contrivances, intended for the comfort of passengers, have been swept away; and now the main deck is like a great unbroken plain. No fewer than 1,740 men found accommodation here alone, and yet each man had his own place and a place for his belongings. Over each man's mess seat was accommodation for his kit, the hammock in which he sleeps at night, yes, and a life-belt as well, should one be needed. Nearly 2,000 men in this one great place; yet plenty of air, plenty of light and plenty of elbow room; quarters such as the soldiers who sailed for Spain and Holland in the olden days could never have dreamed of.

Then there are cabins for the non-commissioned officers, and a well appointed hospital capable of holding eighty invalids. Elsewhere, and where they can have been stowed it is difficult to conceive, are tons and tons of stores and food. All day long the giant cranes creaked and rattled as they swung in such things as balloons, machine guns, ammunition, pontoons, stretchers, collapsible boats, surgical appliances, and, last, but not least, the famous goat of the Welsh Regiment, which was given them by the Queen.

A Miniature Fortress.

In fact, when everything was on board the vessel was like a miniature fortress, a species of floating Gibraltar. And what partly lent to the effect was the composite nature of the forces under the command of Colonel Munroe, of the Seaforth Highlanders. There were 90 officers and 2,342 all ranks, consisting of 29 officers, 827 men, 1st Welsh Regiment; 29 officers, 861 men, 2nd Northumberland Fusiliers; 64 men Black Watch; 5 officers, 40 men, 3rd Stationary Hospital; 21 officers, 143 men, a pontoon troop R. E., 3 officers, 27 men, 1st Balloon Section R. E., and details.

Trains began to arrive at an early hour and Colonel Stacpole, the embarkation expert, whom practice in his work seems to have made perfect, was there to receive them. Out they streamed, and, forming up in companies, arms and helmets were collected and stowed on board by every seventh man; the kit, however, was passed from hand to hand, while the men laughed and joked.

"That's the colonel," said a private to a Daily Mail representative, "and we'll go anywhere after him and Buller." "That's my company," said a young looking captain proudly. "Best chaps on earth. Could take 'em anywhere; besides, we shall be under Buller, you know."

That describes prettily accuratelyt he feeling of the troops. Some of them had seen service before, and all of them were hard and sturdy and bronzed. One sergeant had come from India to rejoin. He was chief steward to the admiral stationed at Bombay, but when he heard of the war he left his service, paid his own passage home, and rejoined his regiment.

Great Attention.

The departure of this troopship has aroused great attention abroad, and special representatives of the French, Norwegian, Japanese and Austrian Governments witnessed the emberkation and expressed their admiration to Sir Donald Currie, who personally superintended, and to Col. Stacpole.

M. Jules Huret, of Le Figaro, one of the most distinguished journalists of Paris who has come over to describe England undergoing a "eriais," was full of admiration and wonder. Chatting to the soldiers, he said—"Why is there no excitement? Why are your wives not weeping?" Indeed, there was no excitement till as darkness began to gather in, the "all ashore" bugle sounded, and the soldiers who had been temporarily confined below came streaming upon the deck.

A Mass of Scarlet.

They swarmed into the rigging and on to the deck structures till all three decks were a packed mass of brilliant scarlet and dull-colored kharki uniforms and brickdust colored faces. Then a cornet player on the quay started "Soldiers of the Queen," which everybody took up and sang. "A Little Bit off the Top," and "Rule Britannia," "Auld Lang Syne," all had their turn, to be followed by the regimental band on board with "The Girl I Left Behind Me."

And as the tug began to warp the Kildonion Castle out to sea the 1,500 troops on board the Briton, lying at her stern, the passengers on board the Pemoroke Castle lying at her head, and the spectators on the quay burst simultaneously into a deafening cheer of farewell, and the troops on the Kildonian Castle answered back with cheer on cheer—such cheers, perhaps, as M. Huret had never heard before.

Slowly the great boat steamed away, into the quickly falling night, and the last those on board her heard or saw of England was 10,000 people ont he quay singing "God Save the Queen" with bare heads.

And that is how the greatest troopship in the world sailed for the war.

ANOTHER ENOCH ARDEN.

But His Wife Had Got a Divorce Before Re-Marrying

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 22.—After an absence of thirty years, James Edwards, whose home is now in Denver, Col., returned to this city and discovered that his wife had been divorced from him and married to another man. Thirty-five years ago Edwards married Miss Belle Hickman, of this city, whose parents were wealthy. Edwards was in poor circumstances and the wife's mother opposed the marriage.

The couple lived together for five years, but at the end of that time Mrs. Hickman is alleged to have brought about a separation. Edwards went to New York, and stowing himself away on a sailing ship, succeeded in reaching San Francisco. From there he went into the interior and secured work in the mines. By practicing economy he accumulated some money, and eventually established himself in a lucrative business in Denver.

Edwards says he repeatedly wrote to his wife in this city, but never received an answer, and since his return has been informed that she failed to ge the letters. Not hearing from her husband for fifteen years, Mrs. Edwards advertised and received a letter from Denver informing her that a man answering her husband's description had been killed by a fall from his horse. Mrs. Edwards, not certain that her husband was dead, obtained a divorce and remarried.

Edwards succeeded in meeting his former wife upon his return here. There were explanations all around and he bade her farewell and went back to Denver.

CHARGE OF BLACKMAIL.

Story of People who Rushed to Invest Money With a Speculator.

New York, Nov. 22.—William F. Miller, manager of the "Franklin Syndicate," was arrested yesterday on an order granted by Justice Bookstaver in a civil suit for 350,000 damages for slander brought by the editor of a Wall street financial paper. From offices on Floyd street in Brooklyn, Miller has flooded the country with circulars promising investors ten per cent a month on their investments. As a result cash poured into Miller's office in astonishing proportions from all parts of the country. Rene Hillington, counsel for the prosecution is authority for the statement that Miller received $51,000 yesterday. "So great was the crush," said Mr. Billington, "that the stoop of the house on Floyd street was broken by the people anxious to invest their money with Miller. When I was there yesterday there was a string of people, mostly domestics and workingmen, extending almost to Marcy avenue."

For some time the financial paper has been attacking Miller's method, and warning cards were sent out advising people to give Miller a wide berth. Miller then charged the Wall street paper with blackmail and the suit resulted.

KILLED MOTHER AND CHILD.

A Savage Shooting Affray in an American City.

New York, Nov. 22.—The wife of James Baxter, of Camden, N.J., left him because she said he beat and tortured her, and took refuge with the family of Jerry Ryan. Ryan and Baxter are veterans of the Spanish war and they have been friends for years. Baxter went to Ryan's house last night and asked his wife to return to him. She refused even to speak to him, saying she was afraid he would kill her. Baxter thereupon drew a revolver and began shooting. Mrs. Ryan was struck by three bullets, one of which passed through her body and killed her child behind her. A fourth went wild and a fifth buried itself in Ryan's left arm. In a frenzy Ryan grabbed the murderer and knock-Ryan grabbed the murderer and knocked his head against the wall and the floor until he begged for his life. When he found his child was dead Ryan tried to kill Baxter, but was prevented. Mrs. Ryan will probably die Ryan's injuries is not serious. Baxter was arrated.

Was Stricken Blind.

New York, Nov. 22.—Richard R. Lippincott, a travelling salesman for a wholesale grocery house of Philadelphia, was suddently stricken with total blindness while on a train of the Central Railroad of New Jersey from Lakewood yesterday morning. He was led from the train at Freehold, N.J., where a physician, after an examination, could give no relief. He later was taken to Philadelphia for treatment by a specialist. While in apparently perfect health and without pain or inflamation of the eyes, Mr. Lippincott was suddently deprived of his sight. He was on a business trip for the firm of Krause, Ingram & Hiester, of Philadelphia, but had spent the last few days with friends at a hotel in Lakewood. He took the train at Lakewood yesterday, expecting to stop off at Freehold, where he was well known in business circles.

Big Fire at Tweed.

Tweed, Ont., Nov. 22.—About half-past six this morning fire broke out in Mr. R. T. Houston's sash factory here. The main building was completely destroyed, and the machinery is almost a total loss at from six to eight thousand dollars. There is no insurance.

Opposed to the Mormon.

Wheeling, W. Va., Nov. 22.—Almost the entire membership of the Wheeling Ministerial Association, representing 10,000 of the Christian people of the city of Wheeling, last nigh, waited on Congressman Dovener and protested against the seating of Bingham H Roberts, the Utah Congressman-elect.

Advance in Freight Rates.

New York, Nov. 22,—General traffic agents of the roads of the Trunk Line Association met yesterday and practically decided on an advance in freight rates. The agents were unanimous in saying that rates in the past few years have been such as to preclude all chance of profitable handling, and they saw no reason why the railroads should not share in the general prosperity of the country.

PLANS TO REPEL INVASION

Joubert is Evidently Trying to Occupy the Mountain Ridge South of Estcourt.

RAILWAY SOUTH OF ESTCOURT IS BLOCKED.

A British Train Sent Out From Pietermaritzburg Could Not Reach its Destination—Buller's Plan of Campaign to the Westward—Boer Force at Belmont.

London, Nov. 22.—General Buller's plans for the invasion of Boerland from the south and the incidental relief of Kimberley and Mafeking are being matured with a rapidity which must prove surprising to the aimlessly-acting and slow-moving burghers. The re-occupation of Naauwpoort Junction by the British again places them in a position of great strategic importance, which, if seized by the enemy when their opportunity came, might have proved a hard nut to crack, seeing that it lies in the mountainous country of the Kikvorstberg, peculiarly adapted to Boer methods of warfare. This movement is in all probability the precursor of similar ones for the reoccupation of Colesberg and Stormberg, where the Boers have also missed their opportunity. It indicates that the British simply retired in order to take a stronger leap, and that in a few days more the line of troops which faces the Orange River will be drawn still tighter, forcing back across their own border the bands of raiders who have entered the Queen's territory.

It is also probable that the reoccupation of Naauwpoort is a confirmation of the statement that General Buller still adheres to his original plan of campaign—the invasion of the Orange Free State in three columns—and that these columns are to operate from De Aar, Naauwpoort, and Stormberg, and advance respectively upon the bridges at Orange River, Norval's Pont, and Bethulie, or Aliwal North. In this case some bridge-building must be done, for it is understood, that, with the exception of the Orange River bridge, the Boers have destroyed, or will destroy, all methods of entering their country. At the present it looks as if Gen. Buller's plan of campaign, apart from the relief of Kimberley, will be as follows; An advance over the Orange River bridge into the Free State, which would draw the majority of the Boers along the river away from the bridges and fords which they hold, followed, after an interval, by the advance of the other two columns, which would, owing to the weakness of Boer opposition be able to build pontoon bridges, force the passage of the river and effect a junction with the main body at Bloemfontein.

The Campaign in Natal.

Meanwhile the Boers are pushing southward in Natal, evidently bent upon opposing any attempt to relieve Ladysmith. On Tuesday evening last they interrupted telegraphic communication between Estcourt and Pietermaritzburg by cutting the line near Highlands Station. News now comes that they have followed up the movement by blocking the railway line, repeating exactly the manoeuvres performed at Ladysmith. This will seriously hamper the advance under General Clery, unless the force at Estcourt is strong enough to clear the line and reopen telegraphic communication in preparation for the movement. The plan of the Boers is gradually becoming more apparent. South of Estcourt, at a distance of about five miles, is a range of hills such as the Boers love for their battle scenes. South of the range runs the Mooi River. Over the river and through the hills both the railroad and the highway from Pietermaritzburg must pass. It is clear, therefore, that the presence of the burghers to the south is accounted for by their intention to occupy positions on the river and the hills in order to repel the British forward movement. The scheme is a good one strategically, for the locality is one of great natural strength. Hard and prolonged fighting will undoubtedly be the order of the day so soon as the British column starts out.

Still the Boer plan has very weak points. Both at Ladysmith and Estcourt they will have strong bodies of enemies in their rear when General Clery takes the field, and are liable to fall between the devil and the deep sea at any moment. The scattering of their forces in order to hold such a wide field is a very palpably weak point in their armor. The statement that the main Boer army is marching southward upon Estcourt cannot be relied upon, for such a movement by General Joubert would free General White and enable him to operate most disadvantageously upon the rear of the burgher forces. It is probable that Joubert has divided his army.

The refusal of President Kruger to allow the American consul to represent Great Britain at Pretoria during the war is the Transvaal reply to President McKinley's refusal to permit the South African Republic to be represented in the United States by an American.

Reports from Mafeking show that the imminence of an invasion of the Free State by Buller's army has caused a certain portion of the Boer forces to be withdrawn from that quarter, so that Colonel Baden-Powell is now in no serious danger.

MOMENTOUS DEVELOPMENTS.

London, Nov. 22.—There has apparently been no communication with Estcourt, Natal, since nooon on Tuesday, and the Boers now control the railroad thence to the Mooi river. Consequently momentous developments may be expected at any time. The Boers are swarming southward. Large bodies of them are reported all around Estcourt and parties of Boers appear even to be threatening Pietermaritzburg. Those encamped at Highlands station are well supplied with artillery, and all evidence tends to show that the various Boer forces are being largely increased by accessions from the various disaffected Cape burghers. The serious deficiency in cavalry is being felt by the British, who are unable to keep in touch with the mobile Boer forces, whose presence is hardly reported before they are lost sight of, only to re-appear at another vital point along the line of communication. General Hildyard's force, anchored at Estcourt by the naval guns, can do little but await an attack until General Clery's column is capable of taking the field.

LORD METHUEN'S MARCH.

London, Nov. 22.—According to an unconfirmed Cape Town despatch Gen. Methuen's division after leaving Orange River had reached Witteputs, half way to Belmont yesterday, and advices from Orange River to-day show that the Boers occupy Belmont in force and that the neighboring hills are crowned with Boer cannon. A patrol of Lancers which has returned to Orange River came unexpectedly on two Boer Laagers. Three shrapnel shells burst close to the Lancers, who, however, were unharmed.

BOERS HOLD THE STATION.

Durban, Nov. 22.—A despatch from the Mooi river says the telegraph line was cut Tuesday evening near Highlands station. The despatch adds that the railroad station is in the possession of a large ofrce of Boers encamped near Mitcheson's cutting.

A train bound to Estcourt returned. It only got a mile and a half northward of the Highland station.

The Natal Stud Company's farm has been raided and 300 blooded horses valued at $75,000 have been captured.

WAR CORRESPONDENT FREED.

London, Nov. 22.—Other advices from Cape Town say that Mr. Collet, the correspondent of the London Daily Graphic, who was arrested by the Boers while conveying a message from Mr Schreiner, the Premier of Cape Colony to President Steyn, of the Orange Free State, and who was taken to Bloemfontein, has been released and sent back with President Steyn's reply. It is reported that Mr. Hofmeyer, the Afrikander leader, has taken an important step in the hope of hastening the close of the war. He is said to have charged Mr. Sauer, the Minister of Public Works, to get in touch with the Free State forces in an endeavor to arrange that the Boers shall apply for an armistic. The ostensible object of Mr. Sauer's trip is to induce his constituents at Aliwal North to remain passive.

AN ADVANCE FROM COLESBERG.

London, Nov. 22.—Boer requestioning of men and supplies proceeds briskly on the northern border of Cape Colony, but General Gatacre hopes soon to be in a position to push the Free Staters back within their own borders. The reoccupation of Naauwpoort by the British is the first step in this direction, but strong forces of Boers are laagered at Colesburg and threaten a further immediate advance from there.

THE EMBALMED BEEF STORY.

London, Nov. 22.—Various officials of the British Admiralty have been interviewed by representatives of the Associated Press regarding the London Daily Chronicle's bad beef assertions, and they say that they have not received a single complaint as to the quality of the food furnished on the transports. The chief of the victualling department said; "We bought in the United States salt beef and pork packed in casks commonly known as sea or salt horse, the same as served in all the navies of the world for years past. We have not so far heard a word against this form of food, and juding from the health of the men in the United States Navy during the war with Spain it must have agreed pretty well with them. We have yet to learn that the provisions purchased in the United States are not all as represented, and though investigating the allegations we have no reason to suppose we will discontinue purchasing in the United States when circumstances demand outside resources.

U. S. CONSUL CANNOT ACT.

London, Nov. 22.—President Kruger's refusal to allow United States Consul MacCrum to exercise the powers of British agent at Pretoria has resulted in great disappointment. There were many callers at the United States Embassy to-day, who were informed that the United States was no longer able to forward messages or secure information regarding the British prisoners. Though Mr. MacCrum apparently still retains the nominal agency of Great Britain, he is practically deprived of all powers pertaining to the position. It is understood that President Kruger objected to Mr. MacCrum representing Great Britain on the ground that the United States' claims to neutrality were prejudiced by her evident friendship for Great Britain. All communications to the British prisoners now go through the ordinary military channels, which render their ultimate delivery doubtful and certainly slow. The British Government so far has not taken any steps to ameliorate the present condition of the prisoners. A Government official informed a representative of the Associated Press that he did not see any good in trying to get any other power to act in this behalf, as President Kruger would doubtless treat its representative in the same manner that he has treated the representative of the United States. "Moreover," the official added, "it is not likely that President Kruger will be there long. If we did ask any other power to act in behalf of Great Britain it would possibly be Portugal."

BOERS DECREASE AT MAFEKING.

London, Nov. 22.—Late last evening the War Office made public two despatches from General Buller at Cape Town. The first had been received from General Clery, dated Monday, NNov. 20, and announced that three privates were wounded the previous day at Mooi River. The second was from Colonel Baden-Powel, dated at Mafeking, Nov. 6, saying—All well here. We have had a few successful sorties. Our loss is two officers and seventeen men killed and four officers and 20 men wounded. The enemy's loss is heavy. His numbers are decreasing, but his guns remain and shell us, keeping out of the range of our small guns. Have had no news from the outside since October 20."

SHE TWINED THE FLAGS.

Remarkable Patriotic Demonstration in a London Theatre.

New York, Nov. 22.—At the Empire Theatre in London last night there was a most remarkable patriotic American demonstration, says the Herald. Mrs. Brown-Potter had been engaged to recite a stirring composition in verse called "Ordered to the Front."

The house was packed and every inch of the standing room was occupied. The boxes and the stalls were filled with prominent people. Mrs. Brown-Potter appeared in white satin flowing robes, trimmed with sable, with a red rose in her hair and another over her heart. On each side stood a soldier in khaki uniform, one holding the English flag and the other the Stars and Stripes. This tableau was received with the most enthusiastic cheering.

Mrs. Brown-Potter, though extremely nervous before such an audience, went through the piece with fine effect. At the final words; "God Save the Queen," she broke down completely, however, while the whole house rose and sang; "God Save the Queen," over and over again.

Mrs. Brown-Potter was recalled, and when the curtain went up she grasped the two flags and twined them together, while the people sprang to their feet in another wildly enthusiastic demonstration of their regard for America and her friendship.

Trent Valley Canal

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Canal construction, which was carried on to quite a considerable extent last winter in pursuance of the policy of having the new 14-foot system of navigation ready for the season of 1899, will be practically at a standstill this winter. Such work as remains to be done on the enlargements between Prescott and Montreal is of a class that cannot be done during the winter season. It consists mainly of finishing up the several contracts. Some work will be done before spring, however, upon the Trent Valley canal, several sections of which are under contract. Tenders are to be called for within the next few days for the construction of another

Want Them to Emigrate.

Montreal, Nov. 22.—Mr Mills a Toronto lawyer, Rev Dr Griffith and L A Cannon, Q. C., deputy Attorney-General, left Rimouski yesterday morning on board the steamer Constance for Anticosti. They are going as representatives of the Federal Government to offer to the settlers of Fox Bay a track of land on the borders of Lake Winnipeg, in Manitoba and induce them to emigrate thither.

Rescued the Crew.

Baltimore, Nov. 22.—The Donaldson line steamship Lakonia arrived at this port to-day with the crew of the British steamship Manchester Enterprise, which foundered on November 15th, 480 miles south-east of Cape Race. The rescued number 53 of whom nine are cattlemen returning from Liverpool. The Manchester Enterprise sprang a leak during a severe gale on November 13.

Wonderful New Explosive.

New York, Nov. 22.—A new explosive called kidropirocita has been tested before the Technical Commission at Valparaiso, Chili, says The Herald. Experts say it has shown its superiority over all other explosives. The expansive power is twice at great as that of dynamite, and its use in shells is less dangerous. The explosion ignites in water as well as air.

Conditions of Peace.

Ortiz, Mexico, Nov. 22.—A delegation of Yaqui Indian squaws has arrived here on the way to Guayamas. They are the bearers of messages from the chiefs of tribes to President Diaz, which they expect to forward through the military officer in command at Guayamas. In this message the Indians offer to lay down their arms provided the condstions existing when the recent outbreak occurred are restored. This means that the land awarded to the Indians under the original treaty of peace be given back to them.

Bring Back the Bodies.

New York, Nov. 22—The Navy Department has decided to direct Captain Sigsbee, commanding the Texas to proceed to Havana and bring back the bodies of the sailors of the Maine for burial in this country, says The Herald's Washington correspondent. There is some talk of bringing them back in time for interment to occur on February 15, the anniversary of the destruction of the Maine. A suggestion has been received at the department that the wreck be incased in a dome-like structure, over which the American flag shall always fly.

PETERBOROUGH, NOVEMBER 16, 1899

THE CAPTURED SPY.

The case of Nathan Marks, the Boer spy who has fallen into English hands at Ladysmith, may become one of decided interest. His release has been demanded by the Boer Government under a threat to execute six British officers if the demand was not complied with. They claim that he was in Natal as a criminal detective, and therefore not amenable to the regulation of war. But he came into the British headquarters under the strongest suspicion of a desire to obtain information for the Boers. The British commandant replies that the Boer Government should have recalled its detectives from Natal on the declaration of war. The prisoner will not be released, and if the horrible and brutal threat of the Boers is carried out, there will be reprisals which may bring every member oft be Boer Government to the gallows. The question has a bearing of great importance inasmuch as it emphasizes the fact that up to this point the independence and sovereignty of the Transvaal Republic have not been acknowledged by any foreign Government. The suzerainty of Great Britain respecting the foreign relations of the Transvaal is implied in the attitude of other Governments towards the belligerents. This, of course, is of great advantage to the British in various ways. If the Boers were acknowledged as full-panoplied belligerents instead of subjects of a power which has revolted against its suzerain, England would be denied the right of purchasing materials and supplies for use in the war, or conveying such materials and supplies through Delagoa Bay, which is Portuguese territory. She would then be obliged to recognize the neutrality of other powers and abstain from any acts on their territory which pertained to the prosecution of the war against the Transvaal. At present foreign powers diplomatically and officially do not recognize the independence and belligerency of the Transvaal, and whatever clemency of treatment Great Britain may accord to the Boers captured in arms against will come to them not under international law, but as an act of grace on the part of the British commanders and Government. It is held by some writers that foreigners fighting with the Boers captured with arms in their hands by the British will not be entitled to treatment, and will not be treated as prisoners of war. Sir Redver Buller, the British commander, has the reputation of being a very severe and arbitrary man in administering military law and discipline. It is understood that he would not hesitate to order a captured spy or any other person who, under military law, had committed a capital offence, to be shot off hand.

HOW TO SECURE HONEST VOTING.

Good registration laws and the Australian ballot system accomplish all that legislation can do towards honest voting. With faithful officials and a healthy public sentiment, fair registration and a secret ballot give assurance that the votes will be honestly cast. But one thing more is needed to insure absolute security against frauds in elections. It is not enough that dishonest voting is prevented and honest voting made easy, not enough that bribery and intimidation are rendered impotent, not enough that the ballots as they lie uncounted in the boxes honestly represent the will of the sovereigns.

What is needed is a guarantee of honest counting, and that desideratum is available in the shape of a voting machine. It was tested last year in Rochester, with complete success. It was tested in the city of Buffalo on Tuesday last. A full vote was polled, of which an indisputable record was made as the voting progressed, and the result was announced in all parts of the city within an hour after the polls had been closed. Equally satisfactory tests have been made in other places. The machine accomplishes its object. Added to correct registration and secret ballot, it will complete the one great political reform of the century.

MENACED MAFEKING.

The Fort and British Camp, With Facts About Armored Trains

The armored train has already become a prominent feature of the Transvaal war. So far as can be gathered from the despatches there are already three fully equipped armored trains in South Africa, or rather, there were three prior to the destruction by the Boers of the one at Mafeking.

Armored trains are hastily constructed affairs, consisting of a locomotive and a few wagons, the engine generally being located about the middle of the train.

The wagons and locomotive are covered by boiler-plating three-quarters of an inch thick, as firmly riveted as time will allow. One of these trains was constructed at Mafeking, where there were several railway shops, the town being on the new main line from the cape to Bulawayo.

The locomotive is the only part of the train that does not carry guns, the steel casing being solely to protect the mechanism of the engine from the shot of the enemy. The remainder of the armor, however, is thickly perforated with port-holes through which guns of varying calibre peep, the Maxim, Nordenfeldt and Gatling being the most serviceable weapons for this kind of work. The smaller holes are for the rifles of the marksmen, and usually the deadliest shots in the regiment are, when possible, selected for the position. It takes an expert marksman to shoot with satisfactory results from a quickly moving train. Usually an armored train is also supplied with a powerful search-light, in view of a possible night attack.

Of course, the boiler tubing can offer no resistance to artillery. In fact, rifle shots fired at short range will sometimes penetrate the plates, and to meet such a possibility sand bags are often provided, as was the case in the Egyptian campaign, when the sidar found the armored train of great service.

The man in command of an armored train thinks first, when an emergency arises, of his engine. So long as that remains in workable condition the odds are on his side; but once the vital parts of the locomotive are damaged, the outlook becomes serious, for, of course, an armored train can only carry a very small body of men, who would be quickly surrounded by the enemy, who might number hundreds or thousands. The chances are that an armored train could not be damaged to such an extent unless artillery was used, or some powerful explosive, such as dynamite.

Mafeking is now quite a thriving little town, with churches, a market-place, hotels, cricket ground, and—sure sign of prosperity in South Africa—a racecourse. Within a short distance of the town is a place of historic interest—the starting point of the Jameson raid.

The inhabitants of the town will in all probability seek refuge within the fort before the commencement of an engagement, and Colonel Baden-Powel and his gallant little band may fall back in order to protect the fort from the Boer attack.

Colonel Baden-Powell's new camp is east of Mafeking, between that town and the Transvaal border. Here the tents of the soldiers stretch in white, unbroken lines, and form a conspicuous feature of the bare expanse of veldt on which the town stands.

A DAY WITH THE QUEEN.

How Victoria Passes Her Time From Morning Until Midnight.

Queen Victoria's day does not begin quite so early as it once did. She has a light breakfast brought to her apartment before she rises, and in the summer time her actual breakfast is more of a nature of a continental dinner.

After breakfast Princess Beatrice reads aloud portions of the Times which she thinks may interest her mother. Then comes the consideration of various dispatches and letters which have arrived from London and from relations in different parts of the world.

Breakfast served usually in the oak room, after which the secretary brings to her notice any papers requiring her attention. She glances over these and expresses her wishes thereon, when he removes basket after basket of documents for formal answers. The Queen can then give her attention to her private correspondence, which is enormous. Afterwards she goes out for a morning drive. A luncheon is served at 1.30 and this is her majesty's chief meal of the day.

After her luncheon her majesty has a period of rest, and perfect quiet is kept in the neighborhood of her apartments. For about an hour all is silent then follows a drive, which lasts about two hours. Upon returning home, after another period of rest, the daily dinner party takes place—a quiet, but stately function, at which only a low murmur of conversation is heard. Few of the guests have anything like a conversation with the Queen, and then only in response to direct questions from her.

After the Queen leaves the dining-room, the guests all follow, to reassemble in the drawing room, where her majesty is seated on a raised chair. Every one else stands. Sometimes there is a little good music. If her majesty desires to converse with any guests she gives the hint to one of the princesses and the favored individual advances to the dias. Shortly after 11 o'clock the Queen retires, when the princesses and others sink into seats for a short time, before they, too, seek their own apartments. Such is a fair sample of the day of Queen Victoria.

FACTS ABOUT METEORS.

A Fragment of a Comet's Tail—The Intense Cold of Space Felt by Man.

The atmosphere forms an armor which is almost impenetrable to the meteors that are constantly pelting the earth. Most of the meteors are small. They come rushing through space, strike the atmosphere, and the friction against the molecules of air heats them to a white heat, and sets them ablaze. Sometimes part of one may reach the earth; but as a rule they are consumed and the dust alone, cosmic dust drops upon the surface. One of the earliest known meteors fell in 204 B. C. n Phryga where for a long time it was worshipped. It was carried to Rome and was supposed to be a messenger from the gods. Livy describes a shower of meteoric stones. The people were greatly alarmed and the senators were demoralised and declared a nine days' festival to propitiate the gods. There is at Mecca a meteorite which fell in 600 A. D. and is still worshipped by the faithful. In Chinese literature there is mention of meteors which fell in 644 B. C. The oldest known meteorite which was seen to fall is now on Exhibition at Ensisheim, Alsace, Germany. In 1492 it came crashing down through the air with a roar that prostrated the peasantry with fright. It buried itself deeply in the earth. It weighed 260 pounds and hangs to-day in the parish church.

The Chupaderos meteorite, which weighed twenty-five tons, fell in Chihuahua, Mexico. The largest meteorite known is the Peary stone which weighs approximately one hundred tons. The stone of Canon Diable weighs at least ten tons and exploded high in air, the pieces being found all over the surrounding country. In Italy several instances are known of loss of life from meteorites. A peasant was sitting in his cabin and was killed by an iron mass that crashed through the roof; the act was regarded as a visitation of divine anger. The city of Milan is perhaps the only one that has been struck by a meteorite. A meteorite of several pounds' weight fell in the heart of that city in the year 1660, on the authority of Paolo Maria Terzayo, and struck a Franciscan monk.

More remarkable are the falls at sea. That a ship should be struck would seem an extraordinary chance, yet a Swedish ship was so struck, the stone killing two of the crew. On Dec. 1, 1896, the ship Walkomming was sailing from New York to Bremen when her officers noticed a brilliant meteor that appeared to be bearing down on the vessel from southeast to northwest. It passed with a loud roar and hissing sound and plunged into the sea ahead of the ship. That it was a meteor of large size was evident, for a few minutes later the ship was struck by a tidal wave. Even more remarkable was the experience of the British ship Cawdor, which reached San Francisco Nov. 29, 1897. During a severe storm, a large and brilliant meteor was observed rushing down upon the ship, and with a roar and filling the air with fumes of sulphur it passed between the masts of the ship and fell into the sea not fifty feet from the rail.

One of the greatest curiosities possessed by man to-day is a supposed fragment of a comet in Mazapil, Mexico. The fragment is believed to be a part of the tail of Biela's comet. In 1846 something happened in space; a wreck occurred; Biela's comet may have collided with another comet; in any case, the comet divided and many living observers remember seeing the two parts gradually separating. Some fatality pursued one part of the comet and it met its fate in infinite space, literally went to pieces and became a wreck upon the shoreless sea of space. Astronomers predicted that if the comet itself did not appear in 1872 its wreckage would become visible as shooting stars, and this prediction was realised apparently as on Nov. 27, 1872, there burst from the heavens a cloud of shooting stars. During the display one piece droped upon the earth, and was secured at Mazapil, Mexico, and was declared to be a part of the great comet.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

Francois Bock, of Providence, R. I., a jeweler; John Trehon, and Stewart George Taylor, of the Cuncarder, Etruria, have been arrested by New York officials on a charge of smuggling pearls. Fifty boxes of pearls were taken from the baggage of Bock, who came over on the steamship. The seizure is valued at $50,000.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how > the mournful crocodile

> With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
> —"2, Henry VI.," 1, 333.
> —"Poet's Lore."

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate, Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to put enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr. Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative, and no one disputed his claim, as it seemed to be the only way of recording his

The Company owns over twelve thousand acres of rich copper land in Texas, opened, tested, developed and NOW BEING OPERATED. Millions of tons of copper bearing clay and marl running from five to ten per cent., and large quantities of ore carrying from fifty to seventy per cent. copper in sight. Cheaply mined and treated, favorable climate, cheap fuel, and ample water. Stated by geologists, chemists, experts and engineers to be one of the greatest and best in the world. Amount of land, quantity and quality of ore, cheapness of mining and treatment, the increasing demand and profit in producing copper considered, the Boston and Texas Copper Company possesses unequalled advantages and affords the best kind of an investment.

This Company can produce copper as cheaply as any in the world.

COPPER MINING IS THE SAFEST AND MOST PROFITABLE OF ALL INDUSTRIES.

Calumet and Hecla ore averages 4 1-2 per cent. copper. It has paid $62,850,000 dividends
Tamarack ore averages 3 per cent. It has paid $5,910,000 in dividends.
Atlantic ore averages 85-100 of 1 per cent. It has paid $780,000 in dividends.
Boston and Montana ore runs 7 per cent. It has paid $10,775,000 in dividends.
Franklin ore averages 1 37-100 per cent. It has paid $1,290,000 in dividends.
The Quincy ore averages 1 8-10 per cent. It has paid $11,070,000.

THE AVERAGE OF BOSTON & TEXAS ORE IS OVER 50 PER CENT., and of copper marls and clays from 5 to 10 per cent. Both the ore, marl and clay are within a few feet of the surface of the ground, so that the expense of mining and hoisting is minimized. A party of New England capitalists who have just returned from an examination of the mines in conjunction with one of the ablest mining engineers in the country, report the property to be one of the largest and best in America, and to contain inexhaustible quantities of rich copper deposits.

It is estimated that the plant now being arranged for will produce $3,000 to $5,000 per day, NET.

Prospectus, engineers' reports, assays and full information will be furnished on application. Remit by check, P. O. order, draft or registered letter to Treasurer.

Limited amount of stock only at $5 per share, full paid and non-assessable, by immediate application.

THE RETIRED BURGLAR.

Circumstances in Which He Left a House Empty-Handed.

"I stopped one night, on the way to the house I was going to," said the retired burglar, "at a little house on the road that I could clean out in a minute, and make whatever I got there just so much clean gain. This house stood close to the road, though this was in a country neighborhood, and it looked sort of unkept; I don't mean slack, or uncared for, but as though there wasn't anybody to keep it up as it ought to be; walks swept, and all that, but things bodily more or less out of repair.

"When I got inside and saw how poor they really were, I must say it made me feel kind o' mean and ashamed to think I'd come in at all; and it didn't take me very long to wake up and come to myself and make up my mind that there wasn't anything there that I wanted, but then I thought I'd go upstairs and take a look around there. This wasn't with a view to carrying anything off; I think it was just the professional instinct that led me to inspect the premises, to look around, you know. I went on up the stairs, anyway—narrow stairs, with just the simplest sort of railing up the side. There was a light coming from somewhere, out onto the stairway, and when I got up high enough to see I could see where it came from through a door partly open in a room at the front of the house.

"When I got up to where I could look through the crack of that door inside the room, I saw in there, sitting in a chair, holding a candle in her hand, a woman, fast asleep. She'd come up from downstairs I don't know when, it might have been two hours before, but not longer, judging by the candle; completely tired out, and she'd set down in this chair for just a minute to rest herself and gone to sleep. Seeing her accounted easy for the looks of the place. Tidy—she must have it so; that was her nature. Lacking repairs—there wasn't any man about to make 'em; now, I remember there wasn't any man's hats or coats, or anything hanging up around downstairs, husband dead maybe, or gone somewhere, or something, anyhow, she was there alone, as far as the work was concerned—there was children, I saw there traps downstairs—and it was a tremendous task for her, more'n she could do, and often stacking up against it all day long and half the night, she'd creep up here finally to go to bed; and set down, to rest herself just a minute, and go right to sleep.

"She was sitting here to-night back in the chair, head dropped forward, and holding the candle on her lap. The candlestick was tipped a little, as she held it loosely, and so the candle leaned a little to one side and the grease had all run down on that side and made a bunch over the rim around the top of the socket, and there was a rat standing with his hind feet on the bottom of the candlestick and his fore feet up against that bunch, eating the tallow.

"Well, say; when I came to see that woman sitting there like that, it was easy for me to make up my mind, if I'd had any doubt about it before, which I hadn't, and I just made noise enough to scare that rat away, and wake her up and then I skipped out.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the graphophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a graphophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. A SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

How it Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

Ten Ships Ashore.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. [illegible]—According to reports brought in to-day, ten ships are ashore in the Straits of Magellan. The steamship Kurdistan reported six and the Heedless reported four. Owing to the heavy weather and the treacherous formation of the coast line, neither vessel dare approach, and the names of the wrecked steamships or fate of the crews could not be learned. The wrecks stretched for several miles. The crews of the wrecked vessels may have been devoured by cannibals. The Kurdistan was disabled in the Straits once, and the crew were obliged to give battle to the man-eaters.

MOVEMENT OF BRITISH THE TROOPS A MYSTERY.

Of the Thirty Thousand Men Landed, Ten Thousand Have Been Forwarded to Relieve White, Where Are the Rest?

TROOPSHIPS CONTINUE TO REACH THE CAPE.

Boer Force to Break Camp and Withdraw From Investment of Ladysmith—Boers Are Driven Back at Estcourt, Where the British Made a Sortie.

London, Nov. 21.—The censorial screw is being adjusted more tightly these days than since the war with the Boers began. It is evident that General Buller is making some move on the border of the Orange Free State which demands for its success the utmost secrecy. This accounts for the almost dearth of news regarding that quarter. During the present month about thirty transports bearing men, guns, horses and munitions of war have landed close upon 30,000 men on the shores of Africa. Ten thousand of these have been forwarded to Durban, and the British public have been informed of the fact, probably to rehabilitate confidence in the ability of General White to hold Natal, by pointing out that large reinforcements were being forwarded to him. But what has become of the remaining troops? Nobody knows. The veldt and the karoo of Cape Colony have swallowed these 20,000 men so completely as to suggest that the censorship must be an extremely rigid one.

Reasoning by interference, however, it is probable that the bulk of these troops are stationed along the border of the Orange Free State at certain strategic points, such as Queenstown, Naauwpoort Junction, De Aar Junction and Orange River, and that they are effectually performing the task of holding back the Boers from the interior of Cape Colony, at the same time making preparations for the great raid over the Orange River which General Buller will make sooner or later.

But what is Lord Methuen doing at the Orange River bridge? It is stated that he has with him about 10,000 men, or the whole of an army division, but nobody seems to have any idea as to his intentions. So closely guarded is news of movements that it may even be that his division is now on the march. There are two theories regarding the plan to be followed by General Buller. One is that Methuen's division will make a forced march to the relief of Kimberley, and another that he will make a dash over the border and appear at Bloemfontein, the capital of the Orange Free State, and surprise it before the commandos engaged at Kimberley, Mafeking and other places along the border can assemble for the defence of their capital. This would be a splendid stroke for inspiring confidence in the hesitating Cape Dutchmen and would be a blow at the morale of the Boer forces, striking misgivings into the minds of the Free State burghers. If the garrisons of Kimberley and Mafeking are strong enough to hold out while this move is being accomplished, of which General Buller is doubtless aware, there is every reason to think that this course will be followed. After all it would be a good means of relieving both the beleaguered towns, seeing that the Boers would be compelled to fall back from them to protect their capital and rear.

The information that Ladysmith is well provided with ammunition sets at rest all those croakings as to the inability of the naval guns to reply continuously to the Boer artillery, which has been so common of late. As was stated in this despatch yesterday, the move upon Estcourt has relieved the tension at Ladysmith by sharing it with the former place, so that General White's chances are better than ever and those of the Boers approaching low ebb.

MORE BATTLES REPORTED.

London, Nov. 21.—Latest direct news from Ladysmith, dated Thursday, Nov. 16, and Friday, Nov. 17, strangely conflicts with the reiterated reports of "tremendous battle and great British victories" Wednesday and Thursday. Neither of the two messages referred to mention any great engagements or Boer defeats. On the contrary, both distinctly state that beyond a false alarm on Tuesday evening and a little increased shelling Thursday and Friday, causing little damage, everything was perfectly quiet and the garrison was chafing under its enforced inactivity.

Nevertheless the special despatches from Estcourt to-day enlarge on the reported battles and insist that the Boers received a more terrible lesson Wednesday than in any previous fight. According to these circumstantial accounts the Boers determined to attempt to reach the north end of Ladysmith with a large force but were unable to make headway against the well sustained fire of the British riflemen and Maxims. Later a British force worked around the Boer flank, causing the latter to withdraw under a deadly fusilade with exceedingly heavy losses. Large numbers of dead are said to have been counted on the field, many were wounded and a number of prisoners captured. The British losses are reported to have been trival.

Of course reliable despatches corroborative of the above may have been censored or captured with the native runners. But these tales are so flattering to the British that they have a distinct flavor of being belated accounts from Kaffir sources of affairs previously reported.

Plenty of Ammunition.

The despatches from Ladysmith reporting that there is an ample suply of ammunition there have seemingly set at rest a point on which there was much diversity of opinion.

Apparently the British commander at Ladysmith believes General Joubert has gone south, leaving only a force sufficient to prevent the garrison from sallying out, and there is a disposition in some quarters to think General Joubert possibly initiated the story with the object of inducing General White to make a serious attack or relax his precautions so as to permit the Boers to seize ground vital to the defense of the town.

A report from Durban, however, says there are rumors there that the Boers are preparing to break camp and withdraw from the investment of Ladysmith.

But it is said elsewhere that the investing force continues to receive reinforcements and fresh supplies of stores daily.

In view of the publicity allowed by the military authorities to be given to the alleged intention of the British to advance via Belmont to relieve Kimberley, it is said that it may be regarded as probable that an advance from De Aar will really be effected and that the route will not be so well advertised.

RAILWAY WORK IN NATAL.

London, Nov. 21.—A representative of Reuter's Agency called yesterday upon Sir Walter Peace, Agent-General for the Colony of Natal, to inquire what facilities there were at the disposal of the military authorities for the landing of stores and troops in Natal, and for forwarding them to the front, some doubt having been expressed as to Natal's capabilities to deal with the emergency. Sir Walter Peace, in reply, stated that there need be no anxiety on that score, as at the present time there was an average depth of twenty feet at low water in the entrance channel to the inner bay, and many of the transports which arrived from India and elsewhere were enabled to go straight to the wharf and discharge all the troops and stores as easily as they could in a London dock. This condition was likely to continue owing to the great improvements which had been made to the harbor and there was now nearly a mile of wharfage at which vessels could discharge direct from steamer to railway track. Sir Walter proceeded to say that early in August he went to Glasgow, and impressed upon Messrs. Dubs & Co., in view of the threatening aspect of affairs in South Africa, the necessity of their giving precedence to the construction of a number of locomotives which they had on order for the Natal Government over other work. Consequently, he had been enabled to ship one of an enlarged type of locomotive by the mail steamer Norman on September 23. This had already been delivered in Natal, and three others are now being delivered there by the Clan Chisholm. Ten more would be despatched during the next six weeks, and another ten early next year.

GENERAL GALACR'S ADVICE.

Cape Town, Nov. 20.—General Galacre, commanding the British column assembling at Queenstown, Cape Colony, told the troops there to-day that the regulars should watch and learn from the irregulars, who were acquainted with the country and the habits of the Boers. Once the forward movement should be begun there could be no question of stopping it, and he asked all to do their best, adding:

"I will never ask you to do anything I am not willing to do myself."

Reports from the northern portion of the colony are more reassuring, but there is distinct danger of the Dutch actively espousing the cause of the Boers, who now effectually bar three lines of entry into the Free State. Most of the students of the Burghersdorp Theological Seminary joined the invaders after the latter occupied the town.

Proclamations issued at Bloemfontein Tuesday, Nov. 14, declare that the whole of Griqualand West, except Kimberley and Mafeking, are annexed to the Free State. The proclamations are signed by C. H. Wessels, President of the Volksraad.

SOME CATCHING SONGS.

McCARTHY'S WIDOW.

It's just a year ago to-day, I took to me a wife;
And ever since she's proved to be the burden of my life.
She's widow of McCarthy, McCarthy was her name;
And changing it to Riley, who of course she's not to blame.
She speaks about McCarthy and his virtues ev'ry day,
And wishes I'd keep sober, and be like him ev'ry way.
She'd bate him with a broom-stick, ev'ry time the baby cried;
And made him rock the cradle, till from cruelty he died.

Refrain.

She'd lick him, she'd kick him, She'd never let him be!
She'd lash him, she'd smash him, Until he couldn't see.
McCarthy was'nt hearty, Now she's got a different party,
Oh! she might have lick'd McCarthy, but she can't lick me.

It's almost ev'ry evening, he done all the work he could;
He used to wash the dishes, and he'd split the kindling wood;
He'd carry in the coal at night, no labor would he shirk;
And rinse the clothes on wash-days, just before he went to work.
And all the neighbors told me, that outside he'd never roam;
And almost ev'ry evening, he was always found at home.
And if the didn't stir himself, to try and mend his clothes;
The frying pan was often sent, to try and break his nose.
Refrain—She'd lick him, &c.

I'm going down to Brady's now, on purpose to get tight;
And when I do go home again, there's going to be a fight.
I'd smash up all the furniture, before I do get through;
Upset the stove when I go in, is the first thing I will do.
And then there'll be a dif'rence in the two men she will see;
For she will know who is the best, McCarthy, now, or me.
And p'raps she will behave herself, and learn to shut her mouth;
And if she puts me into jail, begar she'll take me out.
Refrain—She'd lick him, &c.

STAND BY THE OLD FLAG.

Hurrah! for the gallant story,
of Britishdeeds of glory,
And the flag that's waving o'er ye,
Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!
Wherever the proud British colours may fly,
Emblazon'd with honor of ev'ry campaign,
The brave sons of Albion still fearlessly cry
"What our fore-fathers gain'd, we will die to maintain!"

If one the march, or bivouac,
In torrid climes or winter snow,
The English, Irish, Welsh or Scotch;
Will sternly face each foreign foe.
Shoulder to shoulder, each danger defying,
Guarding our nation, or gloriously dying;
Then, Hurrah for the Queen, and our leaders of the van,
The rank, file and squadron, who will follow to a man,
Artillery, Guardsman, Lancer, Hussar,
Lineman, Marine, and Jolly Jack Tar;
Here's a health to them all from the front to the rear.
All the world over, boys, give them a cheer.

Hurrah! for the wild charge dashing,
Sabres and lance-heads flashing,
Through ranks of foemen crashing,
Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!
When tyrants invade us, or treaties ignore,
And honour's decree is that Britons must fight;
With a scoff at all danger, we rush to the fore,
And dare any odds, to establish our right!

But when the rage of battle's spent,
And shouts of vict'ry ring around,
A heart which throbs to help the weak,
Will in each comrade's breast be found.
With bottle unslung, all enmity scorning,
Sharing a drink with our foes of the morning.
Then Hurrah for the Queen, and our leaders of the van,
The rank, file and squadron, who will follow to a man,
Artillery, Guardsman, Lancer, Hussar,
Lineman, Marine, and Jolly Jack Tar,
Here's health to them all, from the front to the rear,
All the world over, boys, give them a cheer.

SWEET NANCY.

So old messmate you're ashore
After three long years or more,
And you never knew that I was spliced and mated;
Well then fill your glass up higher,
And draw closer to the fire,
Till as how it came about I have related;
Where's my Nancy? why she's down here shoppin' in the town,
And a sweeter little housewife aint a-breathin',
With her basket an'her curls,
And her teeth like deep sea pearls,
And a smile about her dimple always wreathin'.

Nancy, sweet Nancy!
I can hardly fancy,
Why she took a common fisher chap like me
With her figure trim and smart
And a big and loving heart,
There's no craft in all the world, like pretty Nancy!

There was black-smith Bill and me,
Well he's lately gone to sea,
Both as sweet as sweet could be upon my Nancy;
But as how her heart inclined,
She'd let neither of us find,
Nor which of us was like to take her fancy,
But one dark and stormy night,
When the sea was lashin' white,
And the signal for the life-boat came a flyin',
As I climb into the boat,
Just afore she got afloat,
Why I see sweet Nancy on the beach a cryin'.

Nancy, sweet Nancy!
Was it but my fancy,
That she pipedher eye and shed a tear for me,
Still through all that bitter night,
Though the sea was lashin' white,
Why my heart was beatin' warm, for love o' Nancy.

When we reached the wreck at last,
They were clingingto the mast,
And I saw a face a-board I'd seen a-fore lad;
'Twas my Nancy's brother Jack,
From the Indies comin' back,
But we got 'em safe a board and made the shore lad;
Then up to her cottage white,
From the beach we saw the light,
Off we flew on wongs o' love as is the sayin',
Then as Jack inside did go,
Well I heard my name breath'd low,
And I saw sweet Nancy on her knees a-prayin.'

Nancy, sweet Nancy!
'Twas no more a fancy,
When I heard her prayin' for a chap like me;
Well I clasp'd her to my breast
You may easy guess the rest,
And that's how I came to splice my trim sweet Nancy.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected in Its Oval Surface. Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was travelling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahmin monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface, then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after a few years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

Fact Versus Fiction.

"Talk about the seven sleepers," muttered the angry tragedian; "I'll bet there are 7,000 of them between Albany and [illegible]

Sooner or later every woman must duel with Death. Nature has provided her with a set of extremely sensitive organs upon the condition of which the health of her whole body depends. She must keep these distinctly feminine organs fully protected by the armor of health. That is her best defense against Death at the time that Death comes closest to her—the time when she becomes a mother.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is designed for the one purpose of curing all diseases, or disorders of the feminine system, except cancer. It stops debilitating drains, soothes inflammation, promotes regularity of the monthly function and puts the whole female organism into a state of strong, vigorous health.

Taken during the period of gestation it robs childbirth of its pain and danger.

Over 250,000 grateful women have written of the wonderful help of the "Favorite Prescription." Among others Mrs. Cordelia Henson, of Coalton, Boyd Co., Ky., writes: "In October [illegible] I gave birth to a baby and the treatment I received at the hands of the midwife left me with prolapsus. I had no health to speak of for three years. I had another baby which was the third child. My health began to fail and I then had three miscarriages and found myself completely worn out. I had so many pains and aches my life was a burden to me and also to all the family, for I was nervous and cross and I could not sleep. Had four doctors. They said I had liver, lung and uterine trouble. I was in bed for months and when I did get up, I was a sight to behold. I looked like a corpse walking about. I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and in a few weeks I became a well woman. Before I began the use of Dr. Pierce's medicine I suffered all a woman could suffer at my monthly periods, but now I have no pain. The dark circles around my eyes are gone and I feel better in every way. My cheeks are red and my face is white: before my face was as yellow as saffron."

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

THE CENTRAL EXHIBITION.

The Directors Are Trying to Arrange for the Payment of Claims.

The following circular has been mailed to the creditors and prize winners of the Peterborough Central Exhibition. The circular bears the signatures of the President and Secretary. It is understood that the responses have been very satisfactory so far. Many prize-winners donating their entire prize money to the Society merely accepting a membership ticket for 1900. The circular is as follows:

"At a recent meeting of the Directors of the Peterborough Central Fair, a statement was presented of the affairs of the institution. The Board of Directors regret to have to announce that there is a deficit of nearly $1500.00. This amount is made up of some liabilities carried over from last year and by the falling off in gate receipts this year. The days of the fair were, as you know, wet and unfavorable. The attendance was practically nothing.

"The Directors are anxious to place the affairs of the Institution on a sound footing, and to do so they must have assistance. It is fairly assumed that this assistance must come from the members, and you are approached as one. The indebtedness is a debt of all members at large and not the directors only.

"I am instructed to say to you that the prize money coming to you is $——, and to ask you to consider the circumstances and make such reduction in the amount, which, together with the reduction made by others, will reduce the liabilities to an amount which the Directors can handle, and for which they must be personally responsible. This, of course, provided the liabilities are reduced very materially.

"Quite a number of Prize-Winners have signified their willingness to let their prizes go and retain a member's ticket for 1900

"Please signify on postal card enclosed lowest amount which you will be pleased to accept. All prizes of $1 will be paid by membership ticket for ensuing year

"Not hearing from you inside of five days we will consider that you have presented the amount to the Society.

SIX MONTHS IN THE MERCER.

Mrs. Wm. McMaster Sentenced for Keeping a House of Ill Repute.

Yesterday Mrs William McMaster was sentenced by Police Magistrate Dumble to six months in the Mercer Reformatory for keeping a house of ill fame. The hearing of the case occupied about four hours, and was chiefly as to the reputation of the place. A large number of witnesses were examined. E B Edwards, Q. C., acted for the prosecution, and Mr E B Stone for the defense.

Rugby Football.

Following is a copy of a letter of last Saturday's date, signed by Manager J. C. Morin and Capt. E. McGuire of the Ottawa College Football Club which has been sent to the Secretaries of the Canadian, Quebec and Ontario Unions, and of the Ottawa and Granite clubs,—

"Sir,—We are instructed by the Ottawa College Football Club, Champions of the Quebec Rugby Union to inform you that our team will hold will hold itself in readiness to meet the champions of the Ontario Rugby Union for the Canadian championship on next Saturday, November 25, on the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association grounds, as already decided by the Canadian Rugby Union. Unless the game is arranged for November 25, the Ottawa College team will not play at a later date, but will at once go out of training. This decision is not open to discussion. It is final.

As the schedule of the Ontario Union has resulted in a tie between Ottawa and the Granites, for first place, the Ontario championship is still unsettled and a deciding match has been ordered between these teams to be played in Toronto on November 25, the date named for the Canadian championship Unless some change is made in this arrangement, it is evident that there will be no match this year for the Canadian championship.

Honorably Acquitted.

Henry Truesdale appeared before His Honor Judge Weller on Tuesday on the charge of stealing old iron from his employer, George Stevens, at the red mills. The evidence showed that Truesdale had taken iron but that it was attached to wood to which Truesdale was entitled and that he had given instructions that when the wood was broken up the iron was to be laid aside for Stevens. The accused gave evidence in his own behalf and was acquitted. County Crown Attorney Wood prosecuted, and W A Stratton acted for the defence.

The Whitcher Dramatic Company.

At Bradburn's Opera House last night a fair audience greeted Whitcher Dramatic Co. in the comedydrama "Shadows of a great City." The performance was rendered in the very excellint manner which has characterized the previous productions by this company. The specialties were all clear and well put on; as usual Petite Gracie Whitcher the dashing young subrette was the favorite. To-night they will present the comedy drama entitled The Little Ferrett.

A citizen, whom we will call Mr. Snowden for short, had an Hibernian working for him not long since. One day Mr. S., wishing to have some fun with Pat, asked him if he was good at measurement. "I am that," said Pat. "Then can you tell me how many shirts I could get out of a yard?" asked the inquisitor. "Well," said Pat, that depends upon whose yard you get into." The cigars were set up at once.

Jumped From the Train.

While the express from Belleville was on its way up yesterday morning a peculiar accident occurred. The water guage of the locomotive burst with a loud report and the cab at once filled with steam. In the confusion the fireman Joe Sullivan an Ennismore man, thinking that a serious accident had occured jumped from the cab to the ground with the train running at full speed. Fortunately he escaped with comparatively slight injuries. His head and one ear were badly cut and one leg was also injured. His injuries were dressed at St. Joseph's hospital.

Mrs McMasters' Case.

Mrs William McMaster, who was sentenced to serve six months in the Mercer Reformatory may escape the penalty imposed. Her solicitor will enter an appeal, provided sufficient funds can be forthcoming for the purpose. In such an event the woman will be admitted to bail, and her trial will take place before Judge Weller, at the County Court. which opens on December 21.

The German
Emperor
USES
Grape-Nuts

KAISER WILHELM FURNISHED WITH AMERICAN FOOD.

Upon intructions of a German physician, a case of Grape-Nuts Food was lately sent by express to the German Emperor, Kaiser Wilhelm, at Berlin. This food has come into recognition by physicians as perhaps the most perfect form of nourishment in use.

The field grains, barley and wheat, are blended in proper portions, ground and passed through some ten or twelve different operations, during which the starch of the grains is turned into grape sugar.

The food is in shape of small granules, perhaps twice the size of a pin head. These are britle and covered with glistening crystals of grape sugar which has been produced by the processes and form out on the surface of each small granule very much as the sugar settles and crystallizes on the end of a hickory or maple log, under certain conditions.

This product has a delicate sweet taste, not the strong sweet of cane or beet sugar, and it is the most easily digested food known, particularly applicable to digestion in the intestinal tract where so much trouble is nowadays shown from the excessive use of starchy foods.

Most so-called health foods are inclined to be flat and disagreeable to the taste, to be used under a sense of duty. Grape-Nuts, on the contrary, is not only the highest form of health food, but is palatable and delicious. It is thoroughly cooked before leaving the factory and can be served instanter, either cold with a little rich cream or made into a hot dish by pouring some hot milk or cream over it. Grape-Nuts are also used for dainty deserts, treated with gelatine or fruit juices.

All first class grocers sell Grape-Nuts. Made at Postum Cereal Co's. factories in Battle Creek, Mich.
